Charles Garrett has been appointed manager of foreign exchange operations for Monogram. Mr. Garrett was formerly associated with RKO and Gaumont-British. He is now actively engaged in supervising the internal operation of all foreign exchanges which are being operated on a franchise basis by the company.

J. H. "Jack" Gruben has joined Monogram's Dallas exchange, and will be assigned the east Texas zone, with headquarters in Houston. Mr. Gruben began his career in the film industry in 1915 with the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay organization. Later he was associated with Fox, and since 1920 has been with RKO in Dallas.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Productions

Of 15 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week 11 were approved for general patronage, three were found unobjectionable for adults and one was called objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Blondie Meets the Boss," "Flying Irishman," "The Jones Family in Hollywood," "Lone Star Pioneers," "Med Folket Foer Fosterlandet" (Swedish), "The Mikado," "The Mystery of Mr. Wong," "The Renegade Trail," "Songs and Saddles," "Trigger Smith," "Winner Take All." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Love Affair," "Mystery of the White Room," "Risky Business." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Within the Law."

"Gulliver" License Department

Paramount has formed a new license department under the supervision of Harry Royster in connection with the Max Fleischer feature cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels." This department will arrange merchandising tie-ups with novelty and toy manufacturers for the use of "Gulliver" character items which will be sold in leading department stores.

Film Industry in India to Mark 25th Anniversary

The Indian film industry will hold a Motion Picture Congress in Bombay April 8-12 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the industry in India. The congress is being sponsored by all the film societies there, namely, the Motion Picture Society of India, Indian Motion Picture Producers Association, Indian Motion Picture Distributors Association, Association of Cine Technicians, Amateur Cine Society of India and the Visual Education Society.

In addition to marking the silver jubilee of the Indian film industry the chief aims of the Congress will be to secure recognition for the industry from the government, the securing of financial aid (Indian banks do not advance money to the industry), the study of the educational film field and the establishment of a central organization which can speak with authority on behalf of the industry.

Chandulal J. Shah, of Ranjit Movietone, is chairman of the executive committee of the Congress. Y. A. Fazalbhoy of Fazalbhoy Limited and K. S. Hirleker of Agfa Photo Company, are secretaries. S. Satyamurthy, member of the Central Legislative Assembly of India, will preside over the Congress.

The first Indian-made picture was produced in 1913. The production of films soon became an important activity in the three greatest cities in India, Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. It has progressed to such an extent that today it occupies the eighth place among the major industries of the country. There are in India now nearly 1,500 exhibitors and 75 producing companies with a total investment of £13 millions sterling ($60,840,000).

Dallas Club Tourney Saturday

The annual golf tournament and party of the Variety Club of Dallas will be held Saturday and Sunday. Bob O'Donnell, chief barker, has made plans to entertain the largest number of theatremen ever to gather for the affair.

A. E. Meyer on Tour

A. E. Meyer, general sales manager for International Projector Corporation, is visiting the branches of the National Theatre Supply Company through the south and southwest. He will return to New York in about two weeks.

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library will join the Museum of Modern Art in moving to its new building on New York's West 53rd Street, from 485 Madison Avenue. The five-story modernistic structure will be open to the public on May 10th, and from then until October 1st, films will join painting, sculpture and architecture in an exhibition planned for World's Fair visitors.

The films to be shown for the 10th annual "movie party" sponsored by Duncan MacD. Little, amateur cinematographer, and Mrs. Little, which will be held April 14th in New York, were to be selected this week by a jury.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Fair comedy that did not draw. The poorest business in many months, which proves again that in my town you must have stars to get them in. The few who came seemed to enjoy the picture but not enough came to pay expenses.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—This series will do us some good. They're asking for the next one. Played February 3-4.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

CRIME TAKES A HOLIDAY: Jack Holt, Douglas Dumbrille, Marcia Ralston—Good picture. Fair draw. Played February 7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LONE WOLF'S SPY HUNT, THE: Warren William, Ida Lupino, Virginia Weidler—A very passable little thriller. Virgina Weidler does some fine work. Played February 24-25.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

MY SON IS A CRIMINAL: Alan Baxter, Jacqueline Wells—Entertaining little picture. Pleased generally. —W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SMASHING THE SPY RING: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—This one didn't seem to please as it might, yet I've played a lot worse. Trouble here was that they didn't seem to get what they were expecting. I have always felt that Columbia put out as consistently passable program pictures for my patronage as one could expect and they have always been fair in any adjustments. Of course, I never called "Blonde Captive" and "The Captain Hates the Sea" pictures.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. General patronage. Rural and small town patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Margaret Lindsay—A good picture, plenty of laughs and plenty of good clean fun but don't depend on it if you are behind on the rent because it won't do enough business to help you catch up. It seems that Virginia Bruce just can't fill Joan Blondell's shoes at the box office. However, you need not be afraid to face your customers as they come out for the ones that see it will be pleased.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING WEST, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Hopalong Cassidy had better look to his laurels since Starrett has come into the limelight. This boy has something with his acting and with the Sons of the Pioneers for music we have a good picture and thus "The Thundering West" is excellent. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—Another rattling good picture from the company that has the good ones. The only fault with the picture that I found was it had a little too much gangster stuff in it. It seems as if all the companies use too much gangster material to make pictures. Why not lay off for a while? Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids."—One of the best bets for small towns. Did extra business. Well received. Why don't we get more of this type?—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, Claude Rains, May Robson—As entertainment they don't come any better. For the exhibitor, headache. Just prestige but you can't eat with these pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—A screwy comedy that seemed to please but do not think it is as good as "Hard to Get."—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Henry Hull—Don't come any better. A-1 all the way. Tracy and Mickey Rooney really go to town. A truly great picture. Played February 19-21.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell—This is undoubtedly a good picture but not a "natural." I think about 80 per cent of adults will be quite satisfied with it. As a physician, I would say that some of the medical sequences are a bit "fishy," but the general audience would not be apt to detect this. We did a nice business on it in adverse weather but most of it was on the first night. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—See report on "The Girl Downstairs."—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor, Alan Marshal—We were afraid this picture might be too depressing but were overjoyed at the box office on a weekend date. It is well acted and a good story. Our patrons came out well pleased. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Kent Taylor, Ann Rutherford, Alan Marshal —Grand B product. Liked by all. Please anywhere. Stand alone in small spots; strong half in the big town. Running time, 69 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—Again Leo flops on us. Very weak program offering that will get by on a double bill.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—I had business in the operating room when this one was over. Played it on Saturday following "Flirting with Fate" and wondered, after these two, as to whether my customers were going to stick by me. Leave these two out and you will do better by doing so. Excuse me, Mr. Lion, but I just had to get this off my chest. —B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Milizia Korjus—A very melodious and interesting picture that barely grossed average. Played February 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Gracie Allen, George Burns—Our box office had no appeal on this one. We did poor business. Those who saw it were pleased. It is above average entertainment. Maybe Eleanor Powell in a grass skirt kept them far away. A few people remarked about it. As for me, I enjoyed it. Plenty of good music and comeedy. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Gracie Allen, George Burns—After "The Great Waltz," "Dramatic School" and "Idiot's Delight," it is a relief to play such a show as "Honolulu." The finest musical we have played in several seasons. No need for expoitation, as mouth-to-mouth advertising will do the most good. A great picture from a great company. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Played this against "Kentucky" and the two proved the best entertainment in a long time. Both drew well against the weather conditions. "Honolulu" is a fast moving comedy and Powell's dancing excellent. Young in his double role did excellent work.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut —We might as well get this off our chests. This was the most unanimously disliked picture that we have ever run. I did not hear one good word for it from anyone. Even the Gable and Shearer fans turned thumbs down on it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut—This is positively the biggest disappointment we have had in many months. Sunday business off about 40 per cent, and on Monday night we played to 32 patrons in all. Pleased about 10 per cent; the other 90 per cent stopped and told me how terrible they thought it was. It may have been a wow in the cities but it is no good for small towns. "Idiot's Delight" was when somebody gave this a four star rating. At least 30 minutes of Norma Shearer's conversation could have been eliminated. Not a thrill, not a laugh, not a tear, just talk from beginning to end. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 5-7.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

LISTEN DARLING: Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland, Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon—A pleasing little picture to fair business. We were a little late in playing this one but it was much more gratifying than I expected it to be. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 3-4.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—This one came just in time to save Leo's face with our patrons. Very fine family picture that drew well and pleased. Some said better than "Love Finds Andy Hardy," but, personally, did not think so. Good entertainment, however, that will satisfy most everyone.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—A good picture. Will satisfy most audiences. Maureen O'Sullivan helps put show over. This girl is good. Of course, Beery is always good and draws. Metro didn't "fall down" on this one. Played March 9-11.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—This one has been called a small-town picture, which seems to mean that it is a picture with an old-fashioned, homely story told in such a way that even a "Rube" out in the sticks can understand it. We find about one picture in ten that we run to be such that, after seeing it two or three times, I haven't the vaguest idea what most of it is about. It may be that these are big-town pictures and that I could understand them had I been born and reared around 42d street instead of 100 miles north of that locality. If so, ain't nature wonderful? In any event, "Stablemates" is swell entertainment and I believe the work of both stars will assay 100 per cent good in any critic's laboratory. And, more to the point, we did a near-capacity business with it in sub-zero weather. Much of the story is almost too fantastic but we did a satisfactory business and everybody liked it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 11-12.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—Tip top entertainment. But this one grossed very poorly. Too bad. Played February 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—This picture has plenty of "B.O." We played it preview Friday night and Saturday to good crowds. It will do well on a weekend. Plenty of guns and two-fisted action on a deluxe scale. Sort of western action a la mode. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 25.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer, Herman Bing—Beautiful color, excellent music, very light story and a complete flop at the box office. Played March 5.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer, Herman Bing—The lion failed to roar on this one. All I can say for it is that it is very beautiful. Story very weak and many dull moments. Too much Auer and Bing and useless family quibbling. Did not please and some said the worst they had ever seen "riding or walking."—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Franchot Tone, Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery—Nice little picture that seemed to please most everyone. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 18-19.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone—Pretty good. Fair box office. Played February 17-18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly—Pretty jumpy and crazy but pretty fair entertainment on the whole. Business just fair. Played February 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Connolly, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo—Plenty of action in this picture to keep them on the edge of their seats from beginning to end. Failed to make expenses on this picture but no fault of the show. Running time, 104 minutes. Played March 4-6.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

AMBUSH: Gladys Swarthout, Lloyd Nolan—Every time they run out of an idea they produce a gangster picture. This makes four this month and some 22 this season. If that is not an overabundance, I want to know. After a while there will be no more stars to kill off, and what they will do then for ideas, I give up. Certain I and the public have had a bellyful this year.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—This vehicle was not up to 1939 model. The gears didn't mesh and it jumped into reverse. Benny and Bennett could not make the grade with it.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—Fair. Quite impossible situations but pretty good comedy and a nice style show.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Joan Bennett, Jack Benny, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—We should have tossed this into the nearest dump. It is very weak entertainment and not so much that what they do is bad but only there's nothing for any of the cast to do. The style show was very tiresome. Played February 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Jack Whiting, Betty Grable—Martha has gone sour on us here. She was no good for us. Did not make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—I just wonder when Paramount gets enough making this type of picture. They are just no good in a small town. Running time, 105 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—OK for this type but a total loss in my town. Paramount just can't seem to make pictures that the public wants, except the westerns, and they have all been extra good. I hate to have to pay for 50 pictures that all take a loss to get 10 westerns.—L. R. Greason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

ILLEGAL TRAFFIC: J. Carroll Naish, Mary Carlisle—Okay action fare. No business, however. Played February 14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine—I played this late and business was only fair. It seemed to please. Played March 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine—A good picture that pleased almost 100 per cent. However, you had better give this picture everything possible and get them all in on the first night, for your customers will be looking for something that is not in the picture. It seems that the historical value brought out in the picture did not blend very well with the plot. Play it, though, and don't expect too much and you will be well pleased.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

ONE-THIRD OF A NATION: Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson—Sylvia Sidney's suffering in this picture was almost as bad as mine. Poor picture; no business. Played March 7-8.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE-THIRD OF A NATION: Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson—Just a lot of wasted film. No one liked it. You will be better off if you leave it in the exchange.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—A very good picture and the first Crosby we ever played that had any draw.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Our patrons enjoy Bing Crosby but this picture is not up to par. The songs are not up to standard and the comedy is slapstick in spots. However, it pleased generally. Fair business. Franciska Gaal is tops. More power to her. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Olympe Bradna, Ray Milland—Very nice little picture. Olympe has something, I think.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes—Gene Autry better look to his laurels with Hopalong Cassidy on the loose. This picture is bigger and better than all the others. Good patronage and a good picture. These Saturday people ate it up. Good for a Saturday date in any small town. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 11.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Here is a honey of a picture that small town people will eat up and swallow. Plenty of laughs and music. We did above average business two nights midweek. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 21-22.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Very good musical show which pleased extra business. Played March 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Very, very ordinary B product. Got by. Very little entertainment for my patrons. No one said they liked it. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Got by nicely. Heard no complaints.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

SUNSET TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Good western which pleased. Played March 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—Played it on Sunday in a snowstorm to good business. The rural folks like Smiley Burnette.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DOWN IN "ARKANSAW": Ralph Byrd, Pinky Tomlin, Elviry and Weaver Brothers—Our audience liked this very much. An ideal small town picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Very good western. Republic seems to have the right idea about putting different entertainers in these westerns. Joe Frisco seen in an Autry prior to this one was very, very good. Republic, how about letting Lew Childre sing a song in one of these Autrys?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

AIR EXPRESS

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Good western picture with nice music. This Roy Rogers can really sing, and Lulu Belle and Scotty added to the enjoyment.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Very fine entertainment. Everybody happy. Exhibitor even had a few coins left on this one. Nice business in spite of rain and freezing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNABEL TAKES A TOUR: Lucille Ball, Jack Oakie, Ruth Donnelly—Just as bad as the first of this series and that is not very good.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

CAREFREE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Ralph Bellamy, Louella Gear—A gay fast moving musical with lots of laughs. It sure tickled our boys. Perhaps it was the psychologist-psychiatrist angle which appealed to the men. They've had plenty of it! Their dancing still superb, Fred and Ginger are a good pair and set a fast pace throughout the entire production. Though a bit light on the story side, the picture contains much in the way of entertainment. Ralph Bellamy and Louella Gear add their abilities to enhance this delightful, winsome film. For those who enjoy a lot of fun combined with excellent dancing and good music, this picture is just right for them. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 11.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Victor McLaglen, Joan Fontaine—Here's one that needs no reports. As you all know about it by this time, suffice to say it's big and will click in any spot, large or small. I myself don't care for these kind, but the public does, so you should worry. Running time, 135 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GUN LAW: George O'Brien, Rita Oehmen—Very good western. George O'Brien liked here. More story to "Gun Law" than most westerns and plenty of action. Played February 22-25.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

LAW WEST OF TOMBSTONE, THE: Harry Carey, Jean Rouverol, Tim Holt, Evelyn Brent—Only a fair picture. Not enough action. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN TO REMEMBER, A: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Lee Bowman—A splendid story well screened. Whereas it is weak on draw strength, it is so good on entertainment value it will pay you to play it as you are certain to satisfy. Played February 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers—Very far fetched. Some laughs, however. It is miraculous that Jane can stay where she is with the pictures they put her in.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—Fine Jones family picture.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—A small town natural. Did more business on family night than any Fox special since "In Old Chicago." Fox seems to be slipping this year. Only one good picture for several months.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—A natural for the country folks. These are what we need in these trying times to make people forget troubles for a time. Eddie Collins is 50 per cent of the show. Hope to see more of him. Played February 17-18.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Slim Summerville—We enjoyed nice midweek business. No regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott—I did not gross what I should. A lot that came were seeing it for the second and third time. It's a winner and I only wish I could have had it as first booked. Played March 10-11.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Here is a sweet picture that pleased all. Pictures of this kind are a credit to the producer.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—Thanks, Mr. Fox, you are certainly keeping the wolf away from our doors this year. Here's hoping you get foxier and foxier as time goes on. A beautiful, a wonderful picture with everything it takes to get them into your show and to make them smile and ask for more like it as they come out. Your Twentieth Century Limited has certainly gone places this year and I for one am glad I am on board.—B. F. Jackson, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Miss. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Our idea of a perfect picture. Mr. Greene is going places. Fog and ice were against us and as 90 per cent of patrons are from out of town the take was small. Think it would pay to bring it back later. Played March 3-4.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field—Just another program picture which failed to draw. Played March 7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—Excellent. Good box office. Played February 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—No excuse whatever for this type picture. It's plain poison for small towns. We are told experience is the best teacher but evidently the producers never heard of it. Why do they do it?—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Nancy Kelly, Constance Bennett, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—With two exceptions my patrons praised the picture highly. Something different, exciting and very interesting. Nancy Kelly very good and I predict a great career for this fine young actress.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Preston Foster, Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Arthur Treacher—An amusing burlesque on prison life. Not perhaps the equal of the original but okay just the same. Fair box office. Played February 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Preston Foster, Phyllis Brooks, Tony Martin, Arthur Treacher—Good entertainment for the folks who brave this weather. Played February 13-14.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS: Michael Whalen, Jean Rogers—And so did the audience, but they had a restless sleep.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Did all one could expect considering weather and business conditions. We hear that they are going to turn Maine back to the Indians. Haven't seen a ten spot for so long we have forgotten whose picture is on it. Played February 10-11.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine. Rural and small town patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Just a lot of athletic stuff that you see every day in the newsreels. Many walkouts on this one. Very weak.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: James Stewart, Carole Lombard, Lucille Watson, Charles Coburn—The best thing U.A. has had this year. Really a good picture that is different from mill run. Did average business but pleased 100%. U.A. pictures that just don't click in small towns, and why? They are all good pictures but can't get people to come in on them.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—Very good comedy but didn't do much at the box office. Played March 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

FRESHMAN YEAR: Dixie Dunbar, Ernest Truex, William Lundigan, Constance Moore—Good program picture. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick, William Frawley—Best Deanna Durbin by far and that's saying quite a bit. Play this one, though old. It still will do business. One swell show. This Deanna Durbin is a "top" star. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 5-7.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

YOUTH TAKES A FLING: Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds—Very poor. One of those pictures where the audience laugh at the wrong time.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp—Very good but they certainly used a lot of shots of the first "Dawn Patrol."—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Very fine picture that pleased all. What more can we say?—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Good comedy; better than many big specials. Dick Powell is not the drawing card he used to be. This did quite well considering the impassable roads. Running time, 82 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—An excellent comedy. We had a poor print as we played the picture late and much had been cut but it was a swell little comedy. Powell is good and de Havilland was never better. Running time, 79 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter—Majority of adults were pleased but not the high school students and younger generation. Flynn miscast.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter—A splendid picture. Too bad it failed to draw better crowds as they sure would have enjoyed it. Played January 29-30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FIVE NEW REPORTERS FROM FIVE STATES

From situations as far separated as Oklahoma and Maine come five additional contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week. They are:

MRS. W. A. WIGHT, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Oklahoma
B. F. JACKSON, Delta Theatre, Ruleville, Mississippi
B. C. BROWN, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wisconsin
MARY HAYES DAVIS, Venice, Clewiston and LaBelle Theatres, Venice, Florida
SAM KIMBALL, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Maine

The three last-named have been earlier contributors to the department, but none of them within the past year.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—A swell picture that will stand up under exploitation. Lots of action and authentic scenery. John Payne is good. Business only fair but the picture is OK. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konowa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Unusual box office response and tenacity. Seemed to advertise itself. Second day last show much larger than usual attendance. Thrilling story. No miscasts. Scenes of breath taking beauty. Informative. Patriotic without being pedantic. And were we gratified to Warners for a fair price? Yea, verily. Just ending a dull tourist season in our villages. 25% less tourists spending 50% less money than usual. Northerns must be economizing. Grateful, too, to Warners for not holding us villagers back until Mr. Sparks had played this film in all his 100 Florida theatres first, second and sometimes third runs. This practice is killing off our village theatres. And "believe it or not, Mr. Ripley," the small town theatres of America are necessary to keep our backwoods communities "theatre conscious." If the big chains kill us off, the entire movie industry will be affected eventually. We are feeders, not enemies to the big theatres. But we cannot exist if forced to play old releases with all the cream skimmed off. We should be allowed to play within ten days after the chains.—Mary Hayes Davis, Venice, Clewiston and La Belle Theatres, Venice, Fla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AUTO CLINIC: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DEMONS OF THE DEEP: Special Sport Thrills—A good subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOT DOGS ON ICE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Very good. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

KRAZY'S TRAVEL SQUAWKS: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Just so-so.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

MANY SAPPY RETURNS: Charley Chase—Columbia does it again, giving our weekend customers a real laugh.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NIGHTSHIRT BANDIT: Charley Chase—A dandy two-reel Chase comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT SHIRT BANDIT: Charlie Chase—Very good and especially enjoyed by the kiddies. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PEACEFUL NEIGHBORS: Color Rhapsodies—A dandy colored cartoon and anti-war propaganda showing the battle of the roosters.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PIE A LA MAID: Charley Chase—Poor recording on our print and only fair. Will get by on weekend dates where the audiences are not so critical. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCRAPPY'S PLAYMATES: Scrappy Cartoon—Just ordinary. There are better ones.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

THREE LITTLE SEW AND SEWS: Broadway Comedies—The best of the Stooge comedies to date. House in an uproar.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Educational

CACTUS CABALLEROS: Harry Gribbon—We tried all season to dodge this two-reeler only to get it in a last minute substitution. As we expected, it was poor.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MONTAGUE THE MAGNIFICENT: Bert Lahr.—Really hilariously funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARDON MY ACCIDENT: Two-Reel Comedies—A poor comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WPA

SHOCK TROOPS OF DISASTER: Government Film—Okay but could have been better. Too bad someone didn't make some real scenes during the actual hurricane. There would have been some thrills indeed.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CRIMINAL IS BORN, A: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very proud we were able to show this. A real credit to the industry.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting and entertaining one reeler dealing with swimming and diving.—E. M. Freiburger. Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FOOTBALL ROMEO: Our Gang—Always pleases. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HONDURAS HURRICANE: Captain and the Kids—A good cartoon enjoyed by all. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

HOW TO READ: Robert Benchley—This Benchley humor hit the spot. Everybody seemed to like it immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOW TO WATCH FOOTBALL: Robert Benchley—He don't miss. Running time, nine minutes.—R. A.

LITTLE RANGER, THE: Our Gang—Our Gang de luxe. Very good. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MADEIRA—ISLE OF ROMANCE: Fitz Patrick Travel Talks—Good travel reel in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MADEIRA—ISLE OF ROMANCE: Fitz Patrick Travel Talks—Tops, tops, tops. No one can come up to this producer when travel talks are made. Absolutely perfection. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MADEIRA—ISLAND OF ROMANCE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—O. K. for travel talk. Good color. Running time, eight minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MEN OF STEEL: Musical Comedies—This is not so good. Much ado about nothing. Strong arm men with heavy muscles don't mix with songs! Running time, two reels.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

NEW ROADWAYS: Passing Parade, No. 2—Interesting but why, oh why, doesn't some company make some funny shorts? I can run half a dozen reels of educational shorts and the poor disappointed kiddies will say as they leave "Miss Gladys, ain't there a comedy?" And the grownups miss the comedies, too.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NOSTRADAMUS: Historical Mysteries—Very interesting short telling of the predictions of Nostradamus that have been fulfilled. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Musical Comedies—The poorest one of this series I have run. Not too bad but not good. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Johnny Downs, Dixie Dunbar, Billy Gilbert—Extra good musical short with a splendid plot idea that has developed with pleasing results. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PASSING PARADE, No. 1: Very interesting and entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PENNY'S PICNIC: Prudence Penny—Another of her interesting shorts on cooking and she certainly makes that food look good in color.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PENNY'S PICNIC: Pete Smith Specialties—This is the third Penny we have played and is by far the best. Good any day of the week. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

POWER: This is an entertaining plug for your coming Metro features. We should say it was worthwhile. Provided gratis by Metro.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—An excellent Gang comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—Good comedy—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—A good show. It has my O. K. Although that's not saying too much either for me or the picture. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—Always good for a few laughs, this proved no exception. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ode. Small town and rural patronage.

THINK IT OVER: Crime Doesn't Pay—A dandy. The subject is concerned with the troubles that befall a young couple who marry against the advice of their parents.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TREACHEROUS WATERS: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—Very much disappointed in this subject. The actual happening from which this story was made may have been very thrilling but the telling of it in this short was very tame. We have been disappointed with all of the Gibbons subjects we have used.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE SAFETY: Crime Doesn't Pay—When you play one of this series you have something special and this is no exception. This company has two outstanding series that cannot go wrong Fitz Patrick and "Crime Does Not Pay." The best in the business. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL FAIR'S AT THE FAIR: Color Classics—Quite funny. World's Fair idea, of course.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BULLDOZING THE BULL: Popeye the Sailor—Only fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CIRCUS CO-ED: Paragraphics—An excellent reel showing the training of a circus girl.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

CUSTOMERS WANTED: Popeye the Sailor—A dandy Popeye.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HUNTING THRILLS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—This short certainly does provide thrills. Interesting for all, both young and old. Good photography with unique methods of fishing. Great for any theatre. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Educational Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LIGHTS! ACTION! LUCAS!: Clyde Lucas and His Orchestra—Leave it lay. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

LIGHTS! ACTION! LUCAS! Headliners—Good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Jan Garber and His Orchestra—Good musical short.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Jan Garber and His Orchestra—Don't leave this one in the can. It's good. Running time, 11 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ORRIN TUCKER AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Very good. Everyone enjoyed this. Quite a few sat through this twice. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: No. 42—We booked this News special and advertised it in the schools at the suggestion of the distributors. Certainly we never saw a single reel subject with more interesting and powerful subject matter. Every school child and adult in America should see it.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: No. 56—O. K. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 3—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

QUEENS OF THE AIR: Headliners—Paramount produced a good short in this film. Good music by Vincent Lopez plus nice singing. Featured are five well known songstresses who really "give out." Votes of the boys were heavy for "Hotcha" Hutton as to personality and for Hollace Shaw as to looks and singing. Many of the boys predict a future in motion pictures for her. You can't go wrong with this. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

THAT'S AFRICA: Paragraphics—A dandy reel on the Sahara desert. About as interesting a reel as we ever played. Give it your preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: No. 3—Entertaining—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BIRD DOGS: RKO Pathe Sportscope—A beautiful and intelligent short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CLEAN SWEEP, A: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—A very good comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DONALD'S LUCKY DAY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Always dependable, this one garnered the laughs just as have all the others in the Disney series. Running time, nine months.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

DUDE RANCH: Reelisms—A very excellent and pictorially lovely single reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Just like the book so it was very good.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

JITTERS, THE: Leon Errol Comedies—I can't see why exhibitors raved about this short. It seemed a glorification of drinking which definitely did not please here. Running time, 18 minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

LATIN RHYTHM: Nu-Atlas—Just fair. Warner Brothers seem to have the answers for musicals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

LATIN RHYTHM: Nu-Atlas Productions—These Nu-Atlas productions lack "umph." Only fair entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: One of the finest short subjects on the market. Advertise them.—Hobart H. Gates, Garlock Theatre, Custer, S. D. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 1—We are always proud to show this series. So much so we have the school children to a special free matinee.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 6—The State of the Nation. Timely and well presented. "Time" is always a pleasure to screen and our patrons look forward to each new issue. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MERBABIES: Walt Disney Cartoons—A grand Silly Symphony. Everyone liked it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MERBABIES: Walt Disney Cartoons—A remarkably clever cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE GOES HOLLYWOOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—A hilarious Walt Disney. Here are some of Hollywood's brightest stars lampooned in a most delightful manner. This is one of the best Walt Disney shorts we've ever shown. Bound to amuse all. Running time, eight minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE GOES HOLLYWOOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of Walt Disney's best. Well received. Running time, eight minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

ON THE WING: RKO Pathe Sportscope—A good sport reel on duck hunting. Oddly enough, however, our folks sympathized with the ducks and hissed the hunters in their blind.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

READIN', RITIN' AND RHYTHM: Lucky Millinder and His Orchestra—We booked this short in connection with the personal appearance of Lucky Millinder and his all colored band and revue which will play in person on the stage of the State Theatre here in Torrington on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 7-8. We ran a trailer on the show directly after the picture. It was a natural. Lucky Millinder sure does go to town in this short playing his piece "Ride, Red, Ride." Millinder is jumping all around, up and off the piano and all over the stage. A very good dance team opens the short up. The two girls and three fellows who sang a song were terrible and had my entire audience in an uproar from start to finish. After Millinder plays the short closes with a very good jitterbug scene that really does show the gals and fellas going to town. It gets my patrons' hand at the finish. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ROMANCING ALONG: Phil Harris, Peggy Shannon—This is swell musical two-reel entertainment. One could never ask a better script for a short film, and the music is plenty okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SKYLINE REVUE: Nu-Atlas Productions—The best from RKO yet. A real dandy. A very entertaining short feature. Running time, 11 minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

NAUTICAL KNIGHTS: Mentone Musical Comedies—When better musical vaudeville acts are put together, Universal will do so in these Mentone Musicals. This picture is absolutely tops in entertainment. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SAILOR MOUSE, THE: Lantz Cartunes—A fair little black. These cartoons do not have the appeal that the Popeyes have, but do get by. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLYDE McCOY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A good band act with plenty of jazz in it. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNT ME OUT: Merrie Melodies—A clever little cartoon but not so good as some we have shown. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HATS AND DOGS: Broadway Brevities—Fairly good two-reeler.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—This short is well worth anyone's time. "The Gettysburg Address" lives again. Running time, two reels.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

PORKY IN WACKYLAND: Looney Tunes—Always good here. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PORKY'S NAUGHTY NEPHEW: Looney Tunes—A good black and white cartoon. Have seen better but it is average for this series. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE ROAD: Broadway Brevities—A fine colored two-reel musical about the Canadian mounties. Excellent and will please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUBINOFF AND HIS VIOLIN: Melody Masters—Another grand band act by Vitaphone. One of the best and should have your "A" playing time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SKI FLIGHT: Vitaphone Varieties—An excellent skiing reel showing the mechanics of skiing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SONS OF THE PLAINS: Mauch Twins—A nice color short for any playhouse. This pleasing story with the Mauch Twins to carry it is very well done. Will go over big with the juveniles and should be enjoyed by the oldsters. Running itme, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SWING TIME IN THE MOVIES: Broadway Brevities—One of the best two-reel subjects we have played in a long time. Entertaining all the way through.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ZERO GIRL: Broadway Brevities—Many thanks to our fellow exhibitors to these columns in letting us know about this short. Very pleasing entertainment. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serials

Republic

FIGHTING DEVIL DOGS, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—Played seven chapters. Chapter Seven was the weakest so far. Nothing but scenes from previous chapters. I call it very "false economy." Other chapters good. Many complaints on Chapter Seven.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

(A) J. R. Prater says, (A) Although this question was answered in Section C of last week's lesson, it is a mighty important subject, repetition of which will not hurt any of us a bit. The effect of sound upon the human ear is to cause the thin membrane stretched across the inside of the opening of the ear to vibrate in accordance with the periodic increase and decrease in the pressure of the air touching its outer surface. The sensation of sound is transmitted from the eardrums to the brain through the auditory nerves. This process is very similar to that which takes place when sound waves in the air strike the diaphragm of a microphone and sets up an electric current in the circuit leading to the amplifier.

"Following through the entire process, suppose the sound to be coming from an electric buzzer. When the buzzer armature moves toward the listener, all the particles of air touching it are pushed toward him. These particles move only a very short distance until they collide with adjacent air particles, causing them to move, the original ones giving up their energy in the process. This procedure goes on a great many times until finally those particles of air touching the outside of the eardrum receive a push, and thus cause the eardrum to move or "bulge" inward. When the buzzer armature reaches the end of its travel toward the listener, it immediately starts to move in the opposite direction, pushing air particles in its front and leaving a partial vacuum behind it.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 147

(A) Why was it recently found necessary to reverse the former idea that current flows from positive to negative and substitute the idea that it flows from negative to positive?

(B) For what reason is electrical theory helpful in practical work?

(C) Where do atoms exist and of what are they composed?

"The normal air pressure outside this vacuum space causes the nearest air particles to rush in behind the armature. The more common expression is that they are sucked in. As they do this, the pressure is relieved from the near side of the adjoining air particles, and they rush in after the first ones. This process also continues until those particles of air touching the eardrum move away toward the source of sound or buzzer armature, causing the eardrum to be pulled or sucked outward. As soon as the buzzer armature again reverses in direction of travel, the first or 'compression' action again takes place. When this entire cycle of operation occurs many times a second, the sensation of sound is created within the brain. A normal human ear will respond to all sound vibrations between about 20 and 20,000 cycles per second, which is at least twice the frequency range covered by modern theatre sound reproducing equipment."

G. E. Doe replies, "To answer the question one must examine into the nature of sound and its method of transmission. When a drummer strikes the head of a base drum, it is caused to vibrate. Of course the air in contact with it must and does vibrate in unison. Thus high and low intensities are created in the air, which we term 'waves', and which we may presume to closely resemble waves in water, with this exception: Waves in water do not alter its density, whereas waves in air are in reality differences in density. When the head of a snare drum is struck, precisely the same effect is produced, except that the vibrations of the smaller, presumably more tense, head are of less depth and much more rapid, therefore the air 'waves' produced are of less amplitude and much more frequent—less space between them.

"These waves, variations in density (call them what you will) carry through considerable air space, just as water waves carry through a considerable water space but, as with water, in diminishing power, strength or what have we. If within the space thus affected is a human ear, these disturbances contact the ear drum and cause it to vibrate exactly as did the drum head, or other sound source, and through some mysterious effect upon the nerves, not as yet, so far as I can ascertain, fully understood, the vibrations are transformed into sound by the brain."

(B) C. Hawkens says, "Sound, insofar as has to do with its transmission, consists of disturbances in the conveying material, air for example. These disturbances are commonly termed by the Higher-Ups 'waves', though since sound may be and is transmitted through and therefore it would seem by solid substances, I am unable to see how such substance can 'wave', either as a whole or in its particles. However, 'frequency' is the term employed to describe the rapidity of these waves, or what have we, over a specified period of time, usually one second. For example, a child drags a stick along a picket fence. Naturally, the stick will vibrate and the rapidity of its vibrations will be dependent upon the speed at which the stick is drawn. In other words the 'frequency' of its vibration will depend upon the speed of progress the stick makes. Frequency in sound means the number of 'waves' set up per second.

(C) S. True puts it thus, "The relation between pitch and frequency in sound is this: Sound may be low pitch or high pitch, according to the distance its waves are spaced apart and their amplitude—size, if you please. Waves set up by relatively slow vibrations are not only spaced much farther apart than those resulting from rapid vibrations, but also by reason of their spacing and character of the slower vibrating medium by which they are produced, have greater size and somewhat different shape. Slow vibrations, because of these facts produce low, relatively 'hoarse' sound, whereas as vibration speed increases the resultant sound becomes less low and 'hoarse', to a point where it may become shrill."

Judges Chosen for Burkan Prize Essay

A committee of judges to determine the best essay submitted in the first annual Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition sponsored by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has been announced by Thomas B. Robertson, chairman of the Section of Patent, Trade Mark and Copyright Law of the American Bar Association.

Each of the essays to be judged is the work of a student in the graduating class in an American law school.

Edward A. Sargoy, Copyright Protection Bureau attorney, and chairman of the copyright committee of the American Bar Association, was named chairman of the committee which will judge the papers on the necessity of copyright law. Other members of the committee are Stephen P. Ladas, Edward S. Rogers, Dr. Louis Charles Smith and Professor John H. Wigmore.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

FINISHING THE JOB

As events in the industry are now proving, the emphatic declarations on this page that big-time showmanship had come again into its own were not set down to stiffen exhibitor morale. There is overpowering evidence to hand that in agreement with these repeatedly-voiced expressions, large-calibre exploitation, lately revived and respected, is returning in the hands of major companies. This long-delayed return has been marked with an evident effort to bridge the traditional gap between production and selling by giving readier ear to distributor and exhibitor forces; to opinions of studio manpower seasoned by years of experience in the field.

One immediate development is the current procedure of holding premieres in various sectors of the land instead of confining this invaluable national publicity medium to Hollywood, as formerly. There is a trend also to elaborate ballyhoo on big pictures going forth in advance from the studios to criss-cross the continent. Equally important is the increasing amount of promotional tieins and other effective exploitation aids offered by the studio ad forces to theatremen always hungry for additional selling angles.

Speaking at the Hollywood Quigley Grand Awards presentation, in May, 1937, C. B. DeMille said: "The old days are gone. Today, the production job is not finished until the picture is on the theatre screen."

The veteran Paramount producer voiced an opinion then spreading in many important quarters that now appears to be crystalizing into definite benefits at the boxoffice.

NO QUESTION OF DIFFERENCE

Regardless of his situation, the showman to bet on is the lad who spotting an opportunity for worthwhile promotion immediately seizes upon it with everything he's got. That goes for a fourth-run as well as a first, perhaps more so as is illustrated here by a report from Ed Lamoreux, manager of the small, fourth-run Empire, in Windsor, Ontario, a Famous Players Canadian unit.

Hearing that Father Flanagan was to speak before the local Catholic Lecture League of a Sunday, Lamoreux booked "Boys Town" to start the day after, hoping for some kind of a publicity break he felt the visit would bring. He got his break by persuading Father Flanagan to officially inaugurate the engagement at a special morning show for pupils in the separate schools, the resultant publicity topping every house record. But even of more value, says Ed, was the talk created by the unprecedented appearance which the Round Tabler is positive has earned the house an invaluable goodwill and many new patrons.

There may be all the difference in the world between a first and fourth run situation. But that difference does not necessarily include lack of enthusiasm nor any lessening of exploitation fervor on the part of the subsequent-run theatreman.

BEYOND THE WRITTEN WORD

There are more than a handful of managers, though the number should be much larger, who make it their business to speak before club luncheon meetings and other local organizations. It isn't that the boys are bent on displaying their forensic talents. They are, however, concerned with the important job of building prestige for the motion picture and the extra grosses that such prestige brings.

To the list of Round Tablers exploring publicity boundaries beyond the written word is now to be added Milt Harris, Loew's Cleveland ad head, who recently made his debut before the journalism class of Cleveland College and followed with a talk at the Business Clearance Club. Other dates are set for the near future and Harris is well pleased with returns so far.

Since the bread and butter of the theatreman depends not inconsiderably upon how he meets and handles people, it would seem that a ready ability to talk on his feet before representative local bodies is to be counted an extra boxoffice talent.

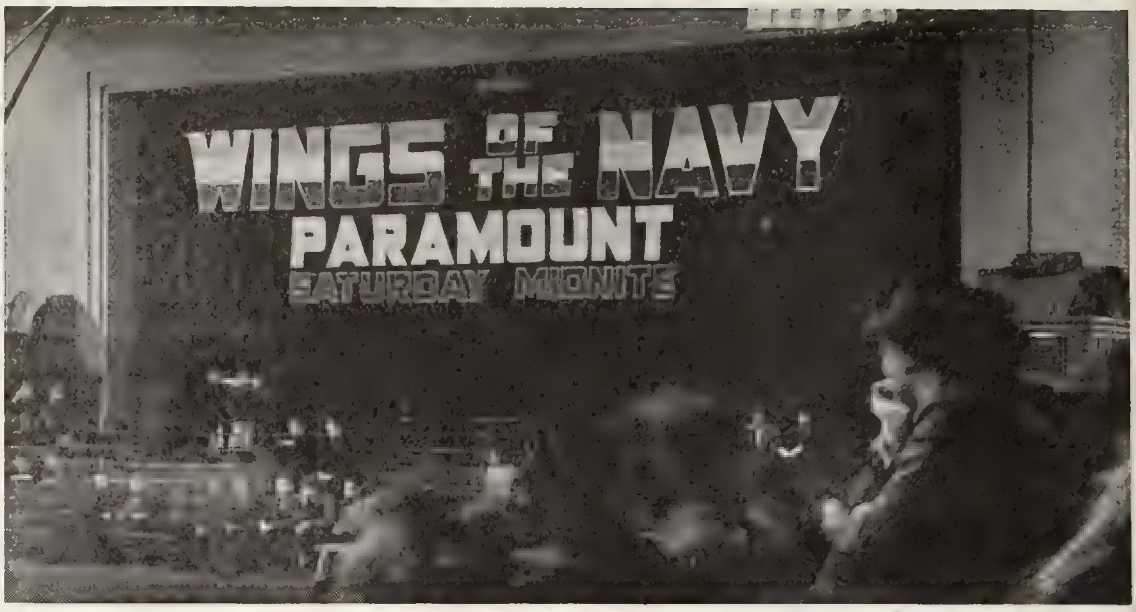
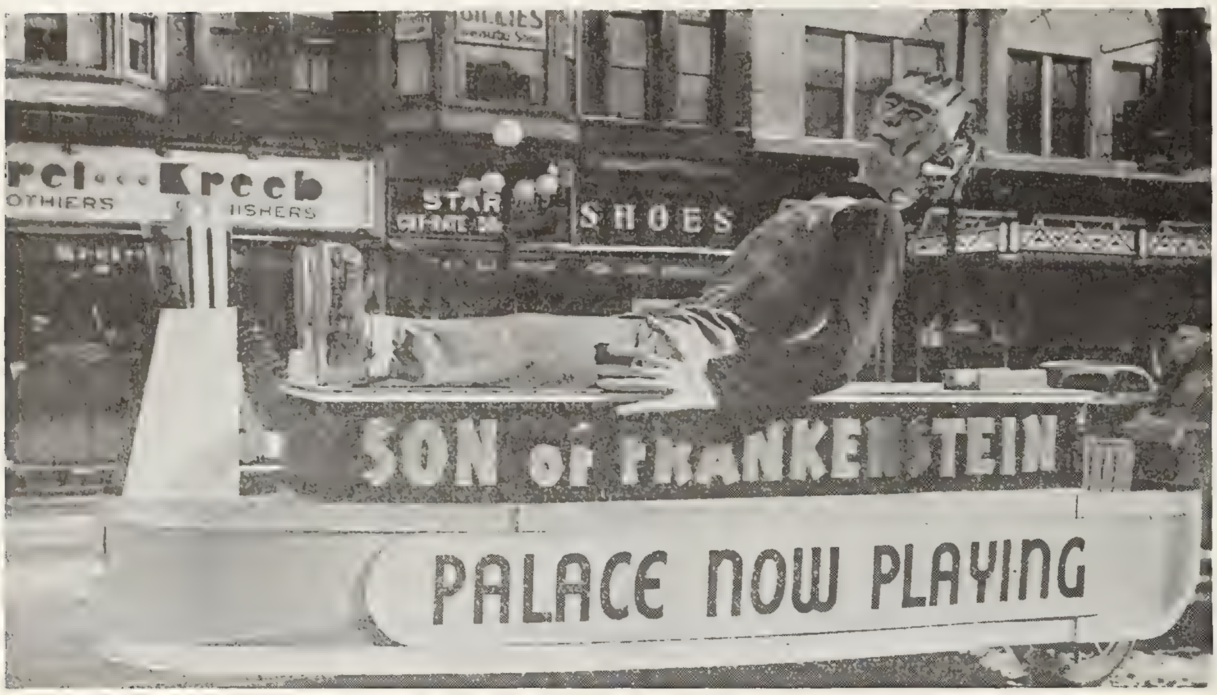
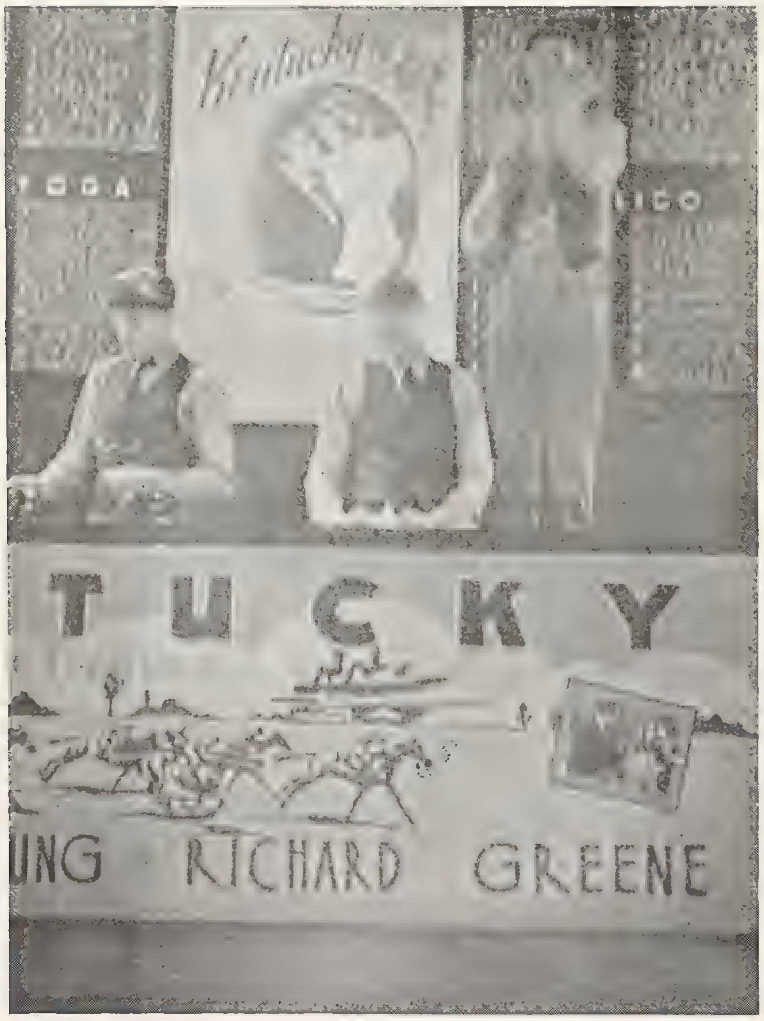
A-Mike Vogel

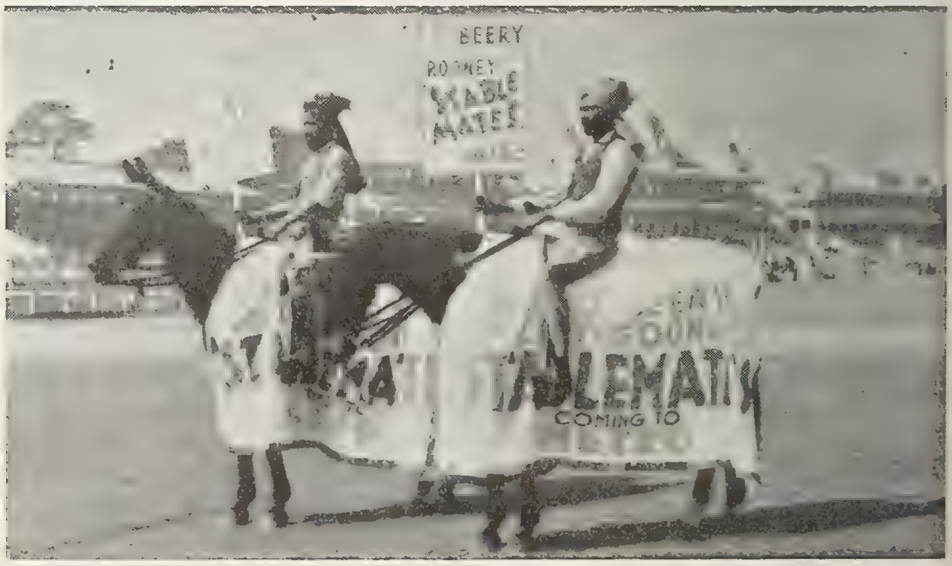


Reported by Manager Thor Hauschild as the biggest promotion ever put on with the local schools was his giant banner placed in the athletic auditorium for "Wings of the Navy" at the Paramount, Marion, Ind. Constructed of thin wallboard and hung on wires, the sign measured over 40 feet and was on display during most important local high-school game.



The Monster came to life in Peoria, Ill., for the date on "Son of Frankenstein" at the Palace under the guidance of Manager Merle H. Eagle who with Artist C. J. Rhodes created street bally here illustrated. Hands and head were moulded with plaster over a steel ribbon form, feet moulded from same material, the hair being dyed hemp. Figure was animated to rise and lower, and for sound a groan mechanism was installed.



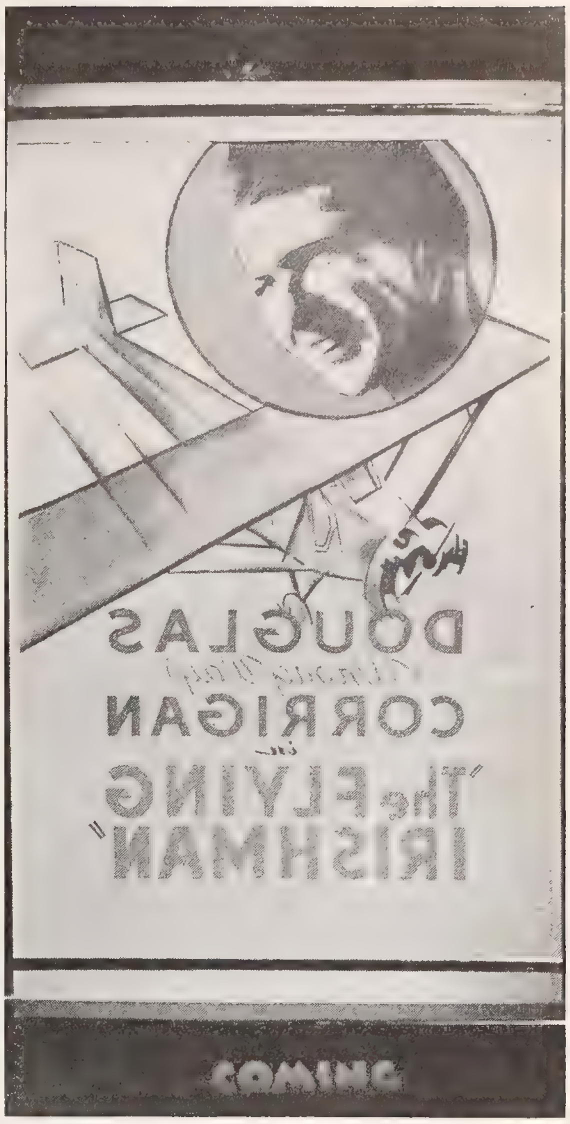


Manager Ben Cohn of Loew's Metro Cinema in Calcutta, India, is apparently demonstrating his American brand of showmanship for the benefit of localites, as witness his ballyhoo used in advance of "Stablemates". Two race horses, properly bannered, paraded around the Calcutta racetrack before the assembled crowds heralding Cohn's coming attraction.

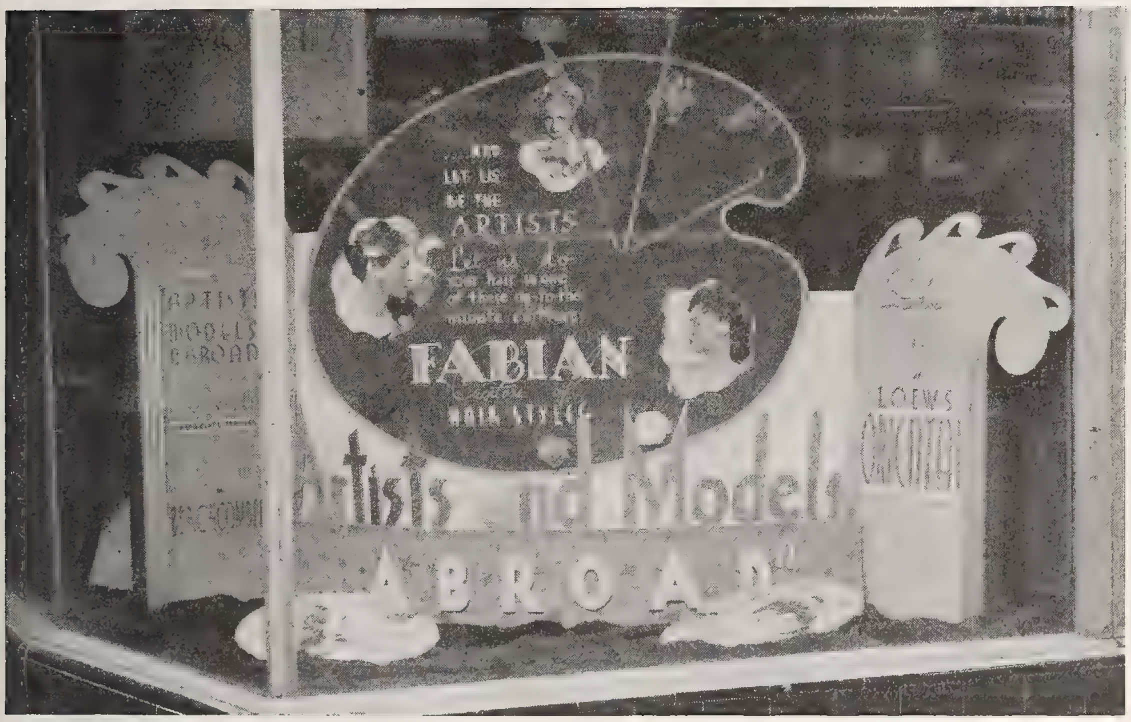
Described elsewhere in this section is Fortnighter Joe Ruddick's lobby stunt on "Kentucky" at the Fox Gillioz in Springfield, Mo. Ticket writers were planted at desk, races were called and odds, running times, track conditions, etc., were changed by staff at intervals, all of which aided in giving the display authenticity.

Round Table in Pictures

Father Flanagan, well-known head of "Boys Town", accepts from Manager Ed Lamoreux check contributed by the theatre staff at opening show of the picture at the Empire, Windsor, Ontario. Lamoreux dated in the film especially to coincide with the Father's appearance in Windsor to lecture before the local Catholic League. Theatreman reports that the visit not only brought him unusual publicity but also brought a lot of new patrons to the house.



Illustrated above is lobby setpiece created by Manager Harry Storin of the Paramount Theatre, Springfield, Mass., for his engagement of "The Flying Irishman". Carrying out the "wrong way" flight of Corrigan, Storin had all lettering on the display printed backwards. Cut of the flyer and his plane "zooming" through the air completed the effect. Storin reports the display created the laughs and attention anticipated.



Planted in beauty shop window by Joe Rubenfeld, Loew's Oriental, Brooklyn, was "Artists and Models" display measuring approximately 5 feet in height. Lettering was cutout and raised with lights back of it and stills with different hair styles were planted on palette and at base. Setpiece was made by Henry Mangravite, theatre artist.

At right, Acting Mayor George Murray of Boston presenting driver of "Stagecoach" express with letter to be delivered to Mayor J. C. Collins of Providence. This was part of Ed McBride's campaign on the date at Loew's State in Providence. Purpose of trip was to inaugurate opening of the picture and show development in transportation.

Hawaiian Revue Aids "Honolulu"

Tying in with local kiddie revue featured weekly over Station WBRY, Ed Fitzpatrick, Loew's-Poli, Waterbury, Conn., secured spot announcements to the effect that the same children would appear in the theatre lobby in a "Honolulu" revue as advance for that picture.

For the four performances, Fitzpatrick constructed an elevated platform in his lobby, colored spotlights giving it a realistic stage effect. Kiddies were dressed as Hawaiians, grass skirts, flower leis, etc. As the children put on their exhibition of skill as hula dancers, several hit tunes from the picture were played. Guitar players from theatre's orchestra supplied the music. All four performances were held at four and eight p. m., to coincide with breaks in the show.

Blowup Critic Reviews Sell "Four Daughters"

Critics' reviews made up into a 40 by 60 formed part of the lobby display for "Four Daughters" in advance of that opening at the Frolic Theatre, Chicago, in the campaign put on by Manager Ben Cohn. Advance trailer on the serialization was shown six weeks ahead, serialization itself appearing in neighborhood newspaper.

Cards plugging the attraction were distributed to all leading hotels, door hangers planted, theatre mailing list circularized, napkins imprinted for distribution in drug stores and sidewalk stencils were used night previous to opening.

Heldman Takes Down Top Circuit Drive Prize

Reported in this section February 18 was account of Lloyd Heldman, Burns Theatre, Newport, Vt., who enlisted the support of his patrons when he trumped up an announcement through editor of local paper that his job depended on the amount of business he did for the month of February. Now comes a report from the theatreman, who informs us that he has taken down first prize in his circuit for the biggest business done with last year's figures as a quota.

Two things helped Heldman considerably he says to put over the last week of the drive, one being a perfect model contest on stage in conjunction with "Artists and Models Abroad." Several ladies' dress shops selecting and outfitting the models. The other stunt was the old-time baby pig giveaway. Papers played up the angle, reporting that an orphan had been left on his doorstep.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Circularizes Schools

Jack Fretwell, State, Harrisonburg, Va., mailed letters to city and county schools and college heads on "Lincoln in the White House." Theatremen also addressed the student body of local colored school on the great literary and educational value of the short. For "Stand Up and Fight" Fretwell distributed jumbo window cards to leading spots playing up the fight angle. Local State Teachers College was presented with bookmarks on "Duke of West Point," which Jack reports helped opening. Libraries also aided with displays of Lincoln books and scene stills tying in with picture date.

Giant Opening For "Dodge City" Set By Warners

Along the lines of the elaborate premiere of "Oklahoma Kid" in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Warner Brothers are now completing plans for a similar opening in Dodge City, Kansas, of "Dodge City," to take place on April 1 in the town's four theatres. Event has been tied in with the annual local roundup of the city's 60th anniversary celebration, enlisting cooperation of Chamber of Commerce, leading businessmen and state officials.

Governor Payne Ratner of Kansas has already issued a proclamation urging all citizens to grow beards for the event. Perc Westmore, Warner makeup head, will present a silver shaving cup to the citizen whose hirsute adornment is voted best. Decorators have been obtained to turn the town into a replica of the wild west days, stores and public buildings to be decorated accordingly. For further atmosphere residents will be costumed in ensembles typical of the picture's background. Also scheduled in the campaign will be a gala western roundup in the Municipal Stadium to be followed by street parades, music to be supplied by 45 bands recruited from the middle west. Mammoth civic ball is also slated for opening night.

Champion To Race Train

The premiere will be broadcast over NBC hookup with former Governor Landon and Governor Ratner heading list of dignitaries participating. Secretary of War Woodring, a native Kansan, is also expected. Other broadcasts will be handled by Jimmy Fidler and George Fischer. In attendance will be a host of Warner Brothers stars, newspaper and magazine representatives brought to the premiere by special trains from Hollywood, Chicago and New York. Over the last mile to Dodge City there will be a race between champion miler Glenn Cunningham and the Santa Fe Special.

Prior to the premiere, special reel shot in Hollywood showing presentation of petition to Jack Warner by delegation of prominent Kansans asking company to save the opening in Dodge City, will be shown in theatres throughout the west and midwest to call attention to the premiere. Santa Fe will run special excursion trains from cities along their route with arrangements made locally to take care of the thousands of visitors expected to attend.

Fox Bruin Celebrates

Before leaving the Fox Bruin, Westwood Village, Cal., for the Paramount in Hollywood, Dave Martin together with his assistant, Al Libby, to celebrate the theatre's first anniversary, distributed gold medallions to each patron. About the size of a 50 cent piece, one side carried engraving of the Bruin, reverse, the date, theatre name and anniversary copy. Martin reports that the entire cost of the medallions was met by selling ad space on backs of miscellaneous heralds to merchants.

Paramount Stars Attend Premieres to Aid Campaigns

With the arrival from the studios in Kansas City of Shirley Ross, Lynn Overman, Judith Barrett, who appears in the picture, and John C. Moffitt, localite who wrote the screen play, the comprehensive advance campaign planned for the world premiere of "I'm From Missouri," at the Newman, reached its "high" as the visitors were greeted at the station by tremendous crowds. Immediately following the Hollywood players were guests of the American Royal Stock Show at a luncheon given at the Hoof and Horn Club.

In the afternoon Judith Barrett was interviewed over WHB and other activities during the day included visit to the office of Mayor Bryce Smith and presentation of scrolls which were to serve as lifetime police courtesy cards. Later Shirley Ross broadcast on a coast-to-coast hookup over WDAF, and when the party arrived that evening at the theatre for the opening, there was another broadcast from the lobby when all the players were interviewed. Generous cooperation was given by all the newspapers to bring attention to the premiere and full facilities of the city and state Chambers of Commerce made available.

Phoenix Greets Martha Raye

In order to test out the picture's possibilities before an average audience in an average city, Bob Gillham, Paramount publicity and ad director, collaborated with Manager Newton Brunson, Rialto, Phoenix, Ariz., on an advance campaign for "Never Say Die," reported one of the most elaborate advances given a motion picture locally, including over 20 separate exploitation stunts tying in with all available sources.

In addition to the aggressive newspaper, radio and billboard campaign, tieups were worked with leading stores for prominent window attention. Top exploitation stunt was a jig-saw puzzle worker at the city's busiest intersection spelling out the title on sidewalks. Added interest was given the opening by the personal appearance of Martha Raye, who was met on arrival by Representatives of the Chamber of Commerce and leading girls' clubs. Miss Raye appeared before the body at the State House where she was introduced to the assembled legislators and later was welcomed by Governor Robert Taylor Jones. Further "traffic-stopping" was reported with the star's visit to the race meeting at the State Fair grounds where prior to the running of the special Martha Raye handicap she was presented with a silver cup by the Jockey Club.

Special Train for "Union Pacific"

Latest plans for the national exploitation of "Union Pacific" schedule a special train intended to bring members of the cast to 33 key cities. The elaborate ballyhoo will consist of Union Pacific's new steam electric turbine, locomotive, box car and coaches of the 1860 period as used in the picture, in addition to the modern equipment for those traveling on the train.

"PYGMALION" TIEINS MAKE PAGE-ONE NEWS

Rochester, Indianapolis and Houston Engagements Rate Top Publicity by Papers

Rochester went Hollywood for one night, when Les Pollock, at Loew's put on a reserved seat opening for "Pgymalion", closing the house at approximately six, to reopen at 7:30 with all the gala trimmings and atmosphere. Carpets paved the way for patrons from street curb to inner lobby, footmen serviced curb patrons, palms and flowers bedecked the entire lobby and staff including girl ushers, were in formal attire for the occasion.

Special half-hour broadcast over WSAY was held in lobby when socialites, newspaper critics and prominent city officials were interviewed. Two small girls in page outfits stood at each of the front and rear aisles distributing souvenir programs and special organist was engaged to open the program followed by boys in bellhop uniforms in center of stage, picked up by spotlight as they slowly drew a silver drape curtain heralding the presentation.

Letters with mail order form incorporating theatre seating plan were mailed to select Eastman Theatre season concert subscribers calling attention to the special reserved seat preview followed by date, brief resume of original story and Shaw's modern version. Pollock who won his Fortnighter on this campaign reports the response brought in the class of theatregoer for whom the picture held majority appeal.

For further decoration, caricature cutouts of Shaw were strategically planted about the foyer. One showed Shaw poking his head out of a boxoffice window asking "how many" and another presented Shaw garbed in cap and gown holding a diploma in hand and card calling attention to the preview. Copy on gown quoted New York newspapers' reviews and the author's own comment on the picture.

Bachelors' Club Aids Farrar

To give a different twist to the "Miss Peg Maleon" hunt and to aid local organizations, Ward Farrar, Loew's Palace, Indianapolis, promoted the Bachelor's Club, leading playboy organization, to co-sponsor a public Cinderella Ball. Proceeds were given to newspapers' charity funds in exchange for complete coverage of the picture as well as the search. Papers gave the stunt a two week buildup on the search for "Miss Peg Maleon", taking the winner on a shopping tour of the most important downtown department stores for the purpose of promoting co-op advertising for the paper and for the promotion of a wardrobe for the girl.

Fifty girls possessing the qualifications which the Bachelors were attempting to find in a typical Indianapolis girl—poise, personality, background, ambition and personal appearance—were present at special dinner preceding the opening, attended by the Club members, department store and newspaper executives who acted as the final judges to select the belle of the Cinderella Ball held directly following the premiere. President of the Club escorted "Miss Peg Maleon" to the Ball, while other entrants were escorted by Club members.

Special letter with cut of Cinderella figure in background was sent to the Bachelor's Club mailing list with perforated coupon for purpose of reserving seats and obtaining tickets for the Ball at a dollar per person, entitling buyer to attend both premiere and Ball. Other leading club membership lists were also covered. Society page breaks were numerous including dinner party announcements, plans for the Ball and the Hollywod premiere. Series of Bernard Shaw and "Pygmalion" questions were furnished WGRC and WAVE for daily plugging three weeks in advance in addition to man-on-the-street broadcasts.

Deering Selects Six Girls

Francis Deering widened his "Miss Peg Maleon" exploitation for the date at Loew's, Houston, by tying in with local daily to discover not one but the six most popular local working girls, winners to be guests at a series of elaborate parties. Voting ballots were run in cooperating paper, requirements being that girls ages must range from 18 to 25 and that they be employed locally.

Mayor Oscar Holcomb cooperated in staging the contest by appearing as guest of honor at the dinner party given for the six young ladies and their escorts. Band leader George Olsen currently appearing at leading hotel acted as host to the party which was attended by film notables and newspapermen. After dinner, party proceeded to the theatre for the premiere, where the visitors were given special attention. In addition to voting ballots, paper ran numerous front page stories.

Novelty Campaign Aids 'Gunga Din'

Ingenious two-fold throwaway was distributed by Leo Young, Strand Theatre, Portland, Maine, in advance of "Gunga Din." Measuring five and a half by seven inches, front cover carried cuts of a club, diamond, heart and spade. Directly above the first, copy read "You may belong to a"—followed by "You may wear a"—next came "You may have a," and ending with "But you don't need a"—and under the club in bold type were the words "To dig up real entertainment." Inside spread contained picture title, cast, playdates, etc. Back cover with merchant's ad covered entire cost of printing and distribution.

For lobby display, Young constructed a 16 foot long by eight foot high electrical display. Top border carried cast in illuminated cutout letters; background consisted of two black and white scenes from 24 sheets with circular copy. At base of display title letters were set in 30-inch letters and lighted from behind.

Entire staff wore imprinted helmets ahead and during run, study guides were distributed at all high schools, schools carrying announcements on bulletin boards and tieup with local jeweler brought attractive window display of Joan Fontaine wearing a Hindu bracelet alongside of which was cutout of a Hindu temple with tiein copy.

Imprinted Newsaper Sells "Brother Rat"

Herman F. Levy of the Orpheum Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, recently offered a tieup with the Sioux City Tribune which helped considerably for "Brother Rat."

The Sioux City Tribune imprinted its first page in red with copy reading "A $250,000 Movie Quiz Hit. 'Brother Rat' starts Christmas Day Orpheum." The Tribune imprinted an entire edition, which proved highly effective in putting over the picture in this city.

Dubbed "Camera Cavalcade," Hugh Martin, Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind., promoted a full page on Clark Gable and Norma Shearer as they appear in "Idiot's Delight." Banner across top read "Clark turns hoofer—Norma turns heads," balance of page was devoted to four large photos showing various scene stills which were tied to the opening.

In what he reports as a hard paper to "crack," Ted Shank, Schine's Miami, Piqua, Ohio, planted the old classified ad contest with a little different twist. Guest tickets were awarded to those who could find the stars' names of the picture he was playing the following week. Response was so good on this tieup that tickets were again offered to entrants who could finish some of the Bob Burns humorous sayings scattered in the classified section.

Published by Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn., is his "North End Observer," which he issues each Friday. Numerous merchants' ads help defray cost, Pearce runs an editorial in each copy, which also contains highlights of forthcoming attractions and personals on localities.

Reported as an excellent wind-resister is the new type banner used by Robert Busch, Plaza, Oklahoma City, Okla. Made of canvas block letters which are made up separately and placed back to back, these are strung on light rope and hung across one of the city's busiest shopping districts. Since the Plaza is an extended run house, Busch says he finds this type of advertising very effective.

In Chicago, at the Frolic Theatre, Ben Cohn for "Submarine Patrol" put on a contest in which cash prizes were awarded those submitting best submarine and submarine chaser models. These were displayed in lobby with proper credits. Further publicity was garnered when local papers ran story on the fact that Barney Connett, Chicago's "underwater Corrigan," would act as judge.

At absolutely no cost to the theatre is the "Children's Hour" put on one Saturday each month by Sid Scott, Capitol, Sudbury, Canada. Calling the different dancing schools, Sid gets the pick of their pupils for a revue on stage. This is followed by a call on the various principals for children who excel in recitation. Scott says the program lasts but 20 minutes and creates immeasurable goodwill with both the board of education and dancing schools, who get a publicity break.

Evening News cooperated with Lou Mayer, RKO Temple, Rochester, by running a mystery contest in advance of "Mr. Moto's Last Warning." Guest tickets went to those correctly listing the names of film sleuths shown in a scene still carried in paper, together with clue on what they were noted for. Names and addresses of winners were run together with picture plug.

Schine-men Report Recent Activities

Reported on by Kroger Babb, district advertising and publicity director for Schine's in Ohio, was the Boy Scout Patriotic Program effected by him and Jim Platt, manager of the Vernon Theatre as a midweek boxoffice stimulant. March of Time issue on "Young America" and a Star Spangled Banner singing reel were the program highlights. Boy Scouts in uniform replaced the theatre's regular staff and canvassed the city talking up the show. Newspaper breaks, window tieups and a lobby display added to the effectiveness of the stunt.

Ronald Sturgess, manager of Schine's Vine, with the aid of Babb, has completed plans for launching a Saturday Kiddie Club. Kids are being enrolled and besides extra comedies and cartoons for the screen program, a 20-week series of valuable giveaways has been arranged for. Through tieup effected with local bottling company, 10 six-shooter rifles have been made available weekly. The gun deal handled by International Enterprises, Chicago, has unusually strong kid appeal reports Babb.

Holds Jitterbug Tournaments

Seven-weeks' session of Jitterbug Tournaments has been promoted by Babb, and weekly sessions are being held each Saturday night on the stage of Schine's Vernon theatre. Contestants representing more than 30 North-Central Ohio cities are entered. Five couples vie for honors each Saturday night. The winning couples of the weekly sessions will be thrown together for the grand finals on April 29th. Most of the contestants have previously won local contests and the competition is not only keen in the Mt. Vernon tournament, but audiences are being treated to exhibitions by the entrants.

John Scott, a 15-year-old crippled youth, was the winner in a round-trip airplane flight to Cincinnati, Ohio, in the Model Airplane contest conducted recently in conjunction with "Wings of the Navy," which attracted entries from several towns and created wide interest in the picture's engagement. The winning model was exhibited on the stage while Babb presented Scott his prize trip, during the opening matinee of the film at Schine's Vernon theatre.

Metzger Ties Broadcast To Flash Gordon Serial

Riding along with the furore created by the recent Mercury Theatre broadcast of "War of the Worlds," L. B. Metzger and Walter Morris, Broadway Theatre, San Diego, secured a transcription of the broadcast for presentation at the theatre together with showing of Universal's Flash Gordon serial, a condensed version of the play.

Exclusive scoop of the broadcast and the film came about three weeks after the nationwide scare and to smooth out the presentation of the transcription a special introductory transcription was made locally, leading into the main broadcast. Morris reports it was to his knowledge a first time combination film and record transcription ever billed in a theatre for which admission was charged.

Chamber Endorses McCollister Short

Unusual because of the first time in the history of local showbusiness, that the Chamber of Commerce had openly cooperated with a motion picture theatre was a tiein that Bill McCollister, Chakeres State, Greenville, Ohio made for the production and showing at the theatre of a short titled "Life in Greenville." Aimed directly to publicize the various local businesses and the heads of those enterprises, Chamber of Commerce agreed to further the movement by endorsing the purposes of the picture which aided in obtaining the support of over half of the leading merchants in town. McCollister further reports that it was a first time for the local Advocate to give front page art and stories to any theatrical or amateur show.

As to be expected the publicity response was distinctly out of the ordinary since in addition to the pages of co-op ads obtained as a result of the production the usually conservative local papers came out with a series of page one stories, all of which stressed the part theatre played in the tiein.

Borrows Original Manuscript To Plug "Huckleberry Finn"

Learning that the Buffalo Public Library owned the original manuscript of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn", which is valued at $50,000, Charlie Taylor, ad head for the Buffalo Theatres, Inc., tipped off the Evening News with the result that an excellent splash was landed on opening day.

Paper put the drama critic on the story and reproduced the frontispiece of the manuscript which was run with story, directly opposite the drama page opening night.

Reported by Taylor to be the biggest "space allotted" campaign in the history of Buffalo's filmdom was his "Miss Peg Maleon" search planted in the Buffalo Times. Everything was promoted including complete outfit for the girl, beauty treatments, suite at the Hotel Statler, dinner for seven, luncheon at leading hotel, evening at night club and use of Lincoln and driver for entire day and night.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Atmosphere Lobby Created By Ruddick on "Kentucky"

Ingenious lobby attractor created by Joe Ruddick, Fox Gillioz Theatre, Springfield, Mo. for "Kentucky" and which brought him his Fortnighter Assignment was an action scene duplicating regular racehorse bookmaking establishment. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Races were called through mike, and horses, odds, jockies, running times, track conditions etc., etc. were changed at intervals to keep living display alive. Ticket writers were planted at desk issuing initialed "tickets" to patrons in lieu of actual bets. Winning numbered tickets were then posted in the lobby each day during run of picture, passes going to the lucky ones.

Ticket, mike and headset, telephones, visors, etc. enhanced the authenticity of the display and picture title and art were given display.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

Awards will be voted on single exploitations and not on complete campaigns as formerly. This includes goodwill and institutional ideas as well as those on pictures.

Each Quarter will be divided into two-week preliminary contests.

Winners in each preliminary will be appointed Fortnighters.

Entries of Fortnighters in each Quarter will be judged for the Quigley Quarterly Plaques.

Quarterly Plaque Winners will be appointed Quartermasters.

Quartermasters appointed in each Quarter will compete for the annual Grand Awards.

Additional distinctions and Honorable Mention Sheepskin Certificates will be awarded in each Quarter.

First Quarter ends March 30, remaining Three Quarters as last year.

There will be no classifications of population or situation. Everyone starts from scratch.

Every theatreman everywhere is eligible to compete.

All product is eligible—features, shorts, serials. Also stage shows, amateur presentations, etc.

More than one idea may be included in one entry but Preliminary Awards will be voted for best individual idea.

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered

There are no more deadlines. All exploitations will be entered in the Fortnightly competition underway on date they are received.

Burhorn Promotes Vet Benefit Show

In past years the local chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War in South Chicago, Ill., hired school auditorium and engaged professional promoter for the purpose of raising funds for their rehabilitation program. This year, Manager John Burhorn, of the Gayety in that situation, sold the veteran officials on the idea of renting the theatre for two days, offering "Sons of the Legion" as the featured entertainment. Burhorn also agreed to handle all the publicity which would save the usual promotion fees, the veterans paying cost of the ad campaign.

The veterans mailed out 5,000 letters for advance sale of tickets, 100 window cards were planted through business district and local newspaper cooperated with abundant coverage in all of which the Gayety was prominently mentioned, including co-op page laid out by John.

All receipts of the drive were turned over to the chapter and in addition to the fine boxoffice showing, theatre prestige was further built up by vote of thanks from the veterans with assurances of future tieins.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Effects Telegraph Tieup On "Whitehouse" Short

Noticing in a scene still from "Lincoln in the Whitehouse" that the President was shown receiving a wire on a Western Union blank advising him of the firing of Fort Sumter, C. L. Hollister, Babcock, Wellsville, New York, hotfooted it down to local telegraph office to arrange for a tieup on his date. Window displays were immediately promoted consisting of giant blank with copy reading "yesterday, a telegram generally meant bad news—today, everybody uses the telegraph on all occasions". Playdates and theatre credits were conspicuously displayed as was the scene still of Lincoln reading his wire.

"Holly" personally visited with superintendent of schools who directed the playdates be announced in every room of entire local school system. Also planted was a display of stills with small playdate credit card on official bulletin boards, two sets of insert cards were given to the superintendent for turn over to American history teachers for class discussions. Library cooperated by using stills furnished by theatreman as the basis for a Lincoln display of books.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mayor Proclaims "Sweethearts" Day

Mayor David Hollier of Opelousas, La. was prevailed upon by Manager Millard Lee, of the Delta and Rex Theatres to issue a proclamation setting aside a special day, dubbed "Sweethearts Day" in connection with that picture's opening.

In addition to numerous window displays tying in with the film's title, Lee together with his staff promoted full page co-op ad with banner across top reading "The City of Opelousas and Merchants pay homage to 'Sweethearts' ". Every ad contained some tiein copy and newspapers cooperated with front page coverage on the proclamation.

THE RELEASE CHART

INDEX

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

Following the title is information regarding the classification of the subject matter of the feature. A comedy is denoted by the abbreviation Com.; Melodrama by Mel.; Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel.; Musical by Mus.; Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com.; Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parentheses after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

Screenplay by Charles Lederer

GILDING THE EASTER LILY!

We're happy to give your patrons "BROADWAY SERENADE", as sweet a holiday gold-getter as ever packed in the lads and lassies with their new Easter bonnets!

"BROADWAY SERENADE" has heart appeal, eye appeal and ear appeal—romance, spectacle and music to lift the spectator from wintry doldrums to Springtime cheer! Hear! Hear!

And speaking of M-G-M's Springtime hits:

"IT'S HEY MONEY, MONEY AND A HA-CHA-CHA!"

We have seen the new DR. KILDARE picture ("Calling Dr. Kildare") and it's a thrilling fulfillment of this series' promise!

We have seen the new HARDY FAMILY picture ("The Hardys Ride High") and when you see it you'll agree with us that it's their best yet! A riot of fun!

We have seen "GOODBYE MR. CHIPS" from our production unit that made "Yank at Oxford" and "The Citadel", which won the N. Y. critics' Best Picture of The Year award! It is sensational!

And there's Robert Taylor and Myrna Loy in "Lucky Night"—Claudette Colbert and James Stewart in "It's A Wonderful World"—Johnny Weissmuller in "Tarzan" and a flock more.

LOTS OF TALK in the papers about 1939-40 and M-G-M has big things in store for that, BUT before Sept. 1st rolls around you're going to enjoy a merry Springtime and a Summer of gala M-G-M shows!

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY

SITTING PRETTY

In the Congress Hotel in Chicago, March 30th—April 1st, 265 men representing the sales and production forces of 20th Century-Fox are gathered at one of the most important meetings in film history to hear sales policies and product for next year outlined by their executive leaders.

Busy at their daily tasks at home are 11,263 other delegates — the theatre men who are now playing 20th Century-Fox pictures and who will buy 20th Century-Fox pictures for next year.

Confident in the product that has built their theatres to prosperity, these absent delegates to the 20th Century-Fox convention await the return of their friends, the 20th Century-Fox salesmen, and the announcement of the 20th Century-Fox product.

These 11,263 pleased 20th Century-Fox customers are indeed sitting pretty, because they know the constant value of the product that has put them in the top spot in exhibition.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 134, No. 13 April 1, 1939

IT'S A BUSINESS

THE moving finger writes—just now across the map of Europe. Wherever it moves, it is making a line on the graph of the motion picture industry. That wavy, jagged line may have in it implications, or declarations, of empire, course bearings of history-to-be, but for this and every other American business it is a dollar line, a commercial trending.

As in no other land probably is this quite so true. The national life of these United States is a business life. It is a consequence of the building of a population and a nation of people who came from elsewhere to seek a living, and if might be a better living.

The motion picture, American born and of American nurture, partakes exactly of the nature of its people and their purposes. It is as commercial as is this America. This ought to be obvious. It is. Conspicuously, however, the American scene is obfuscated by persons who can not, or will not, see the obvious. One of their characteristics is a desire to shout Americanism and to proclaim processes of saving the nation, of which they have heard only recently.

From this group have come many vociferations about the arrangements which the motion picture has arranged for tending to its own business.

NUMBER ONE citation for rather a while was the assertion that the motion picture industry had gone plumb to hell because it was not going to make a screen version of Mr. Sinclair Lewis' novel entitled "It Can't Happen Here," a presentation bearing on dictatorships, etc. Everybody available was blamed for the situation. Mr. Will Hays, who had nothing to do with it, was accused of throttling the art. Mr. Joseph I. Breen, in whose province of a moral code consideration it's never appeared, was charged with suppressive intent. It was implied that Mr. Martin Quigley, as the father of the Production Code, was against it. It was asserted that the editor of Motion Picture Herald, and the Herald, were "moss-back" reactionary influences, maliciously addressed at a project to keep this soul stirring material from reaching a free people.

Meanwhile the fact was that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, having acquired the material with a notion that it might be important, a notion probably considerably influenced by the fame of Mr. Lewis as an international best seller, were just thinking about it. About then, affairs being what they were in Europe, especially Mittel Europa, a condition arose in which it seemed that more would be lost than gained by making the picture. Just as automatically as that M-G-M decided not to make the picture.

Now things are different. The market that was to be worried about is not there any more.

THE market at home and among the surviving democracies, the market for which the material was purchased, is still to be reached.

The rather simple, direct and obvious consequence is that M-G-M has decided to put the picture of "It Can't Happen Here" into production.

This decision, like the first one, is commercial. It seems now, the market being what it is, and what it is not, there is more to be gained than lost.

The problem is as simple as that—and the implications of a control of the screen are as empty as the indications.

The motion picture industry is engaged in trying to entertain the customers, as many customers as possible, and to keep out of trouble while doing it.

In this process of striving, it heeds and yields to pressures social, political, religious and economic—in the ratio of their dollar power.

Some, more especially among those without dollar power, may consider this an indictment. It is not. America is made of working, earning, doing and getting what one wants by those processes which are called business. If "they" don't like they do not buy it.

Until something does "happen here" of a revolutionary nature this land will attend to business. If "they" like they buy it——and that's a business.

"THE tremendous increase in taxes in recent years has been almost entirely to meet the demands of minorities," observed Mr. A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse company, in a Cincinnati speech the other day. "Industry has been blamed for unemployment and we are urged to increase both employment and wages, even though we are now spending, as the report of the U. S. Department of Commerce discloses, 84 cents out of every dollar applicable to wages, taxes, interest and dividends. Just how industry could hire many more people or increase wages very much out of the 16 cents left to pay taxes, dividends and interest is, of course, not disclosed."

THE Oklahoma bill for censorship of motion pictures, with its obvious major purpose the support by fees of a new mess of state jobs in a division of visual education in the state's department of education, belongs to a special and all too familiar category of legislative thought.

It would be quite as logical and reasonable to advocate a special censorship and taxation on the distribution of amusement literature, novels, magazines and newspapers, to finance the purchase of textbooks for the schools.

The Oklahoma measure is especially ornamented with provision for assorted fines and penalties, in addition to a charge of three dollars per unit of a thousand feet of film or fraction thereof.

Censorship fees are always a tax on the consumer. But legislators pretend they are paid by Hollywood and New York.

THE Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation's exploit in arranging picture publicity dissemination by facsimile broadcasting by Station WOR really approaches the problem of making radio serve the screen, and may, likely as not, be making a bit of history, too. There are those who see in radio facsimile broadcasting the promise of the air-delivered morning newspaper of tomorrow. The newspapers are not unaware. They are paying more heed than any other interest.

This Week

Strike

An unusual turn in the projectionists' strike inaugurated by the IATSE in New York to force distributors to cease delivery of film to theatres not employing IATSE projectionists was a caution by Thurman Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney general, to observe the anti-trust laws. Exchange and home office projectionists remained on strike and distribution officials hastened to complete a plan for shipping film from theatre to theatre in order to maintain shows. The film companies maintained their stand that to accede to the union demands would lead to charges of violation of their contracts with the theatres and would lay them open to possible entanglement with the federal Department of Justice.

Developments in the strike are detailed on page 14.

Investigation

Out of the boiling labor situation on the coast this week came news that the Congressional committee headed by Martin Dies had promised an investigation into charges by the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees that "sinister influences" were causing a revolt in coast technicians' unions against IATSE domination. The IATSE charges followed a war of injunctions between the International and officers of Studio Technicians' Local 37 who were suspended by the IATSE in a move to revoke the local autonomy only recently granted the studio unions.

Long delayed NLRB hearings on charges by the Screen Writers' Guild against producers remained suspended pending the outcome of day to day negotiations being carried between a Guild committee and the producers.

The labor front, again the source of lowering clouds, is reported on page 44.

Trend

Following, at some distance, a tendency apparent in contemporary literature, Hollywood is turning to biographies of personalities who made deep impress on their times and whose lives furnish a new approach to dramatization of real life values. Release schedules of the last two years have had a noticeable sprinkling of this type of story and plans for 1939-40 indicate an even heavier participation. Present announcements indicate at least 26 biographies, among them screen versions of the lives of Alfred Nobel, Thomas A. Edison, Madame Curie, the Cunard family, Buffalo Bill, Geronimo, Irene and Vernon Castle, Lord Kitchener, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, Charles P. Steinmetz, Abraham Lincoln, Kit Carson, Lawrence of Arabia, the Wright brothers and John Paul Jones.

The plans and the trend are analyzed in the Hollywood Scene on page 49.

Invitation

The Paramount Pictures Corporation publicity department Wednesday said:

"Cecil B. DeMille today invited President Roosevelt to become a motion picture writer.

"In a letter, the Paramount producer-director who has twice featured the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, on his radio theatre suggested that the Chief Executive contribute a foreword to "Union Pacific" as a "gesture of friendship toward the railroads and a tribute to the great part they have played in opening up the country to civilization.'"

Early this week Mrs. Roosevelt in her syndicated column entitled "My Day" reported favorably upon Samuel Goldwyn's "Wuthering Heights." Her son James is vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.

Little Business Aid

Aid and comfort for the little business man, including the independent motion picture exhibitor, are promised in a proposal introduced in Congress this week to establish regional intermediate credit banks to ease the way for loans unobtainable through ordinary channels.

Relief and Security

A committee of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America was appointed this week by Will H. Hays, president, to cooperate with him in a study of the problem of relief and security in the motion picture industry. Members are George J. Schaefer, Barney Balaban and Joseph H. Hazen. The committee, it was said, will work with the Motion Picture Relief Fund in Hollywood, whose efforts in the raising of $268,266.19 in 1938 were praised by Mr. Hays in his recent annual report.

Upturn

A decided upturn in the business conditions of Latin America, and considerable improvement in the relationship between Mexican producers and U. S. distributors were noted by J. A. McConville, Columbia foreign manager, who returned to New York Wednesday from Mexico. The Mexican producers have realized that they can achieve better distribution throughout South America if they work through U. S. companies, rather than through separate organizations in each country, he added.

Senate Hearing

Persistently before the Congress for 13 years, a proposal to restrict operation of the industry practice of socalled block booking, at present incorporated in a bill proposed by Senator Matthew M. Neely, will be considered by the Senate subcommittee on interstate commerce at a public hearing next Monday. The hearing was called abruptly, but the industry this week was marshalling its forces to argue its side of the proposal just as proponents of the bill were preparing extensive argument in its favor.

The program is outlined on page 34.

Report

The social functions of the screen and the industry's attitude toward certain pressures are given prominence in the annual report made this week by Will H. Hays as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The subject was reviewed with the conclusion that it represented a conflict "more often apparent than real." Ofter lengthy discussion of the evolution of screen entertainment, Mr. Hays said, in part: "The fact that the screen has handled successfully themes of contemporary thought in dramatic and vivid form and presented the subject matter as splendid entertainment, rather than propaganda, proves how much it can do today, and how much more it can do tomorrow."

The report is quoted extensively on page 22.

Foreign Markets

Extensive comment on the foreign market in general and on South America and Italy specifically were made this week by distributor executives recently returned from trips abroad. Arthur M. Loew, head of the MGM foreign department, reminded that American companies would do well to concentrate their best efforts in the South American field in order to retain and expand that market. Arthur Kelly, United Artists vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, outlined a nebulous plan of which he had been informed in Paris for a rapprochement between Italy and the American companies. Under it American companies would do business directly with Italian exhibitors but would pay a sliding scale tax to the Government distribution monopoly.

Mr. Loew and Mr. Kelly are quoted on page 24.

Concerned

Speaking of television—and how England is doing precisely that since the broadcast of the Boon-Danaher fight—there's developing a state of intellectual concern among students of the entertainment scene, writes Aubrey Flanagan from London. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has set up a new committee on television, and the committee went into action on the very day it was appointed. In other words, exhibitors see a real competitive factor in the offing and believe that considerable damage can be avoided by cooperation and investigation with other interests.

Mr. Flanagan's discussion is on page 60.

Television Developments

A $3,600,000 stock issue was floated Monday for the Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation, Columbia Broadcasting and General Electric have announced the dates of their first television programs as June 15th and July 1st, respectively, and Gaumont British is preparing eight of its theatres for television.

These and other television developments are recorded on page 61.

Equipment Show

Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said this week that he was discussing plans for an exposition of theatre supplies and equipment, possibly in connection with the SMPE or MPTOA convention, with E. A. Williford, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. While nothing definite has been set, Mr. Kuykendall said that he had had the idea in mind for some time.

52 Fox Features

Fifty-two features, same as this year, were announced this week for 1939-40 by Twentieth Century-Fox Film, at its annual sales convention in Chicago. At least five will cost $2,000,000.

Convention details and titles of the new pictures, with assignments to date, appear on page 53.

UA Celebrates

The signing of David Selznick, David Loew, Sol Lesser and Ernest Lubitsch as producers was added this week by United Artists as further cause to celebrate the company's twentieth anniversary, April 23rd to May 20th.

News of this and other UA happenings will be found on page 56.

Americanism

Pennsylvania theatre owners would be fined $10 for each day's failure to display the American flag and for each day's failure to play the national anthem before each performance under a proposed bill introduced by Samuel M. Rosenfield of Philadelphia in the State Assembly Wednesday. His bill provides that each day's violation be counted as a separate offense and that a jail sentence up to 10 days be given when a fine is not paid.

Uncertain Peace

The civil war in Spain ended ostensibly last Tuesday with the occupation of Madrid, but the future of the film industry, particularly of American distribution interests, remained uncertain. Heads of foreign departments in New York home offices hope for reestablishment of the market in the war-torn country without too many restrictions. That there will be some restrictions has been indicated in various pronouncements from officials of the Franco government, especially in a statement by Manuel Augusto, head of the Nationalist Department of Motion Pictures, that the defreezing of funds in Spain would proceed "according to the manner in which each company conducted itself during the war."

A review of the situation is on page 50.

Financial

Net profit of $7,252,466 for 1938 was reported Tuesday by Twentieth Century-Fox. This compares with $8,617,114 for 1937.

Contract business on the books of Republic Pictures stands at $7,000,000, Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated, controlling Republic, told stockholders this week. First 1939 quarter net was $150,000.

Details of the Fox and Consolidated-Republic earnings positions appear on page 63 with other film financial news.

Law on Sweets

Further action on the Federal Trade Commission order prohibiting certain candy supply houses and vending machine operators from entering into contracts which emboied conditions not extended to other companies depends upon the future course of these companies it was explained this week in Washington. The companies can comply with the orders, thus closing the case; appeal to the courts for a review of the Commission's findings, or ignore the orders, in which event the Commission will apply to the courts for an enforcement order since it enjoys no authority itself to enforce its orders.

Run of the Mill

Spring, to California Chambers of Commerce, means little and its official arrival passed unnoticed in the studios where only routine activity was maintained. Six pictures were started during the week and five completed. With one exception in each group the product was very much run of the mill.

For titles see page 49.

NEELY HEARING PRODS TRADE PRACTICE ACTION

Distributors' Non-Stop Sessions Aimed at Completing Program Before Washington Block Sales Discussion Monday

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Public hearings called for Monday on the Neely block booking bill before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the United States Senate at Washington precipitated the majors this week into a hurried completion of the program of self regulation which they have been formulating since last August.

Despite the Washington maneuverings of Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely (Dem., W. Va.) to force Senate consideration of his bill—which the Senate passed last year, the House not voting—the organized industry's legislative observers little expected that the measure would reach open hearings at this session, especially in view of the generally congested legislative condition of Congress on matters of national defense, WPA relief, taxation and whatnot.

Recall Promises of 1936

Facing the hearings and their resultant arguments in public before a Congressional committee with proponents of block booking legislation, arguments to which Congress has listened for 13 years (see page 34), industry leaders are understood this week to have reminded the major's committee on self-regulation that at the last public block booking hearings, in 1936, recognized spokesmen for the industry virtually promised the Congressional committeemen that they would effect a set of trade practices for distribution-exhibition which would eliminate any reasons for eliminating "compulsory" blind and block selling.

That, in substance, is the reason why certain industry officials assigned to defend the business against block booking legislation urged the trade practice negotiators this week to complete their program before the weekend, so that the industry would not be embarrassed before the Senate committee on Monday if an interrogating Senator, or some proponent of the bill, sought to determine the status of the "reforms" promised in 1936.

20% Cancellation Emphasized

The advising film leaders stressed an unconditional 20 per cent cancellation concession to exhibitors as being of the utmost importance in answering arguments Monday of proponents of the block booking bill. They warned that while the trade practice negotiations over the past eight months may be of importance to distribution-exhibition, and a private issue, the general public now enters into the situation through the demands it is

Two More Trust Suits Hit Majors; U. S. Preparing for Ten New Actions

The major companies this week faced their third suit in Chicago on charges of violating Federal anti-trust laws. Adding to the Government's pending criminal action and to a civil suit filed by 100 independents, the eight large companies and Balaban & Katz last Friday were charged by Frank Ford, of the Stadium theatre, Evanston, with restraining trade.

The action was filed in Federal Judge Wilkerson's court by Attorneys Jacobson, Merrick, Nierman & Silbert, who seek treble damages and a jury trial.

Defendants were given 20 days to answer. The charges state that the Ford theatre suffered losses of $1,000 a week because of existing clearance, admission price arrangements, double feature clauses and block booking.

Suit charging the MPPDA and the eight majors with violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws was filed Tuesday in the United States District Court in New York by Lenrose Amusement Corporation, independent owner of a theatre in Newark, which asked the court for triple damages totaling $150,000.

The complaint, in naming the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in addition to the eight majors and a number of their subsidiaries, alleges that the Hays office is dominated by the majors, which dictate its policies. The majors are charged with price-fixing, block and blind selling, etc.

U. S. Prepares for More Trust Suits

Independent exhibitor complaints from Oklahoma City, Cincinnati and numerous other areas are being investigated by four representatives of the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, who are expected to be in the field for some time, it was learned at the Department in Washington this week.

The inquiries, it was disclosed, are in connection with the ten new film suits which Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold recently revealed he was planning and for which he unsuccessfully asked the House Appropriations Committee for an additional fund of $70,000 last month.

Officials of the Department emphasized that the current investigations are in connection with the suits which it is planned to initiate as soon as additional funds become available, and that they have no bearing on the New York suit which, it was pointed out, has proceeded too far for any amendment to bring in new matters.

Examination before filing of answers of Harry J. Muller, treasurer, and Edward C. Raftery, secretary of United Artists, scheduled to be conducted Monday by the Government in its New York trust suit against the majors, was postponed to April 5th at 2:00 in the afternoon.

The Government granted the adjournment upon request of Benjamin Pepper, of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raferty, attorneys for United Artists, who stated that Mr. Raftery was at present on the coast on business. The examinations will be held before W. J. Briggs, notary, at the Federal Court House.

Application of the Government to substitute seven persons, including James Roosevelt, as defendants in its New York anti-trust suit was granted Friday by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum.

James Roosevelt, Charles Schwartz, Emanuel Silverstone and Theodore Caruso were named in the United Artists group in place of Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, and Samuel Goldwyn who, under the decision, are dropped as defendants; Edward L. Weisl and George L. Bagnall, in place of Harold A. Fortington and Harry O. King in the Paramount Pictures group, and Henry Rogers Winthrop for William A. Phillips in the Loew's group.

At the same time Paramount News, Inc., which merged with Paramount Pictures in April, 1937, was dropped as a defendant.

Federal Judge William Bondy in New York signed an order directing the Government to file and serve its bill of particulars upon United Artists in its anti-trust suit. United Artists was authorized to serve its answer 20 days after receipt of the bill.

Motion to dismiss the amended petition without answering its merits were filed this week by defendants in the $5,000,000 anti-trust suits in Federal court at Oklahoma City, in which A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla., independent theatre operator, is plaintiff against major companies and theatre chains in Oklahoma.

REVISIONS PROMISED BACK IN 1936

about to make before Congress for the elimination of block sales.

"Right now, the public is concerned with trade practices only insofar as they make it possible for a local community to have some voice in the selection of motion pictures suitable to that community's tastes," said an official of the organized industry in New York Wednesday.

"However, he added, "the reforms possible from a program actually adopted would have great effect in defeating threatening legislation of the type of Senator Neely's, the passage of which would be disastrous to the entire business."

And So the Conferences

And so, on Tuesday, lawyers and committeemen of the major's trade practice negotiators assembled early in the Yacht Room on the eighth floor of the Hotel Astor, Times Square, conferring and arguing—and there were many arguments among them over concessions to be granted—late into the day. They returned by ten Wednesday morning, this time to larger quarters in the Astor's South Garden, on the tenth floor. Luncheon was served in the conference rooms, to save time.

The chances appeared about even after the second session that a formal plan would be approved in committee and, following formula of notification of adoption, would by the weekend be in registered-mail envelopes on their way to the Allied States Association, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and other interested parties of the other side.

On Wednesday, at 5:30 in the afternoon the conferees adjourned, without completing their work, to return to the Astor later in the week.

At the Meetings

At the meetings were William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, chairman of the negotiators; Austin Keough, counsel of Paramount Pictures; Neil Agnew, general sales manager of Paramount; Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia; Robert W. Perkins, general counsel of Warner Brothers; Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers; I. Howard Levinson, counsel of Warners; Ned Depinet, vice-president of RKO; William Mallard, attorney for RKO.

On the sideline was Edward F. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who, preparing to lead exhibitors of his organization to Washington to protest the Neely Bill, said, Wednesday, in New York, that he expected the major's committee to have "something by Monday to bring to the Neely hearings," adding, as an after-thought, "But, then, you know this business too well to think that these are the last meetings." Mr. Kuykendall was leaving New York Friday for Washington.

Not on the sideline, but equally interested, were the Allied States interests, which, as concentrated executively in Washington in the headquarters occupied by Abram F. Myers, general counsel, had only the other day completed another series of conversations with the majors on Allied's idea of what should be contained in a trade program.

And while the majors were continuing formulation of a program in New York, Mr. Myers was preparing to head-up the Neely bill proponents at Monday's hearings, Allied and the Motion Picture Research Council having giving the strongest support, if not actual sponsorship, of anti-block sales legislation in Congress.

And the Department of Justice

Also an interested observer, both in the trade program and in Monday's Neely bill hearings, was the Department of Justice, which is prosecuting the majors through a series of anti-trust suits (see box on opposite page.

Contents of the program of self-regulation and the expected concessions to exhibitors have for the most part been a matter of general knowledge for a long time—concerning exhibitors' limited playing time, preferred playing time, runs and existing customers, forced short subject sales, score charges, allocation of pictures, non-theatrical competition, form of license agreement, selective contracts, playing of pictures in order of release, circuits' acquiring of theatres, and so on.

Basically, the aforementioned subjects of distribution-exhibition dealings remain the same as at first proposed by the majors months ago. They have been clarified as to language.

However, the matters of cancellation of pictures under contract, and conciliation vs. arbitration as the system of adjudicating disputes between exchanges and theatres, have continued to be subjects of strong argument.

Also occupying the attention of this week's Astor conferees was the subject of clearance-and-protection. This had not been a part of the program as originally undertaken by the majors, but since the United States Supreme Court's decision in the Dallas-Hoblitzelle case, distributors have been studying the general subject of clearance.

Leaving Wednesday's session, one sales manager, carrying on the conversation of clearance with a colleague, was overheard to remark, "With clearance based on distance in one town, and on admission prices in another, how can we arrive at a general rule for determining clearance?" Those arguing most loudly said priority of one city over another was just as much a subject of argument as clearance of one theatre in a neighborhood over another in the same neighborhood, indicating the feeling of at least some of the conferees of the futility of a system agreeable to all.

New Clearance System Proposed

A move has been launched among independent exhibitors of Ontario for complete elimation of clearance and feature booking contracts and replacement of the present "protection" system with a policy of priority rentals governed largely by the geographical location and admission scales of theatres and the availability of prints but without the prescribed periods of time before subsequent booking. These bookings would be scheuled in quick sequence as soon as first release had been arranged.

Independents Urged to Act

Independent exhibitors of New York State were urged to be vocal in their demands for clearance reforms, at a meeting sponsored by New York Allied at the Hotel Syracuse, in Syracuse, last Thursday.

Max A. Cohen, president, told the attending owners of 100 upstate theatres that the independent exhibitors can exert influence to end unfair practices, and that his organization has fought to keep the trade practice negotiations alive so that disputes need not be settled by expensive litigation.

IATSE STRIKE IN NEW YORK FORCES EMERGENCY FILM DELIVERY SYSTEM

Assistant Attorney General Warns Against Anti-Trust Violations; Exchange Workers Refuse to Pass the Pickets

The most drastic labor threat in the motion picture business in years—the strike called on Monday in New York City by the Local 306, projectionists' union—spread slowly this week while union executives and officers of the parent International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees threatened that the entire film industry—from studios, home offices, laboratories, exchanges, to theatres—would be crippled unless major distributors ceased delivering film to exhibitors who employ non IATSE operators.

The IATSE's demands were objected to by the majors at once on the grounds of "illegality."

Justice Department Acts

The United States Department of Justice entered the case late Wednesday to look over possible anti-trust law phases of the union's demands as they might apply to the free flow of films in commerce. The Government's participation came after a visit made Tuesday by Colonel William J. Donovan of counsel for RKO, and senior counsel in the majors' trust suit defense, to Thurman Arnold, special assistant U. S. Attorney General in Washington. Neither side would admit that the conference pertained to the New York strike.

However, "G-Men" were assigned to investigate shortly thereafter. Meanwhile attorneys for the majors started preparation of injunction proceedings against the union with a lawyers' committee from MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount appointed to represent all of the distributors.

Mr. Arnold late Wednesday advised both sides against violation of the anti-trust laws.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in Washington, indicated he was greatly disturbed by the situation.

State Mediation Board Busy

The New York State labor mediation board, acting upon the suggestion of Fiorello H. LaGuardia, mayor of New York, continued meetings with the various exhibitor, distributor and union interests.

The state board was considering the legality of contracts between the Empire State Union and the Century and Cocalis circuits.

At a late hour picketing, in New York, of exchange buildings continued orderly. City policemen and Burns Detective Agency men were on detail.

With hundreds of New York theatres set to change programs Thursday and with a new addition of the five news reels due at the same time, the emergency system of distributing prints set up by the majors headed for the first severe test.

New York theatre owners, both circuit and independent, employing IATSE members, feared that the union would call out their projectionists.

OKLAHOMA LABOR ACT TITLE FOUND FAULTY

Because of a faulty title, the Oklahoma Wage and Hour Act cannot establish minimum wages for men and minors, that state's supreme court ruled this week. The court also ruled that the act, applying to hours for men and minors, and wages and hours for women workers, was constitutional.

The act provides for a commission to determine wage and hour conditions, in each industry. The motion picture industry, up to mid-week, had not been called for hearing.

Picketing Underway

At mid-week, projectionists in the New York home offices, exchanges and newsreel laboratories, had struck; all "44th Street" exchanges were being picketed; members of the Local 51B, exchange employees union, refused to pass the picket lines; and the exchanges were unable to service prints returned to them by theatres.

At the same time, exhibitor holders of Local 306 contracts, both independent and affiliated, upon the advice of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, were meeting with the state labor mediation board, to "settle the strike, perhaps; but more specifically, to find out what to do if the operators in our theatres walk out," in the words of one circuit head; and major company attorneys on Wednesday, were preparing an injunction appeal against union picketing, against the strike as it had then grown, and against possible striking by projectionists in theatres.

Branch managers of the major companies, appointed as an emergency committee by George J. Schaefer, executive head of RKO, met daily in the offices of Louis Nizer, film attorney, at 1501 Broadway, and drew up an emergency program, which was mimeographed and sent to exhibitors. This program called for what might be termed "legalized bicycling" of prints from one house to a subsequent run house. In detail, it follows:

Strike Explained

"The projection room operators of our exchange and home office have been called out on strike by Local 306. There is no dispute between this Local and our company over wages, hours or working conditions. It is demanded of our company, however, that we refuse delivery of our films to any theatre which does not employ a projection room operator of this particular Local. Our exchange is being picketed by operators of 306 and the shipping clerks and inspectors have been instructed not to pass through the picket lines. To comply with the demand of the Local would require us to breach contracts with many independent theatres. We are obliged, therefore, as an innocent party in this controversy, to endeavor to live up to our contracts by serving film to our customers.

"During the emergency of the strike, you will please comply with the following instructions in respect to film:

(1) "You will obtain information from our exchange concerning the theatre which is in possession of the print which you are subsequently to exhibit at your theatre.

"(2) At the time that you pay the license fee at our exchange, you will receive a written order directed to the theatre from which you are to receive the print authorizing the delivery of the print to you.

"(3) You will, through your agent or personally, present this written order to the theatre holding such print, and at the termination of the exhibition at said theatre and upon the surrender of the written order to it, you will receive the print for exhibition at your theatre.

"(4) You will deliver to your booth only such film as is necessary for current exhibition.

"(5) Upon the termination of your exhibition, the print should be returned from the booth to your own theatre manager, who shall, so far as he is able, examine to see that the film is in the same condition as when delivered.

"(6) You will then hold the print until there is presented to you by the subsequent run exhibitor, a written order signed by the Branch Manager of our exchange, authorizing delivery to such exhibitor. The written order shall be kept by you as your receipt.

"(7) You will immediately report to our exchange or to a central emergency bureau which is being organized for this purpose, any mishaps.

"Our company intends to fully comply with its contract with you irrespective of the hardships which may be entailed. You are asked to cooperate with these instructions in order to reduce to a minimum the inconvenience caused during this emergency."

Those forming the exchange executives' emergency committee were Harry Buxbaum, 20th Century-Fox; E. K. O'Shea, MGM; Charles Stern, United Artists; Milt Kusell, Paramount. Mr. Nizer's advice was asked on the legality of the procedure.

It had also been feared at first that the transfer of prints from one theatre to another, without the customary expert examination by a qualified film inspector, would result in damage to films.

Few Complaints

While exhibitors were not averse to the emergency procedure, picking up their own films, there were some complaints that the cost was boosting their total rental expenses.

On Wednesday, at the exchanges, with the remaining "white-collar" staffs "doubling in brass" as much as possible, there had been no interference of consequence with delivery of new film from exchange to theatre. Horlachers, members of which belong to Local 807, Truck Drivers' Union, refused to service theatres; but the rest of the carriers, members of the Film Carriers' Association, of which Morris Lane is president, carried film "as usual."

Members of Local 51B, the exchange employees' union, were uncommunicative. They hired a room in the Hotel Lincoln, which members used as headquarters. The union head, Lou Johnson, was out to callers, during Wednesday. When asked about the report, in exhibitor circles, that the exchange workers would be "glad" to resume work, and that Mr. Johnson had delivered an "ultimatum" to Local 306, demanding that the strike be successful by Thursday morning, and declaring that Local 51B members would cross the picket lines if it were not successful—or called off—the exchange workers' spokesman declared this "impossible," "untrue," and said, "We're all hanging together."

STATE MEDIATION BOARD IN ACTION

Mediation Meetings Begun

While distributor attorneys were formulating an injunction appeal, exhibitors holders of Local 306 contracts, led by Harry Brandt, president of the New York City Independent Theatre Owners, on Mayor LaGuardia's advice, met Tuesday afternoon at the offices of the New York State Mediation Board, 250 West 57th Street. Among those present were: Mr. Brandt, Marvin Schenck, of Loew's; W. French Githens, of the Newsreel Theatres; Samuel Rinsler and Emanuel Frisch, of the Randforce circuit: Lawrence Bolognino, of the Consolidated circuit, and Stanley Lawton. Their two-hour session with Commissioner of the Board Arthur S. Mayer, and Jules S. Freund, secretary, was followed the next day by consultations between lawyer-Judge Matthey Levy, of the Local 306. and the board heads. Further consultations between the board and the exhibitor heads were expected, and Mr. Freund anticipated bringing both sides together.

The quick action taken by the exhibitor holders of Local 306 contracts was in the belief that Local 306 would call out all theatre projectionists on Wednesday night.

At Local 306 headquarters, a spokesman denied the union contemplated such action. He said that such a move "would only hurt our own men. The strike is on; it is successful," he said; "and that is all we need."

Yet exhibitors who consulted the state mediation board remained unconvinced. Said Lawrence Bolognino, head of the Consolidated circuit:

"Our meetings with the board are for self-protection."

Charles Moscowitz, operating head of the Loew theatre circuit, denied that Local 306 had threatened his and other circuits with a strike on Wednesday night. But he did admit that the consultations with the mediation board were held because of the "possibility" of a strike.

"Everything is a possibility in this situation," he said.

Judge Levy, in commenting after his meeting with the board, said, apropos of other moves—the injunction proceedings by the distributors, against the union—that he "always remained in ignorance of these things, until they happen."

Court Fight Seen

At the offices of RKO, on Wednesday, it was hoped that the mediation board would settle the strike, and that moves for an injunction by major companies would be unnecessary; though it was not denied that the majors might move for an injunction.

An ITOA spokesman predicted "a long court battle" and said that the ITOA members were prepared to seek an injunction "the instant" Local 306 operators walked out of its members' theatres.

A late development in the strike along film row at 44th Street was the purported use of "private detectives" in those places where the screening of films was imperative.

The newsreels were faced on Wednesday with the possible refusal of their technicians, members of Local 702, Laboratory Technicians, to work. The Paramount News members received orders Tuesday night not to pass the Local 306 picket lines.

Local 306, on Wednesday, after it was observed that only film servicing, but not delivery, had been affected by the strike, was reported enlisting the aid of unionized taxi drivers, inasmuch as this method of transportation was used by some exhibitors.

QUIGLEY AWARD WINNER HONORED

A testimonial dinner was tendered to John Burhorn at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago Wednesday night by Alex Manta and Jack Rose of Indiana-Illinois theatres.

Mr. Burhorn, manager of the Gayety theatre, Chicago, was honored for his winning of the Quigley Grand Silver Award.

About 100 civic and film industry leaders attended the testimonial dinner at which Mayor Edward J. Kelly and southeast Chicago business and industrial leaders as well as film men spoke. Alderman William A. Rowan was toastmaster.

While, on Wednesday, exchange workers' union Local 51B was the second to join 306, it was expected that, besides Local 702, laboratory technicians, Local, 52, studio mechanics, Local 54, of cameramen, andLocal 1, stage hands, might join in New York City by the week's end, thus tying up stage presentations, production in the East, and all laboratory work.

The supply houses in New York's film district reported sale of many hand-operated projection machines; and many hand-operated "Movieolas" were in use this week.

The strike is the result not alone of the New York union's impatience at the delay in obtaining control of the labor front in New York City, but also of the policy, emphasized since 1936, reiterated last summer and again at Miami last winter by IATSE president George Browne, that everyone in the industry who handles film in any capacity must be an IATSE member. The labor situation, as Mr. Browne puts it, is the same as elsewhere; labor aims at domination of all those within its scope, and to achieve this must employ the methods used by labor outside the motion picture industry.

1,800 of 2,200 Voted Strike

The New York union, three weeks ago, authorized its executive board to call the strike "when necessary." Eighteen hundred of the union's estimated 2,200 members carried the vote. The union at the time made known its demands, and also that it would have the backing of the local IATSE affiliates, and, if necessary, the national. The IATSE officials. Joseph D. Basson, president of Local 306, George Z. Medalie, representing the unions, and Local 306 attorney, Matthew Levy, immediately entered negotiations with major company heads and attorneys. These reached a climax on Saturday, when George E. Browne, Mr. Basson and others met with Leo Spitz, former RKO president, Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, and others, and delivered the final ultimatum—a strike on Monday unless demands were met.

The demands, that the majors refuse to deliver films, through the exchanges, to such independent and circuit theatres in the New York area, which do not use Local 306 members, threatened the majors with the abrogation of their contracts with such theatres, possible Federal charges of conspiracy, and possible defeat in present Government anti-trust suits now pending in New York.

The attorneys for the major companies, on Tuesday, asked the advice of Federal Judge William Bondy, who, after a three-hour hearing, declared that they had best seek arbitration but also authorized the seeking of an injunction against the union, and advised the companies to meet their film delivery obligations to exhibitors "to the limit of practicability."

The Judge's advice was asked on the following theory: RKO is undergoing reorganization. Judge Bondy is in charge of the proceedings. He is familiar with the ramifications of the motion picture industry. RKO cannot legally act for itself, in a situation such as the present strike. The Irving Trust Company is the RKO receiver. It is not, theoretically, familiar with the strike situation. Hence, it must ask Judge Bondy's advice.

Donovan Presents Petition

Colonel William J. Donovan, of the law firm of Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, represented the Irving Trust Company, and presented the petition for advice to Judge Bondy. Attending the hearing also, among the major company attorneys and representatives, were Austin Keogh, of Paramount; H. Leopold Friedman and J. Robert Rubin, attorneys, of MGM; Robert Perkins, attorney, of Warner Brothers; A. H. McCausland, of Irving Trust Company; William Mallard, attorney, of RKO; Benjamin Pepper; Mitchell Klupt, attorney, of Century circuit. These persons attended as "interested parties," inasmuch as Judge Bondy's advice to Colonel Donovan indicated the procedure which might be followed by all the majors threatened by the IATSE action. Also present at the hearing was Matthew Levy, counsel for the Local 306, who denied many of the allegations in the petition.

The petition itself, presented to Judge Bondy by the Irving Trust Company, is a rather complete report of the existing situation, and a detailed analysis of RKO's and the major companies' reasons refusing the union's demands.

It says, first, that there is no dispute over wages and working conditions between the debtor, RKO, and the union.

It notes that the company has contracts with exhibitors who employ members of the Empire State projectionists' union, not Local 306 members; and that failure of such exhibitors to secure films, would "seriously prejudice the business of such exhibitors."

It appends a deposition from Leo Spitz, wherein is set down a relation of the meeting on Saturday, between Mr. Basson, Mr. Browne, and Mr. Schenck and Mr. Spitz, at which the union's threats of a strike were voiced.

Consequences Feared

It declares that the strike will have the following consequences:

1. Disruption and hampering of home office and exchange operation.
2. By extension of the strike, injury to exhibition business in the whole New York area; and a consequent loss of revenue to the company.
3. By extension of the strike to RKO theatres, the closing of such theatres.
4. In relation to the above, the petition adds: "Furthermore, in view of the threats of the unions with respect to ordering employees of exchanges other than projectionists, to strike, it is probable that such unions would order out on strike all other union employees who perform any other services in connection with the operation of such theatres. Thus the business of the Debtor (RKO) would be further embarrassed."

These possible consequences of the strike were read by all the major company attorneys as applying as well to the companies they represented, and those strike consequences to theatres would apply to other major affiliates, such as Loew's, Paramount, et al.

UNION DEMANDS FULL JURISDICTION

Legal Aspects Discussed

The petition then outlines the possible consequences from accession to the union demands, and finds them more serious. In fact, a meeting Sunday, at the New York offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, at which the refusal was finally issued to the union, was devoted mainly to the legal aspects of the situation; and it was generally agreed that the companies could not legally oblige the union, either by signing a contract with it guaranteeing its demands, by merely carrying out its demands, or even by inserting in future contracts with exhibitors a clause which would allow the distributor to refuse film should the exhibitor employ other than IATSE members. The petition, concisely, but completely, states the distributor dilemma, thus:

1. "Accession to the demands of the unions would necessitate an indefensible breach of . . . contracts by the Picture Company. This most certainly would subject it to damage suits for failure to perform its agreements."

2. RKO operates theatres. Those theatres compete with independent theatres who would be refused film if the union demands were met. "It is the opinion of your petitioner that the Picture Company would be charged with causing the damage resulting to such exhibitors by reason thereof, and would be charged with conspiring with the union for the purpose of injuring or eliminating competition."

See Damage Suits

3. Similar demands by the union have been made upon other companies. Should all companies agree to stop film delivery to theatres not employing 306 members, such theatres might have to close. If such theatres agreed to employ 306 members, the increased costs, too, might force them to close. "In either event, the charge would be made that the results were directly attributable to an illegal combination between the distributors and the union. . . . This would subject your petitioner and corporations affiliated with the debtor to a multiplicity of damage suits charging violation of the anti-trust laws."

4. Various actions at law and suits in equity have been instituted against RKO and other distributors, charging conspiracy to eliminate independent exhibitors, and so violate the anti-trust laws. "Particular reference is here made to a certain action now pending in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, in which the United States of America is plaintiff and in which such charges are made. Such charges have at all times been, and now are denied, by your petitioner and by the debtor. Nevertheless, it is the opinion of your petitioner that the taking of any such action such as demanded by said unions would be characterized as evidence that such charges were in effect true."

John J. O'Connor, general manager of the RKO Service Corporation, operating the RKO theatre chain in the New York area, asserted in an appended deposition that the chain would lose its gross income of approximately $40,000 per day, if the strike became operative in the chain. He added:

"It is a well-known fact in moving picture exhibition business that the loss of gross income from day to day is never recovered . . . whether or not said theatres are operated, the fixed costs and charges of operation will continue."

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, on Tuesday declared that if the exchanges continued to be practically paralyzed, all theatres in the Greater New York area might have to close. Mr. Shaefer was acting as spokesman for the major companies.

COLLEGE THEATRE HAS ADJUSTABLE WALLS

Nearing completion at the University of Wisconsin is a theatre building, all parts of which are capable of constant and multiple use, following plans "that presume culture, recreation and formal education are inevitably and deservedly interlocked in every scheme of living."

The main auditorium, through an elevator forestage, can be converted from a play setting into a concert stage and the size of the auditorium may be reduced to two-thirds or one-half its capacity of 1,300 through removable walls.

Recalling the notice posted on Sunday in film exchanges by the distributing companies, Mr. Schaefer reiterated:

"There is no dispute between Local 306 and the company over wages, hours or working conditions.

"The strike has been called solely to coerce your company to refuse delivery of its films to any theatre in Greater New York which employs a projection room operator who is not a member of Local 306.

"All projectionists in our New York exchange, home office and theatres within the jurisdiction of Local 306 have been for a long time and are now members of that local. To comply with the demands of Local 306 would require us to breach a large number of contracts with independent theatres which do not employ members of that Local.

"We have been advised that to join with Local 306 in taking action which would shut off our film from these theatres, would be in violation of law. We have, therefore, been compelled to refuse the demand of Local 306."

Exchange Operations Impaired

The strike began to impair film exchange operations Monday afternoon when Local 306 established picket lines in front of New York City's "44th Street" film exchanges. The exchanges themselves had already been affected by the strike, early Monday morning, by the influx of exhibitors and bookers, who, forewarned of strike action, were taking all available film. Monday and Tuesday are ordinarily busy days in the exchanges; on this Monday the exchanges were jammed.

The strike, termed a "slow-motion strike," because of the gradual employment of more and more IATSE affiliates in the strike, began to be effective when the night shift of film inspectors reported for duty Monday afternoon at four o'clock and refused to pass the picket lines. On Tuesday morning, some 400-odd members of the Local 51-B, Film Exchange Employees Union, comprising film inspectors, "back room" workers generally, refused to pass the picket lines, and the strike's first effort to partly paralyze distribution in New York, was successful.

The distributors' meeting at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors on Sunday had resulted not only in defiance of the union's demands but in the selection of a committee, headed by Mr. Schaefer, to "coordinate efforts to keep film moving." Judge Bondy's instructions on Monday to the Irving Trust Company attorney, and by implication to all the majors, to fulfill their obligations to the exhibitors, endorsed this earlier decision.

The Empire State union, a New York state rival of the Local 306, and called "a company union" by 306, has approximately 300 members, employed chiefly in the Cocalis and Century circuits and in independent Brooklyn houses, these altogether numbering about 75. The union's contract with Century expires in 1942, and that with Cocalis, in 1947. Local 306 officials charge that the contracts, so iron-bound (in their words) are in effect "company-union contracts"; and claim that the Empire members would like to join the 306 local, but are prevented from doing so by the contracts.

Distributors Have Next Move-Kirsch

"It's up to the distributors to make the next move," Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, said this week in Chicago when questioned regarding what action the 170 theatres he represents, plan to do when the new product buying season starts.

Mr. Kirsch said the matter of clearance is the important problem today and "when the distributors work out a more suitable clearance system most of their problems and ours will be ironed out." The independent theatrement, or at least 95 per cent of them, he feels, are anxious to return to single features. To make such a change is a matter for the distributors and the circuits to work out, he said.

The attitude expressed through William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, that his company would follow certain trade practices, was a move in the right direction, Mr. Kirsch said, adding that if other companies, realizing the situation the independent exhibitor now finds he is confronted with, would do as MGM has done "it would hasten the settling of many problems that now confront the industry."

Universal Announces Sales Meeting Dates

William A. Scully, Universal sales manager, announced Wednesday three regional sales meetings for 1939-40 product discussion starting April 15th in Cincinnati. Others will be April 18 to 20 in Chicago and April 22 to 24 in San Francisco. Nate Blumberg, president, will preside with Mr. Scully, F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager.

DALLAS DECISION NOT A PRECEDENT TO END CLEARANCE, SAYS ATTORNEY

Stephen P. Ladas, Copyright Lawyer, Believes Supreme Court Did Not Modify Owner's Right to Restrict Licensing

His best known treatise, "The International Protection of Literary and Artistic Properties," in two volumes, is included in "Harvard Studies in International Law."

Mr. Ladas will go to The Hague this summer to deliver a series of lectures on copyright before the International Copyright Convention.

The Supreme Court decision in the case of the Federal Government versus Texas Interstate and the large distributors, in which it was ruled that exhibition contracts under which distributors agreed, in concert, to set minimum admission prices for subsequent-runs and to prohibit double bill showings, was not sufficiently wide in scope to be construed as a condemnation of the clearance system in general, in the opinion of Stephen P. Ladas, copyright attorney of the firm of Langner, Parry, Card and Langner, New York.

Copyright Privileges Unaffected

Mr. Ladas, who has represented many of the major distributors at various times in copyright cases and is considered an expert in national and international copyright law, believes the decision in no way modified the right of a copyright owner to include certain prohibitions and restrictions in the licensing of a work and that because of the special local features of the case in question it cannot be held to be a precedent for other situations.

The immediate reaction in motion picture distribution quarters to the Supreme Court's Dallas decision, handed down in February, was that it would mean the end of clearance-protection as presently constituted in a dozen or more cities where admissions charged govern the clearance given to theatres. In this, however, both the lawyers of the companies and their outside advisory counsel even now still disagree.

One group frankly admitted that they "wished they knew" the general effect of the specific decision on clearance. Expressing typical opinion, Irving Kohn, of Paramount's legal staff, said: "There are as many different opinions as there are lawyers," and from RKO's legal staff came the admission that they have been unable to establish the full significance of the decision in its relation to other territories.

Argue Over Meaning

The main group of film lawyers, however, holds that, while the opinion accompanying the decision sets forth clearly the views of the court in this particular instance, and infers what the court's reasoning will be on similar cases in the future, there can be no final interpretation at this time until another such case is decided by the court to show that this line of reasoning will continue.

The subject was entirely new, in a field new to the court, the lawyers hold.

Regardless, both groups of lawyers still are arguing over the definite meaning of the decision and over how far the court will go in future decisions, both admitting that, in the final analysis, the opinion accompanying the present decision can be altered with other circumstances in other cases.

If and when the court establishes that it will continue its present line of reasoning, it is certain that existing clearance systems based on admissions charged will have to be abandoned, including those in Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis and some other territories.

Continuing his analysis, Mr. Ladas claims that Owen J. Roberts, U. S. supreme court justice, who wrote the minority dissenting opinion, overstated the effect of the decision in his statement: " 'Under the decision here, however, if a distributor should agree with a first-run house that if it will contract for a given feature picture at a given price the distributor will impose a clearance on second-run houses this would be a conspiracy in restraint of trade.'

"I do not believe that this is the purport of the decision," Mr. Ladas continued. "The kernel of the decision is in the following statement of Justice Stone:

" 'Granted that each distributor, in the protection of his own copyright monopoly was free to impose the present restrictions upon his licensees, we are nevertheless of the opinion that they were not free to use their copyrights as implements for restraining commerce in order to protect Interstate's motion picture theatre monopoly by suppressing competition with it. The restrictions imposed upon Interstate's competitors did not have their origin in the voluntary act of the distributors or any of them."

New Elements Involved

"The situation the court was dealing with had several elements which are not present in the simple contract providing for clearance referred to by Justice Roberts. Indeed:

"(a) This was not an agreement between a distributor and a first-run theatre but an agreement between several distributors and a large circuit.

"(b) The agreement in imposing restrictions or prohibitions (against double feature and defining admission price) did not cover only the distributors' own copyrighted pictures but pictures of other copyright owners as well. As Justice Stone said: 'It does not follow that the owner of a copyright can dictate that other pictures (i. e., not his own) may not be shown with the licensed film or the admission price which shall be paid for an entertainment which includes features other than the particular picture licensed.'

"The clearance system itself is not condemned by the court. Justice Stone states explicitly: 'The case is not one of the mere restriction of competition between the first showing of a copyrighted film by Interstate and a subsequent showing of the same film by a licensee of the copyright owner.'

"Not Voluntary Act"

"(c) The agreement was not the voluntary act of the distributors. 'They,' the court says, 'gave effect to the will and were subject to the control of Interstate. . . . Interstate was able to acquire the control and impose its will by force of its monopoly of first run theatres. . . .' and further: 'The fact that the restrictions may have been of a kind which a distributor could voluntarily have imposed, but did not, does not alter the character of the contract as a calculated restraint upon the distribution and use of copyrighted films moving in interstate commerce.'

"This is the reason that the lower court's injunction against the double feature restriction excepted from its operation two distributors, and the agent of one of them which had previously made a practice of including such a restriction in their license agreements.

"(d) The restrictions were not a mere 'clearance,' as Justice Roberts said. They were, as the court found, harsh and arbitrary restrictions on the subsequent run exhibitors.

"It seems to me that the decision of the Supreme Court in this case is rather narrow in its scope. Broad language is carefully avoided by Justice Stone who appears to circumscribe it to the facts of the case."

Will Study Treatment Of Animals in Hollywood

A Hollywood investigaiton of charges of cruelty to animals in film sequences will be made by Eric H. Hansen, general manager, American Humane Association, with headquarters in Albany, N. Y. The AHA, which recently charged the producers of "Jesse James" with cruelty to horses, says it has more than 30,000 individual signatures on the anti-animal abuse subject.

Mr. Hansen said that several years ago Will H. Hays had worked out a plan whereby the American Humane Association would name a representative to sit with the Code Administration to watch out for "inhuman treatment of animals," and added that at the time the AHA was financially unable to adopt the agreement.

Mr. Hansen, in pointing out that the AHA is opposed to the use of the "Running W" in pictures (a method of wiring the front legs of horses so as to trip them at top speed), said, "I am in hopes of finding a formula that will save animals and free the industry from charges of cruelty."

National Decency Legion Classifies Eleven Films

Of 11 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage, three were found unobjectionable for adults, one was listed as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Mexicali Rose," "Mr. Moto in Danger Island," "North of the Yukon," "Rough Riders Round-Up," "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "Prison without Bars," "Sergeant Madden." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Crossroads" (Carrefour) (French). Class C, Condemned: "With a Smile" (Avec Le Sourire) (French).

SCREEN'S UNFETTERED CAPACITY PROVED BY PICTURES, SAYS HAYS

Annual MPPDA Report Finds That Entertainment Film Can Record Today's Thought with No Propaganda Taint

Will H. Hays, reporting as president to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at its annual meeting on Tuesday, made his first extended statement of position on the subject of the social functions of the screen.

That subject, given primary importance in his yearly report, was reviewed with the conclusion that it represented a conflict which "was more often apparent than real."

Commenting on industry issues, Mr. Hays discussed developments in trade practice negotiations and the Government suit. He outlined the complex economic structure of the industry, its service to the Government and to society, and said that "the vital elements of this great entertainment structure cannot be easily destroyed."

Mr. Hays' report to his directors also included a wide range of subjects from a summary of the foreign situation to statistical reports of the activities of the departments of his office.

Discusses Social Functions

Referring to the rising tide of discussion of the social functions of the motion picture, Mr. Hays' report said:

"In a period of great tension in world affairs, the conflict of opinion, however, as between those who would preserve the motion picture theatre as a center of popular recreation and those who would emphasize the social import of the art was more often apparent than real.

"It is not so long ago that thrilling action for its own sake was considered satisfying 'movie'; that the custard pie was the symbol of hilarity and amusement from the screen; that the chase was sure-fire entertainment technique; that boy meets girl supplied all the drama that a motion picture audience apparently demanded.

"Whatever may have been the merits or demerits of each picture from an artistic standpoint, today competent critics, in and out of the industry, are able to point to a succession of pictures which dramatized present-day social conditions, which exposed slum areas in many of our great cities, which placed in true perspective the problems of medicine and medical care, which dealt with issues of war and peace, which discussed the values of our present-day democracy and emphasized the traditions that have made this nation great.

"The fact that the screen has handled successfully themes of contemporary thought in dramatic and vivid form and presented the subject matter as splendid entertainment, rather than propaganda, proves how much it can do today, and how much more it can do tomorrow.

"It was inevitable that the scope of screen entertainment would be greatly enlarged with improved dramatic technique and higher standards of appreciation to a point where the screen would become more and more socially and educationally important. Actual experience has proven that artistry can treat on the screen any subject within the boundaries of good taste and sound morals under the Motion Picture Production Code. And any means any—even those subjects that serve the important purpose of complete relaxation, that shout no message, point no moral or teach no lesson."

CENSORS INVITE PUBLIC COMPLAINTS

Theatre patrons in Portland, Ore., who object to pictures which have been passed by the municipal Board of Review, or who have any complaint against the operations of the Board, will be invited to make their complaints direct to the board hereafter.

Orders have been issued by the Board that hereafter all such objectors were to be invited to take their complaints direct to the board where the objections may be aired and the protest against the pictures considered.

The motion to provide for these hearings hereafter was made by Ted Gamble, manager of J. J. Parker Theatres and seconded by Ed Weinbaum of the Board.

From time to time complaints are made to the office of the board by persons who do not agree with the board's judgment in passing a picture and the censors held that these persons should have a chance to air their views.

Declaring that the objectives must be to provide the masses with good recreation at a moderate cost, Mr. Hays pointed out that "there is constantly being impressed upon the industry the importance of developing within itself those methods and relationships best calculated to enable it to produce the best pictures at proper cost and to market this entertainment service in the fairest and most efficient manner."

The report further said:

"Developments during the year in the field of motion picture trade practices, which are quite outside the authority of this association, indicate the possibility of constructive adjustments highly important to the future of the industry. . . .

"As to the trade practices raised for legal determination in the Government's suit in equity, the motion picture industry has welcomed any such constructive effort by the Department of Justice."

Report Covers Foreign Situation

The report recited the preeminent leadership of American motion pictures in international markets, reiterated the contribution of American motion pictures to the expansion of American trade and American goodwill.

On this subject the report said:

"The significance of America's leadership in motion picture production was never clearer than today.

"From the standpoint of government, it is evident that American pictures distributed abroad are a great factor in building goodwill and understanding of our way of life and the hope that is in democracy for free men everywhere.

"This is the contribution made by an industry, operating entirely on private capital, without government subsidy, protective quotas, or barriers against the competition of pictures produced in any other country.

"From the standpoint of American trade and industry, it is inevitable that our great entertainment films should be the messengers of our foreign trade in every field where they are exhibited."

Services of the Association

Mr. Hays' report reviewed in detail the things that the association has done in the last year in the direction of industry relations with groups concerned with civic, public and educational activities.

The report commented upon the success of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and the growing popularity of family entertainment films, the increase in production of patriotic and historical pictures, the cooperation by member companies in the development of motion pictures in education, the reportorial accomplishments of the American newsreels and their world-wide services, and quoted at length a report of approbation from members of the Public Relations Committee.

Report Commends Hollywood

Referring to the spotlight of public interest which blazes on Hollywood, the report declared that "there are few communities in the United States in which members display greater civic or patriotic consciousness, where a larger proportion is represented in worthwhile social movements, or where a greater number contribute more generously of their time, money and effort to help the needy."

Statistical reports included the activities of the Production Code Administration, the Advertising Code Administration and the Fire Prevention Bureau.

Directors and Officers Reelected

The following directors were reelected: Nicholas M. Schenck, Barney Balaban, Nate Blumberg, Jack Cohn, E. B. Hatrick, Sidney R. Kent, Sol Lesser, E. W. Hammons, Will H. Hays, Cecil B. DeMille, F. L. Herron, George J. Schaefer, Hal E. Roach, Maurice Silverstone, Albert M. Warner and Harry M. Warner.

The following officers were reelected: Will H. Hays, president; Carl Milliken, secretary; F. L. Herron, treasurer; George Borthwick, assistant treasurer.

Employee Insurance Provided by Circuit

Four group insurance coverages have been provided for employees of Gibraltar Enterprises, according to Charles R. Gilmour, president. With general offices in Denver, the corporation operates 32 theatres in 24 cities in Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Nebraska.

The quadruple group protection, underwritten by Equitable Life Assurance Society, comprises group life, accidental death and dismemberment, accident and health, and hospitalization insurance. Amounts of insurance for individual empyloyees are based on earnings, with a top sum of $3,000 provided for each of the first two coverages; maximum weekly payments of $40 during disability resulting from non-occupational accident or sickness, and a $5 a day maximum payment during confinement in a hospital. Gibraltar will pay approximately one-half of the premiums for the four coverages.

SLEEPING ON SOUTH AMERICA: LOEW; ROME COMPROMISE POSSIBLE: KELLY

Playing All Top Pictures at Same Time Handicaps Great Market, Says Loew's Vice-President

All in the industry, Hollywood and New York, "seem to have been taking a Rip Van Winkle attitude towards distribution in South America," Arthur M. Loew, in active charge of the foreign department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and, since 1927, first vice-president of Loew's, Inc., said this week on his return from the MGM sales convention in Chicago. Mr. Loew had completed an extensive foreign tour before the convention.

South America is "a great country for pictures, and always has been," Mr. Loew declared.

Clearance Problem

One difficulty in the South American market, he pointed out, is the lack of organized clearance, under the "Tourno" system. Both exhibitors and distributors suffer, he said, because outstanding films are played all at once, under the "Tourno" plan, with the exception of certain first-run situations. The average theatre has a "peso week," a "75 centavo" week, and the like, with distributors forced to put out their best product when the admission prices are highest, resulting in lowered receipts for both theatre and distributor. This situation holds throughout Argentina.

Saying that MGM had started to intensify its efforts in South America long ago, Mr. Loew added that, although there were no new film markets that haven't been touched, "a lot of old ones could be improved," those particularly in South America.

Some Markets "Encouraging"

Despite the world picture, Mr. Loew declared that "we have some markets that are still encouraging."

The substitution of German currency for Czechoslovakian, which executives of foreign department call the end of American films marketing in the Czech territory, has already taken place, according to Mr. Loew. The Czechoslovakian 10-crown piece, which was valued at 30 cents, has been exchanged for one German mark. Although the official rate of exchange makes the mark worth 40 cents, the rate given the film companies makes the mark exchangeable for an American nickel. Under this system of making German currency expensive to purchase but cheap so far as foreign exchange is concerned, the majority of American companies, he said, now will find it unprofitable to sell to Czechoslovakia, with German currency the coin of the realm. MGM, however, still sells about 10 films a year in Germany.

Says Axis Offers Films at No Cost

"The German and Italian producers have decided to maintain by all means their foothold on the Latin American markets and especially the Argentinian, which is the most important one," said the Revista del Exhibidor of Buenos Aires on February 28th. "To reach their end, they would be willing to make use of the 'dumping,' offering their pictures not only for less than their cost but gratis. The distributors would only have to pay for the custom house duties and for the prints.

"This news has been published by a daily of 'antitotalitarian' ideas. But there must be some truth in the report, as they offer to furnish the names of the ones who will be in charge of the distribution of these films.

"It is a well-known fact that both Italy and Germany are working hard in order to oust the United States from the place they hold in the Spanish American markets. The North American Government has been denouncing for some time the 'dumping' which the totalitarian countries are effecting.

"The danger is great, and it is very convenient that our authorities take note of it in time. The dumping is an unlawful arm and should not be allowed in our markets. The other aspect of the problem is even worse; we refer to allowing propaganda of ideas strange to our country and which are against our institutional organization. The German movies have lost their former prestige because they have made of it a media to serve as propaganda for the Social State which controls the industry.

"For a long time we have been struggling to maintain politics away from the movies and the countries which have committed the error of using their films for propaganda must be content to use them inside their borders and where they serve as spiritual message to their peoples."

Direct Operation with Exhibitors in Italy, Paying Tax to Monopoly, Has Been Proposed, Says United Artists Vice-President

A rapprochement is possible between Italy and American film distributors but there is an ever-growing fear of Germany's increasing power in Europe, according to Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists' vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, who returned to New York last Thursday after five months in Europe and Africa.

South Africa "Understanding"

Mr. Kelly said there is "understanding" between United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox whereby both would provide product for a group of independent theatres in South Africa in opposition to the Consolidated interests.

The United Artists executive saw a "probably complete loss of the Czechoslovakian market" with the substitution of the German reichsmark for the Czech crown.

The thought has been thrown out to the ENIC (Ente Nazionale Industrie Cinematografiche), the Italian film monopoly, to permit the American companies to operate directly with the exhibitors, paying a tax to the monopoly, he said. This fee would be reduced "as things got better," the amount to hinge upon the foreign exchange situation. Under this plan, American companies would be enabled to take out a sizable proportion of their revenues. Mr. Kelly said he had discussed the situation with officials of the ENIC in Paris, although the plan had been submitted by neither the Italians nor the American companies.

Outlined at MPPDA Meeting

At a recent meeting of foreign department executives at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, it was indicated that no proposal for the resumption of shipments of film to Italy would be given any consideration unless made by official sources. Mr. Kelly outlined the plan to the meeting.

The Italian officials, according to Mr. Kelly, think America "doesn't understand" their economic situation. Said Mr. Kelly: "They thought America would sooner have half a loaf than no loaf." Having no foreign exchange, the Italians cannot permit the industry to build up large balances against it, and do not intend to pay what the films normally would earn in the territory, he explained.

However, with the exception of the "crises" period last September, he said, the unsettled European situation has not caused any appreciable drop in box office grosses in France and England.

The English Denham and Pinewood studios have combined, with Captain Richard Norton managing director. Now known as the "D and P" studio, credits up to 25 per cent are being given.

United Artists has added two English producing units: the Aldrich Company, whose first film will be "An Englishman's Home," and Jack Hilton and Jack Buchanan, who will coproduce "The Band Wagon."

The French picture business, which Mr. Kelly said was in "a very healthy state," is "going through the same stage that Hollywood did," with films now costing between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 francs to produce. One of the main reasons for the increase in production costs is the higher salary demanded by the stars, who now ask up to 600,000 francs a picture.

The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle

(RKO Radio)

Biography of Dance and Song

Public interest in biography on the motion picture screen takes yet another direction in "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle." The Napoleons, large and little, the de Lesseps, the Zolas have been served to the patronage. Now comes the trend toward biography of the mass famous, of personalities of special interest among the commonalty. "The Great Ziegfeld" was a forerunner; "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" marks the spotting of the biography of entertainment itself, and specifically dance and song, as a legitimate and sparkling motion picture subject.

Twenty-seven years ago appeared "Too Much Mustard," new syncopated rhythm, with this cover on the printed music. It proved to be more than a new rhythm; it marked the start of the dancing career of the Castles, in Paris.

In the pre-war era when the popular song already had run the gamut of "sophistication"—after emerging from the sentimental yearnings of the nineties—and the songsters were declaiming "My Wife's Gone to the Country, Hooray," "Don't Take Me Home" and "I'd Like to See a Little More of You," the tunesmiths and lyricists abruptly turned from declarations of domestic independence to tickling the toes with irresistible rhythms.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" started the nation's feet shuffling in syncopated hoofing, while the Turkey Trot, the Bunny Hug and other terpsichorean imitations of the animal kingdom at play became the rage.

The refinement of these lusty gyrations and the evolution of the dance from "The Darktown Strutter's Ball" to the Maxixe and the "Rose Room Tango" point up the most interesting decade in the progress of the dance and the rhythmic formulae of the popular song of the Twentieth Century. That this development was due virtually to the efforts of one noted dancing team, which originated and set the pace for a dancing furore that kept the country literally in a whirl and on its toes awaiting the next innovation, is something more than a legend.

"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," as brought to the screen by RKO Radio, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers impersonating the Castles, bears the seal of authenticity and sincerity. Based on the biographies "My Husband" and "My Memories of Vernon Castle," by Irene Castle, the picture unfolds the career of the Castles from Vernon's first meeting with Irene Foote, daughter of a New Rochelle, N. Y., doctor, reveals Mr. Castle in his early stage work as a stooge to Lew Fields in the burlesque barbershop scene in "The Henpecks"; the courtship and marriage of Vernon and Irene; traces their dancing career from that memorable night in 1912 in Paris when the dynamic dancers showed the boulevardiers of the Champs Elysees how to step to the newly introduced syncopated rhythm of "Too Much Mustard"; trails them through their European triumphs and whirlwind tour of the United States; through the War down to the tragedy of the flying field at Fort Worth, Texas, when Vernon took his last tragic flight in the air maneuvers.

This film translation of the story of the Castles is something more than a dramatic biography that convinces because of its verity. It is a veritable musical-tone chronology that tells a rhythmic-tone story all its own of a decade as rich and as racy in its popular music as the era was hectic and lurid. It will evoke nostalgia in those old enough to remember, and provoke the younger generation to singing, humming and whistling, with such famous old songs as "The Yama Yama Man," "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," "Josephine in My Flying Machine," "Every Little Movement," "The Darktown Strutter's Ball" and "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," to name but a few of the 30 song hits of the period between 1910 and 1917 utilized in the score and an essential motivating factor in the action of the story.

But the reel keynote of this Castles production, as was the keynote of the decade it portrays, is action. The popular music of that time interpreted the high tension of the era, and was galvanized into jazzy dance rhythms. It served as an emotional safety valve to a world keyed up to a high pitch by recurring crises.

The production throughout is geared to this pace and tension, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers stepping high, wide and handsome in the footsteps of the famous actors they portray. And those who know their dance steps and recall the Castles in their triumphs of the Castle Walk, the One Step, the Maxixe, will make no apologies for their interpreters in this film story of their career. Astaire and Rogers have never done a better piece of team work, nor one that strikes a deeper note of genuine appeal. There is a conviction of reality in their re-creation of the two who made dance history—a sense of true romance that transcends fiction, with never a false overtone in the straining for effect. Fred Astaire himself might serve as the prototype of Vernon Castle. Miss Rogers gives an acutely sensitive and appealing characterization of Irene Castle. Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan and Lew Fields are featured in a strong supporting cast.

"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" should please every type of audience, old and young, musical and dramatic, sophisticated and naive. Exploitation possibilities are unlimited.

The Kid from Texas

(MGM)

Action Romance

Before "The Kid from Texas" reaches its entertainment highlight, a wild and woolly polo game between a team of cowboys and Indians and a club recruited from the Long Island smart set, it develops considerable amusement. Featuring Dennis O'Keefe as a bragging, self-confident buckaroo, and Florence Rice, a socialite, the picture also presents Jessie Ralph, Buddy Ebsen, Virginia Dale, Anthony Allen, Robert Wilcox, J. M. Kerrigan and Tully Marshall, in audience pleasing characterizations.

The melodramatic and romantic tangle between "Texas Bill Malone" and the smart "Margo Thomas" serves as the framework on which various production details are hung. The locales are the Texas prairies and swank Long Island mansions and polo fields. Comedy highlights preceding the climactic laugh riot are "Bill's" absurd polo antics on the range, his dousing of "Margo" in a creek, his serenade that backfires and his appearance in the East demanding he be permitted to play polo. The romance between the pair, which is of the on-again, off-again variety, is complicated when "Bill," winning a place in the affections of "Aunt Minetta," tries to knock sense into spoiled society darlings. "Bill's" saving of the rodeo adds fuel to the fire when sharpshooter "Okay Kinney" falls in love with him. He makes a deal to marry her to spite "Margo" if his team of cowboys and Indians beats the society club. His team wins but "Okay" realizes "Bill" does not love her and steps aside for "Margo" who finally knows she knows a man when she sees one.

While the picture includes considerable dialogue, most of which is comedy in nature, there is enough action to suit the most rabid excitement fans. The contributions made by Buddy Ebsen, Jessie Ralph, as well as a bit checked in by Virginia Dale, add zip beyond that from O'Keefe and Miss Rice.

Wuthering Heights

(UA-Goldwyn)

Emotional Melodrama

Distinguished by earnest performances, telling direction and intelligent writing, this studious picturization of the early Victorian novel by Emily Bronte is typical of Samuel Goldwyn production at its polished best. On the commercial side there are important names for the marquee, both as to cast and off-screen personnel, and the reaction of a Hollywood preview audience composed of persons not given to weeping on slight provocation was such as to suggest that exhibitors who inform their customers that the film offers the women ample reason to relax in a good cry may be justified in expecting those who come in to go out and tell those who didn't to be sure to do so at the first opportunity.

The name of Laurence Olivier has been much in the public prints of late and he is much in the camera's eye as the story of "Wuthering Heights" unfolds, in fact slightly more so than Merle Oberon, although the two are well matched both as to emphasis and performance. David Niven, whose box office stock has been rising steadily, and Donald Crisp, a permanent screen asset, are others whose presence rates marquee billing. It is as well, too, to start spreading the name of Geraldine Fitzgerald across the record, for her portrayal of the secondary feminine role is of a sort to explain fully the recently announced intention of Warner Brothers, her contract employers, to give her top line assignments in future pictures.

The veteran team of Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur is a decidedly mentionable exploitation factor, by past record and particularly on the basis of the present script. These young men have had their good moments and their bad moments, with the screen, but this time they have been utterly serious in their approach to the subject matter, and when Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur turn serious they have, so to speak, a very great deal on the ball. They do their very notable best with this assignment.

William Wyler's direction is in the tone and manner of the melancholy story and the gloomy setting. By recurrent use of the oral narrator introduced early in the picture and represented as telling the story, he repeatedly emphasizes the psychological aspect of the events, and preserves, without stressing, the mystical quality of the whole.

The scene is England in about 1850 and thereafter. An intense daughter of a distinguished father grows to maturity in continued childish enslavement to an orphan with gypsy tendencies kept on as stable boy by her cruel brother. They enjoy passionate moments together on the moor. In her less emotional phase, she marries a wealthy neighbor, after which she is relatively happy until her beloved returns from far places wealthy enough to buy her former home, "Wuthering Heights," as his residence. Her husband's young sister is fascinated by the returned eccentric and he marries her in reprisal. The passionate lovers are reunited briefly as the girl is dying, after which the man spends lonesome years in his austere house until, fancying he hears his departed beloved calling him in the winds of a blizzard, he rushes to their old trysting place on the moor and dies there.

It is not, as the foregoing paragraph reveals, a story to be lightly told. It is not lightly told in the picture. It is feelingly, tensely and coherently told in the ablest terms and with pointed effect. It is mature in every sense.

Torchy Runs for Mayor

(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

As swift and actionful as its predecessors, or more so, this edition of the continuing adventures of the girl reporter and the plainclothes man contains just about all of the excitement that can be coherently packed into an hour of screen time. Reporter and detective are still on the verge of matrimony at the start of it and still there when it ends. Both meanwhile have had narrow escapes from death in various forms.

Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane and Tom Kennedy play their accustomed roles and John Miljan plays the villain behind the city government whose nefarious operations the girl reporter sets out to expose. She uses a dictograph, and other things, to obtain evidence, and he uses everything from murder by intravenous injection to plain firearms in defense of his infamous interests and personal security. She wins out, of course.

The screen play by Earle Snell is a steadily developed continuity based on the idea derived by Irving Rubine from the characters created by Frederick Nebel. Ray McCarey, who directed for associate producer Bryan Foy, emphasized action throughout.

Mexicali Rose

(Republic)

Western

The primary information is that the production is a Gene Autry western. It has been produced with the same care as all the Autry series and has all the requisites of an entertaining western. As indicated by the title, the theme song is the popular and melodious "Mexicali Rose," cleverly introduced and made a real part of the story.

Autry is in good voice. His sidekick, Smiley Burnett, is, as should be expected, very much in the picture. The girl in the case, Luana Walters, shows more spirit than is usual in westerns. Two favorites of another day are in the film, William Farnum and Noah Beery.

"Gene" is a singer on a radio program sponsored by a wildcat oil development company. "Anita," niece of "Padre Dominic" (the two operate an orphanage), informs "Gene" that the company is a fake. He resigns and starts to investigate the oil field.

Sherlock Holmes Lives Again

This is a quite direct picturization of the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle story of the same name. Basil Rathbone portrays the great Sherlock Holmes in completely satisfactory manner and Nigel Bruce's performance as the faithful Dr. Watson is straight from the Doyle text. The film is so precisely the book, in substance, tone and spirit, that the obvious exploitation cue is for a straight campaign addressed to the millions who have read it and such other millions as may not have got around to reading it but have meant to some time, and now, under the circumstances, needn't.

The Doyle technique for creating an atmosphere of gloom, mystery and suspense is duplicated by Ernest Pascal's play, by Sidney Lanfield's direction and by the performances of Lionel Atwill, John Carradine, Nigel de Brulier and Beryl Mercer, the principals chiefly charged with creating audience apprehension. Richard Greene and Wendy Barrie take care of the romantic side of the story, given more prominence than in the printed original but still secondary.

The well remembered story is about a hound, rumored to be something of a phantom, which roams the moor in savage hostility to the successive masters of the House of Baskerville. Friends of the family bring the matter to the attention of the famous criminologist, who solves the mystery by a process of hypothetical deduction, personal investigation and, of course, disguise.

Mr. Rathbone's enactment of the Holmes role is a business-like job. He looks the part and talks it. He plays the fiddle once or twice, briefly, but he does not resort to the needle for inspiration, surcease or other reason during the picture. First, and last, reference to it comes in the final line of dialogue when, leaving the Baskerville drawing room for his chambers after announcing himself fatigued by his exertion, he calls back to his associate, "Watson—the needle." Dr. Watson picks up his medicine case and follows him out of the picture.

Society Lawyer

(MGM)

Crime Melodrama

A remake of "Penthouse," issued in 1933, "Society Lawyer" is now, as then, a thrilling story of crime and society, of murder and romance, aptly blended for adult entertainment. It is a fast-moving story of an attorney high in the social scale who, having won the friendship of a gangster by defending him, becomes embroiled in an investigation of a murder of a girl by her gangster ex-sweetheart.

Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo, Eduardo Ciannelli and Lee Bowman have the roles originally played respectively by Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Nat Pendleton, C. Henry Gordon and Phillips Holmes. In support are Frances Mercer, Ann Morris, Herbert Mundin, Frank M. Thomas, Edward S. Brophy, Tom Kennedy, Clarence Kolb, Pierre Watkin, Ian Wolfe, Paul Guilfoyle and Joseph Crehan.

The new version adheres faithfully to the 1933 Arthur Somers Roche narrative, which originally appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The preview audience found some of its situations sophisticated and the dialogue smart and breezy. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich, who wrote the screenplay in 1933, Leon Gordon and Hugo Butler are credited with the "Society Lawyer" script. Edwin L. Marin directed the John W. Considine, Jr., production.

"Chris Durant" undertakes the defense of "Phil," to whom "Durant's" sweetheart becomes engaged, when "Phil" is arrested for the murder of a girl. "Durant," with the aid of his gangster friend, "Gazotti," and "Pat Abbott," night club singer who has become enamoured of the attorney, solves the murder, and "Gazotti" pays his debt by killing the real murderer and his henchmen.

Rollin' Westward

(Monogram)

Western

All the ingredients for a bang-up, action packed western are included in "Rollin' Westward." There's plenty of excitement. The love interest has been woven in intelligently. The comedy takes a somewhat new trend. Music is included, particularly Tex Ritter's "Back in '67," a topical number, in such a way that it gives meaning to the varying plot amplifications. The first purpose of "Rolling Westward" is to entertain the youngsters and those who prefer all the action and excitement possible on the screen.

Land grabbers "Watkins" and Haines" are making things unpleasant for cattle men, particularly "Lawson." A singing and fighting buckaroo, "Tex" becomes an innocent operative in the swindle. Soon, however, when his attention is attracted to "Betty Lawson," he sees things in their true light. By this time, the outlaws have taken things into their own hands. "Tex," first making his position clear to "Betty" and her father, and with the help of "Missouri," takes care of "Watkins" and "Haines" in true cowboy hero fashion and, after breaking up a lynching party that would make "Lawson" its victim, he settles down to a quiet married life.

Ritter's name value as a marquee asset, together with the reputation which his previous films produced by Ed Finney have built up, are the firm's primary exploitation values.

Bizarre Bizarre

(Lenauer International)

Gallic Burlesque

A printed program said the film had been made "with malice toward none—except the British," but the laugh aimed at the Thames rebounds to the Seine.

The story is not likely to cause American audiences to "roll in the aisles," but the personnel and performance of the cast should sustain a minor degree of interest. There are Francoise Rosay of "Carnival in Flanders" and "Un Carnet de Bal"; Louis Jouvet, also of "Dance Program" note; Jean Louis Barrault, playing what appears to be the reverse of his insane murderer role in "The Puritan," and Michel Simon, Gallic comedian. The direction of Marcel Carne is unsteady, a circumstance which is not fully offset by the adequate English titles, for full appreciation of the Gallic narration will be obtained only by those patrons who understand French.

The plot is of the "screwball" variation. The characters are a mild mannered botanist who masquerades under a pseudonym as a writer of blood and thunder thrillers; a social climber of a wife; a blue nosed clergyman, father of a large family and follower of a chorus girl; a butcher of butchers; a zany of a milkman; a young girl who left the Salvation Army because she found the music sad; a reporter who falls asleep to solve his crimes, and a young man without a family who goes mourning whenever anyone is murdered. All these odd personages are involved in a murder plot that is not one.

La Bete Humaine

(The Human Beast)

(Paris-Film-Production)

Melodrama

Jean Renoir, director of two successful French films, "Lower Depths" and "Grand Illusion," has adapted to the screen one of the most famous novels by Emile Zola, "La Bete Humaine." The title refers to a railway locomotive. It seems that Renoir has taken the best of this sordid and tragic melodrama of 1869 and modernized it. Nevertheless there are two crimes, one suicide, many other over-violent scenes, and not a sympathetic character. All the talent of Jean Renoir has not succeeded in making Zola's story very convincing on the screen.

"Roubaud," deputy station-master at Le Hâvre, beats his wife "Severine" when she tells him she once had "favours" for the wealthy "Grandmorin," and kills "Grandmorin." "Jacques Lantier" has suspicions. "Severine" seduces him to stop him from speaking, then falls in love with him. "Roubaud" knows it but cannot say a thing. "Severine" asks "Lantier" to kill "Roubaud." He refuses, murders her and jumps from the train to his death.

Technically the film has been beautifully produced and the direction is outstanding. Top performances are by Jean Gabin, Simone Simon, Ledoux and Carette. It is regrettable that such

(Casino Film Exchange)

Comedy, Romance

This German light comedy, which stars Leo Slezak, concerns the romance of two young couples. For the general audience the picture seems overly long for the story it has to tell, and a knowledge of German is essential to the patron for there are no English titles.

The story concerns the long rivalry of the owners of two neighboring estates. Slezak has a son in the army. Ida Wuest has two daughters. The regiment in which Slezak's son is an officer is to have its autumn maneuvers, whence the film draws its title, in the neighborhood.

Hans Soehnker, as Slezak's son, finds himself in love with Susi Lanner, who appears as the daughter of Ida Wuest. In order to effect a reconciliation of their elders, they enlist the aid of the regimental commander who gives a ball and invites both families. In the meantime another romance has developed between the other daughter and an officer. The reconciliation is soon disrupted, but eventually, their quarrels forgotten, the two neighbors join in parental blessings upon the young couples.

The Gang's All Here

(Associated British)

Detective Comedy Melodrama

Jack Buchanan, whiteheaded boy of British musical comedy, makes a bid for international honors in an expensively made Elstree offering, without the customary or expected aid of song or dance.

The extra-British appeal is enhanced by such banner names as Edward Everett Horton, Otto Kruger and Jack La Rue, all definite assets to the entertainment. For this side the name of Syd Walker, an old screen ally of Buchanan, exploits the appeal of the radio feature, "Band Waggon," in which he regularly appears. Then, too, there is the slick treatment of director Thornton Freeland, and no small technical sheen.

"John Forrest," played by Buchanan, on the eve of retirement to write detective novels goes back to the job as an insurance investigator and trails the thieves of the Maltonian Crown Jewels, finds himself up against a gang led, need it be said, by an American nightclub racketeer, and gets into the heart of the racket by posing as a wanted killer, and being elected "trigger man."

Googie Withers, subdued into less of a screwball roll than usual, nevertheless uses her interesting personality and fascinating features to considerable effect.

Sporting Wings

(RKO Pathe)

A Sportscope

Aviation as a pastime is the subject of this very interesting and informative Pathe Sportoscope. Shown are individuals and groups interested in flying both as a means of transportation and as a hobby. The modest income group sport planes with a cruising range of only 350 miles or so, yet sufficient for their purposes, including a flying trip to the sea and a swim. Then there's the autogiro enthusiast who lands on a golf course, grabs his golf bag and starts to play. The closing sequence shows Gar Wood, motor boat racer, flying his amphibian from Detroit to his estate on an island off the Florida coast. Also of interest are the flying commuters from Long Island and other points to Wall Street via New York harbor. Produced by Frederic Ullman, Jr. Supervised by Frank Donovan. Running time, 9 minutes.

Clock Wise

(RKO Radio)

Kennedy Comedy

This is a typical Edgar Kennedy comedy. In the early hours Kennedy feels he can't stand that grandfather's clock any longer, and prepares to move it from the premises. His wife and his father-in-law—the clock is his brain child—have different ideas. "Slow-burn" finally dumps the clock into the furnace. Then he discovers that his wife had hidden his savings in the clock. Other players are Vivian Oakland, Bill Franey, Fred Kelsey, Harry Harvey and James Morton. Running time, 16 minutes.

Looney Tune

A barnyard takeoff on a jam session is depicted in this Looney Tune drawing. Porky is the proprietor of a cheerful chicken farm where all the feathered friends are happy and contented jitterbugs. Comes a villainous fox to the bucolic scene of song and dance. But the birds together with farmer Porky join forces to rout the intruder. The cartoon depiction of the frolicsome fowls is done in a dashing and laugh inciting style and should receive a generous round of laughter from any audience.—Running time, seven minutes.

The Warning

Defense Propaganda

Designed to awaken the British masses to the need of civilian defense against air attack, a species of propagandist appeal in terms of the motion picture, this very competently made documentary is red hot box office for this side of the Atlantic, where bombing planes hover over every horizon and nerves are strained to their utmost. Made with the collaboration of Britain's air raid precautions authorities, the film traces in 35 minutes with bold strokes an imaginary air attack on Britain, and the role to be played by her army, navy, air force and civil bodies. There are the ruthless progress of the enemy bombers, the swift action of the antiaircraft forces, the devastation and destruction to life and property, and the service of the men and women who have joined ARP. It is a grim study, disturbing but persuasive, and should achieve its end in this country. Elsewhere it would depend for appeal on the topical note. Both camera work and the editing by R. Q. McNaughton are excellent. Aubrey Baring was the producer. The call to service is by Sir John Anderson.—A. F.

Another fine expedition into strange places and customs is arranged in this latest jaunt in the FitzPatrick globe trotting series. The stopoff of the itinerary is at the wonder spot, Delhi in India. Such architectural wonders as the seven-hundred-year-old Tower of Victory was erected to commemorate the victory of the Mohammedan civilization over the Hindu and various mosques and temples, including the Saffan Jang, patterned after the Taj Mahal, are given close and careful inspection. Sights of native ways are offered in a tour of the working quarters of the city, a visit to a county fair and the witnessing of a wedding procession. The exotic material has been gathered together intelligently and together with some glowing color and interesting camera angles should feed the wanderlust fever of any adventuresome audience.—Running time, eight minutes.

CONGRESS AGAIN TO HEAR INDUSTRY ARGUE OVER BLOCK AND BLIND SALES

Senate Committee Calls Public Meeting Monday on Neely Issue Variously Debated Since Swope - Upshaw Bill of 1926

The motion picture industry on Monday again will go before the United States Congress at Washington to battle over a Federal legislative proposal to outlaw the long prevailing practice of selling pictures blind and in block.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee which is considering the anti-block booking bill of Senator Matthew M. Neely (Dem., West Va.), will hold a public hearing in the white marble halls of the Senate Office Building, where the major interests of the industry and the minorities again will muster their most eloquent leaders and their strongest allies from outside the business, to argue over enactment. The proposition has been before Congress for 13 years, starting with the Swope-Upshaw block booking bill of 1926, through the Brookhart bill of the early 1930's, the Pettengill bill of 1935-37, and on up to the Neely bill of 1938 and the present.

The Department of Justice will be an interested observer at Monday's hearing in view of its pending anti-trust actions against the industry.

Same Arguments Awaited

After its many evolutions over the years, the bill arrived in 1938 at a form which it still holds, that would prohibit distributors from "compulsory" blind or block selling; would require them to provide exhibitors with a synopsis would have to conform exactly to the synopsis.

The same arguments in opposition are expected to be voiced by the majors; that the bill is wholly impractical, that its enactment would put several of the large companies and thousands of small theatres out of business, that, contrary to opposition opinions, the bill is no longer needed as a protection of morals in a community by giving the community local selection; that the sale of pictures will be impossible except the sale of a finished picture after screening; that the independent owners would not be able to maintain buyers in exchange centers for the individual purchase of pictures, and that millions will be added to the cost of films to exhibitors.

Aligned on the other side, presumably to be led again by Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Research Council—joint sponsors of anti block selling legislation for many years—then proponents for passage will reiterate the same—revolving basically around the assertion, made last year by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied, that there is no attempt in the bill to force abandonment of block booking, to censor pictures or "hamstring" producers, but a purpose of giving independent exhibitors at least some of the advantages which the great chains enjoy under their selective contracts." That the bill would require the selling of pictures single, Mr. Myers called a "ghost . . . conjured up to frighten little children."

Passed by Senate Last Year

Senator Neely, on February 16th, 1938, abruptly revived action for passage when, in a surprise move, his Interstate Commerce Committee reported the bill favorably to the Senate. No public hearings were held, because, it was said, the subject was discussed "amply" during lengthy hearings in March, 1936.

The organized industry, led by the Hays organization, attacked this procedure, pointing out that two years had elapsed since the public hearings, during which "there have been progressive changes" in the business. Regardless, no hearings were called and in June, last year, Senator Neely demanded action on the floor of the Senate and his bill was passed without a record vote.

Enactment was averted, however, as the House adjourned shortly afterward without Neely's twin bill emerging from the House committee. With introduction of the bill this year, the majors requested, and now will receive, the opportunity to be heard by the Senate committee.

Follows Neely Maneuver

Reluctantly announcing that an opportunity would be given to discuss the question, the Senate committee was maneuvered into an embarrassing position by Senator Neely from which it could see no other way out.

Because of the fact that the majority leader, Alben Barkley, is a member of the subcommittee to which the measure had been referred, submission by Senator Neely of the motion to dismiss the committee from further consideration of the bill, on the ground that it had buried the measure and gave no indication of acceding to his request for a hearing, put the Administration Whip in a position of refusing to cooperate with one of his most submissive followers.

At the same time, the motion put the West Virginia Senator in a position where he could tie up the Senate for days by reading, as he privately threatened to do, all of the testimony at all of the hearings which have been held on block booking in the past.

As a result, Senators Barkley and Ellison Smith, who is chairman of the subcommittee, felt it more desirable to let Mr. Neely have his way and called the hearings. Whether his insistence on forcing the issue to a head will influence the committee when it considers a report on the bill remains to be seen.

Kuykendall Urges Defeat

Even as both sides this week were hurriedly formulating their lines for Monday's meeting—the majors did not expect that a hearing would be called so soon, if at all this session—their representatives were starting to come out into the open over the controversy.

Invitation was extended by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners to "any constructive person in this business to work with us or let us work with them in the defeat of this unfair measure." The invitation, which explained that the organization "will be well represented at the hearing set for April 3d," was issued in a statement sent out from headquarters under the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president. Said Mr. Kuykendall:

"At this time when the government is using every effort to encourage business to go ahead that everything possible may be done to bring about a normal economic condition in this country and while in this industry we are working

Divorcement and Booking Bills Introduced; Dakota Case Ends

Major circuit operations were again attacked this week by a legislative proposal, this time made in Minnesota, by Assemblyman Alexander Nicol, to outlaw ownership or operation of theatres by producers or distributors. The bill is patterned practically the same as Allied-sponsored measures in several other states.

With the legislature due to adjourn shortly, observers in Minnesota saw little chance of action.

Pending divorcement and anti - block booking bills in Kansas were likewise seen as having practically no chance of enactment, with the legislature there set to adjourn April 3rd.

Illinois legislators were asked this week by Representative Lind to consider a bill to prohibit block and blind selling. The bill was sent to the House Judiciary Committee where Representative Schnackenberg proposed it be rewritten to outlaw double bills.

The U. S. Supreme Court this week wound up the North Dakota - Paramount divorcement case, disposing of it by an order remanding the suit to the District Court at Fargo, N. D., with orders to dismiss it on the ground that the cause has been rendered moot by repeal of the state act prohibiting a distributor from holding an interest in any North Dakota theatre.

The court's action in the North Dakota case spelled finis to a suit on which the Department of Justice had placed much dependence as bringing out a judicial decision as to the validity of divorce enactments, which is an issue in the anti-trust suit now pending against majors in New York.

Repeal of the law before the court had an opportunity to hear the case made further legal action unnecessary, but precipitated an investigation by the Department of Justice the results of which are now in the hands of officials of the anti-trust division by whom, probably, they will be used when the New York case comes to trial.

on a trade practice program that tends to eliminate many of the objectionable trade relationships between exhibition and distribution and at a time when many of these problems are so near solution and when agreement has been reached on many of the fundamental problems it is very regrettable that we are forced into another fight for our existence which the Neely Block Booking Bill brings about. MPTOA is on record as opposed to the Neely Block Booking Bill. We have opposed it from its first introduction. It is not practical. It is not workable and will do a great deal of harm not only to the production end of this business but also to exhibition and will harm most of all the interests in exhibition that the small minority that sponsors the bill pretend to help.

"We are convinced that 90 per cent of the exhibitors in this country are opposed to the bill. MPTOA has been on record for many years as being opposed to governmental control and regulation of this business based on the assumption that we have sufficient brains and judgment in the motion picture industry to run our business without a policeman. The Neely Bill is nothing else than a step in governmental regulation and if enacted would immediately tend to stop the trade practice program to which all of us have given so much time and thought.

"Therefore, the Neely Block Booking Bill comes at a most inopportune time and tends to further bring about the regrettable trend of unrest and fight in this industry.

"MPTOA cannot conceive the sincerity of purpose of those who would drag outsiders in to attack the business from which they derive a livelihood."

Heavy Program

Engaged on one of the heaviest legislative programs with which it has been faced in years, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee had been reported far from being able to call hearings on the Neely bill.

While Senator Neely had indicated that he did not expect a hearing until the committee has waded through some of the matters of more immediate importance, there were evidences in Washington that "pressure groups" in various parts of the country were seeking to force action.

Reports in Washington had 70,000 letters urging passage of the bill dumped upon the Senator within ten days.

Likens Radio to Block Booking

The plight of radio broadcasters operating under network agreements is worse than that of exhibitors with block booking contracts, it was declared this week at Washington by Representative Lawrence J. Connery (Dem., Mass.), in appealing to the House for support of his resolution for an investigation of the Federal Communications Commission.

Likening the network contract to the block booking of pictures, the Congressman said: "For many years there has been a persistent and growing demand for the elimination of block booking, but that, while it "is conceded to be harmful and deprives the local picture house owner of the privilege of rejecting those pictures which he, knowing the sentiment of his patrons, feels they would not care to see or have their children see," the exhibitor at least has the opportunity of knowing the contents of the program and need not show it if he feels it to be improper.

"The local radio stations affiliated with the networks are not so privileged," he continued. "They must accept blindly and without any opportunity of substituting something else that which the radio monopolies in New York decide constitutes 'public interest' in almost every hamlet in America."

In an effort to secure support among members of the House who have feared that an FCC investigation might cast a reflection upon the Administration, Mr. Connery declared the present situation existed before President Roosevelt took office and said the President is "thoroughly dissatisfied" with the failure of Chairman Frank McNinch to improve conditions.

"A Congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission and the radio monopoly," he said, "will definitely show: First, that this Commission has operated solely for the benefit of vested interests; secondly, that this condition was in full force and effect when the Roosevelt Administration came into power; third, that the contracts which the networks hold with affiliated stations force the affiliated stations to blindly accept such radio programs as the radio network monopolists decide the people of every community of America must listen to, especially between the hours of 6 o'clock and 11 o'clock at night."

The FCC, Mr. Connery charged, merely "went through the motions of investigating the radio monopoly" in an effort to satisfy public demand for action, and such an investigation, he said, cannot properly be made by "those who illegally made the radio monopoly possible."

327 Openings for "Dodge City"

With the addition of 90 simultaneous dates, Warners' "Dodge City" will open in 327 key situations during Easter Week following its world premiere in Dodge City April 1st.

More national advertising campaigns have been set in Life, Look and American Weekly.

Six Governors are expected at the premiere in Dodge City, Kansas, on Saturday, April 1. Governor Payne Ratner of Kansas has sent invitations to fellow executives in Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska and Missouri.

Gillham Arrives for Home Office Meetings

Robert M. Gillham, director of publicity and advertising for Paramount, arrived in New York from Hollywood Monday to confer with home office executives on publicity, advertising and exploitation plans for the company's 1939-'40 production program.

Mr. Gillham is to return to Hollywood next week with Barney Balaban, president; Neil F. Agnew, vice-president, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, for conferences with studio executives.

Dietz Announces MGM Campaign For Independents

Cash prizes totaling $10,000 will be awarded independent exhibitors in the United States and Canada for the best campaigns on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures to be released between September 1, 1939, and January 1, 1940, it was announced yesterday—Thursday—by Howard Dietz, MGM director of advertising and publicity. Exhibitors may submit campaigns on one or more of MGM's pictures.

There will be identical prizes for first-run and subsequent-run exhibitors, with first place in each category winning $2,500; second, $750, and third, $500. There will also be 100 additional prizes of $25 each for runners-up in both sections.

"Promotion has definitely been on the upswing during the past year," Mr. Dietz said. "Comparative results as between showmen who advertise and exploit and others is a matter of box-office records. We want to convince every independent theatre owner that there exists for him ticket-selling possibilities not yet fully exploited.

"A thorough survey of theatres in all sections of the country has proved that efficient theatre advertising cannot be done on a lower basis than eight per cent of the average gross. The purpose of our contest is frankly to stimulate business to the mutual interest of our customers and ourselves, to reward aggressive theatre owners who get more money for our pictures by more aggressive advertising and exploitation. Our entire promotional forces at the home office and in the field are at the service of exhibitors in this contest."

At its sales convention last week in Chicago, MGM appropriated "the biggest studio budget in its history" for 1939-40. Paralleling this, Mr. Dietz pointed out, MGM's promotional plans likewise become even more comprehensive, and its $10,000 contest is the largest cash competition the company ever has undertaken. As previously stated, MGM will spend over $2,500,000 for advertising, through newspapers, magazines, direct-by-mail, billboards, trade journals, and a special publication entitled "The Screen Forecast," which will be distributed through the theatres directly to the public.

MGM is now preparing a campaign book for the $10,000 contest which will be made available to independent exhibitors at all of the company's exchanges. This book will be distributed gratis and is the only scrapbook acceptable in the contest, a departure from previous industry contests. The campaign book will include an entry blank and all contest details as well as sufficient blank pages for complete itemization and inclusion of promotion data.

The closing date of the contest is March 1, 1940, giving subsequent-run exhibitors equal opportunity with first-run showmen to submit campaigns.

Form Vedis Films

Bareud Broekman, president of Vedis Films of France, in association with B. J. Gottlieb, has formed Vedis Films, Inc., with offices in the RKO Building, New York. Mr. Broekman is the producer of the musical film, "Three Waltzes," with Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay, which will be distributed in the United States by the new company. In addition, Vedis will distribute "Alert in the Mediterranean," which was awarded the grand prix of the French cinema industry as the best film of 1938, "Women's Prison," with Viviane Romance and "Quadrille" with Sacha Guitry.

Dr. Carrier Cites Low Price Danger

Lowered prices may have increased the sales of air conditioning equipment, but they have also tended to cause the selling of small air conditioning plants unsuitable for the work required, Dr. Willis H. Carrier, chairman of the board of the Carrier Corporation, told the 225 salesmen, dealers and officers of the company at the company's two-day convention Monday and Tuesday, in the Hotel New Yorker. The company's latest models were shown for the first time to the New York salesmen, and to the press, at a special preview.

On Wednesday Dr. Carrier addressed the annual stockholders' meeting in Wilmington, Del., and hailed the increasing installation of air conditioning equipment by local contractors, instead of by the manufacturers of equipment. Coincident with this came announcement from the Syracuse home offices of the company's plans for exhibition at the New York World's Fair, which opens on April 30th.

At the sales convention in the Hotel New Yorker, Dr. Carrier amplified his words with the note that "wild promises" were being made in order to "clinch" sales.

"For the first time," he said, "price is becoming a selling factor in the air conditioning business. Developments due to research and field tests have resulted in lower priced equipment designed for smaller installations."

The result, he pointed out, was that small room coolers were being used in too large spaces.

"The result is a feeling by the customer that he has been 'stung' and his subsequent loss of confidence in air conditioning," Dr. Carrier said. "Thus, while one salesman made a sale, the whole industry was injured by his unscrupulous selling.

"Sell the public on air conditioning by always selling the correct equipment for each job," Dr. Carrier admonished his salesmen.

J. I. Lyle, president of the company, speaking to the same convention, predicted a 25 per cent increase in sales this year, for the entire air conditioning industry.

Shown for the first time to the New York company representatives was the new Carrier line of package and self-contained units, including two portables and nine self-contained store, office and home units, ranging from three to 14 tons capacity.

At the stockholders' meeting in Wilmington, on Wednesday, Dr. Carrier described the increased installation of air conditioning equipment by local contractors, as the "most significant trend in the industry" and as a "healthy sign." Dr. Carrier predicted growing interest by such local contractors in air conditioning, and declared that the Carrier Corporation "welcomes the entry of contractors, architects and consulting engineers" into the field.

The Carrier exhibit at the New York World's Fair will be an Eskimo igloo, more than five stories high, with "snow" encrusted walls and "Northern Lights" playing from its cealing. Surrounding this structure will be pools; these, at night, will reflect the floodlights playing on the "igloo's" walls. Visitors will see how modern air conditioning systems operate in their homes, offices, stores and industrial plants.

Grand National has filed suit in Hollywood against United Player Productions and Eugene Frenke to compel the latter to deliver "Exile Express" for distribution by Grand National, or pay $652,000 in damages. The suit cites a claimed distribution contract and asserts that approximately $500,000 gross had been anticipated from the release of the picture.

ACTION IN CANDY CASE UP TO RESPONDENTS

Stop Order Issued by Federal Trade Commission Against Candy Companies, Vendors

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Whether any further action is taken in the Federal Trade Commission's candy-vending case depends entirely upon the attitude taken by the respondents, the Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, New York; the Berlo Vending Company, Philadelphia, and the Confection Cabinet Company, Newark, N. J., and the Hershey Chocolate Corporation, Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolates Company, and Lamont, Corliss & Company.

Against these concerns, the commission last month issued orders barring them from entering into contracts under which the chocolate manufacturers and Lamont, Corliss & Company gave to the vending companies terms and conditions for the supply of candy which they refused to extend to other vending machine operators.

With the issuance of the orders of the commission, active participation of the Government in the case ends, for the time being and under certain conditions.

Three Choices

The respondents, however, have three choices: (1) to comply with the orders, which automatically closes the case unless later the practices complained of are resumed; (2) to appeal to the courts for a review of the commission's proceedings, or (3) to ignore and refuse to comply with the orders, in which event the commission will go to the courts with a request for enforcement, as it enjoys no authority itself to enforce its rulings.

Generally speaking, respondents in cases of this type, which involve exclusive contracts which bar competitors of either side from participation in the business, usually comply with the commission's orders. They seldom ignore them or definitely refuse to comply, and only occasionally, in cases where they have reason to believe the stop order was not justified by the evidence adduced by the commission, do they undertake a court test.

The commission in the past has had many cases of the same general nature as that of the vending machine company proceedings, but officials said that few stop orders had been contested in such cases and that the courts, as a general rule, had supported the commission in such cases as were appealed.

Stop Order Issued

The commission's proceedings against the candy companies and the machine vendors were initiated in May, 1937, and, after nearly two years of investigation and hearings, a stop order was announced March 16.

The basis of the order was the finding that the two candy manufacturers entered into exclusive distributor arrangements with the three vending machine companies for the sale of candy bars manufactured especially for use in theatre vending machines, and that this resulted in closing the sources of supply of those products to competing vending companies, of which there are possibly 25 operating in this country.

Indicative of the probability that the commission's orders will not be contested was the action of the Hershey Chocolate Corporation early last year in abandoning the exclusive distribution policy. The Kohler company was said by the commission to have continued that policy at least until last April, but the formal findings did not state whether it was still in effect.

Twin Previews Held for "Bell"

Twin previews of Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" were held simultaneously in Washington and at the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco on Wednesday. The Washington preview was in Constitution Hall and was sponsored by the National Geographic Society. The San Francisco Exposition showing concluded the celebration of "Twentieth Century-Fox Day" at the fair.

More than 200 newspaper correspondents attended the two previews. A train load of newspaper men made the trip to San Francisco from Hollywood while newspaper and syndicate writers attended the National Geographic Society showing.

Also making the trip from Hollywood to the San Francisco Fair were Darryl Zanuck, Joseph M. Schenck, William Goetz, Sol Wurtzel, William Koenig and players Don Ameche, Loretta Young and her three sisters, who appear in the film. Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Al Jolson, Annabella, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Richard Greene and others also attended.

Arrangements were made to send wire photographs and reports of both previews to the Twentieth Century-Fox annual sales convention which opened in Chicago Thursday.

Fidler's Broadcasts to Be More Discreet, Says Lohr

Jimmy Fidler's film gossip broadcasts on films, over both the National Broadcasting and the Columbia Broadcasting systems, will be more tactful in the future, it was disclosed by Major Lenox R. Lohr, president of NBC, upon his return from the coast this week. Major Lohr explained: "This action must not be construed as a 'gag' on Fidler. We merely pointed out to him that it was more important, and of greater public service, for him to tell people what pictures to see, rather than what pictures to avoid."

While on the coast, Major Lohr discussed the film-radio situation with Harry Warner, president of Warner Brothers, and Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CHARGES OF COMMUNISM AT STUDIOS HEADED FOR INQUIRY BY DIES GROUP

Chairman of Un-Americanism Committee of House Promises Study of Charges of "Sinister Influences"

Charges of Communism among technicians and actors in Hollywood, long and persistently advanced by outside sources, and as apathetically received, this week appears to be headed for an airing by the "Un-Americanism" Committee of Congressman Martin Dies, of Texas, who promised an investigation into assertions by the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees that "sinister influences" were causing a revolt in coast technicians' unions against IATSE domination.

Other Developments

This was the second development in a week of unusual labor news. Foremost was the strike started by Local 306 in New York (see page 14). Labor emerged, flaring, from several weeks of quiescence, during which it appeared that the various coast guilds would reach agreements with producers, that National Labor Relations Board hearings into charges of unfair practices by producers would be unnecessary, that the threat in New York of a national strike by all IATSE unions would be only a threat, and that IATSE coast internal squabbles would remain internal.

Besides the national IATSE strike, and the Congressional investigation into Communism in Hollywood other labor developments of the week, in brief, were:

A pending application in Los Angeles court by Local 37, technician's union, asking dissolution of IATSE's court order restraining local officers from exercising their offices.

Threat of an investigation by the Hollywood district attorney's office into IATSE assessments against local unions.

The day-to-day postponement of National Labor Relations Board hearings in Los Angeles, into charges by the Screen Writers' Guild that the producers used coercion and refused to bargain pending settlement of the dispute and agreement on a contract.

The request for producers' recognition of the Screen Publicists Guild.

The reinstatement of Dr. Towne Nylander, former Los Angeles examiner for the NLRB, to the board, after an investigation cleared him of uttering, publicly, sentiments that "reflected" upon the board.

The virtual agreement on a five-year new licensing contract, between representatives of the Artists' Managers' Guild and the Screen Actors' Guild.

The revelation that the Screen Actors' Guild has dropped 3,460 actors from its membership lists in 13 months, as part of its effort to raise the standard of living of present members by eliminating "part-time" actors.

Testimony in St. Louis, in the suit by 19 members of the IATSE—affiliated projectionists' union to oust John "Big" Nick from presidency and Clyde Weston from its business managership, that Edward, "Putty Nose", Brady, Mr. Nick's partner in an indictment for graft, had received $10,000 in 1936 from exhibitors.

Congressman Dies promised his forthcoming investigation of Communism in a telegram, from Washington, to John F. Gatelee, IATSE representative in Hollywood. George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, had charged, through Frank Strickling, also his representative in Hollywood, that "un-American" influences were at work in the technicians' unions.

FILMS AID STUDENTS' SCHOLASTIC STANDING

By speeding up their eyes with the help of motion pictures, 16 Harvard freshmen showed definite advancement in scholastic standing after eight weeks, according to a report released this week on the first experimental test of a film technique for training in reading.

The technique was developed at the Havard Graduate School of Education by Professor Walter F. Dearborn, director of the Harvard Psycho-Educational Clinic, and Dr. Irving H. Anderson, instructor in education, with the cooperation of James R. Brewster, director of the Harvard film service.

The report said that "the students as a group increased their reading speed by 50 per cent gained in reading accuracy and altered for the better their habits of eye movement. That they should also, as a group, improve in scholarship, even by a small amount, seems especially important considering the many factors other than the ability to read which contribute to college grades."

The unions, notably Local 37, have been waging a fight against domination by the IATSE, and charging that it is a "company union." The IATSE "clamped down" three weeks ago, by deposing officers of the local.

Threatens Investigation

Los Angeles district attorney Barton Fitts threatens an investigation into the local's charges that a two per cent assessment by the IA against the local had yielded $1,000,000. Mr. Fitts declared that the two per cent assessment "smacks of methods employed by Eastern racketeers in other industries."

Mr. Strickling asserted $110,000 was "nearer the correct figure" and that the assessments, first in 1936, and then in 1937, both continuing for 43 weeks, were to assist the national IATSE organization and expansion; and that the levies were made on all other IA locals.

The NLRB was scheduled this week to hear how far plans for settlement of the charges by Jeff Kibre, head of the Local 37 minority group, that the IATSE was a company union and that producers had used bribery, had proceeded.

Nylander Reinstated

The reinstatement of Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director of the NLRB, took place after an investigation by Professor James E. Brenner, Lieutenant Commander of the United States Navy (retired) and a professor of law at Leland Stanford University. Professor Brenner found that Dr. Nylander:

"Did not intend to convey the impression that the procedure of the National Labor Relations Board does not provide a full and impartial hearing for employers against whom formal complaints have been filed."

The NLRB hearings on Monday into charges of coercive acts by producers and refusal to recognize the Screen Writers Guild were put off temporarily, pending conferences between producers' and guild attorneys. Both had agreed to negotiate three weeks ago after a surprise move by the producers, virtually recognizing the Guild. The Guild then obtained from the NLRB a delay in its hearings, with the NLRB proviso that it would resume hearings whenever the producers became refractory. Last Wednesday, the Guild membership, angered by differences with the producers' committee over the length of the contract to be signed, the extent of the Guild shop, and the right of writers to write and own their material during layoffs, authorized the resumption of Board hearings.

Salient testimony in the suit by 19 members of the St. Louis projectionists' union, IATSE Local 143, to oust John P. ("Big") Nick from its presidency, and Clyde Weston from business managership, came this week from theatre owners Clarence Kaimman and Louis Landau, who declared they had, in 1936, given a $10,000 check to Edward M. Brady, a "henchman" of Mr. Nick. Mr. Nick, Mr. Brady and Mr. Weston are under indictment for extortion. The "contribution" was made during agitation in that city for projectionists' wage increases. Mr. Kaimman named, as members of that year's exhibitors' negotiating committee, himself, Mr. Landau, Fred Wehrenberg, president of the local M.P.T.O., Louis Ansell, and Thomas James.

In the East, the Loew and RKO circuit theatre operations in the Providence, Rhode Island area, have been subject to discussions in New York between representatives of the Front House Employees' Local B 129, IATSE-affiliated, and Loew and RKO home office officials.

Theatre in Wilmington Picketed

In Wilmington, Projectionists' Local 473, IATSE, has been striking against and picketing the New Rialto Theatre. The owners have asked, in local Chancery Court, for a perpetual injunction to restrain the picketing.

In New York City, a contract may be signed this week between the Local 702, laboratory technicians' union, and the De Luxe Laboratory.

Also in New York, Charles Glett, vice-president of Eastern Service Studios, replaced Milton Schwarzwald on the eastern producers' standing committee, to study relations with the Screen Actors' Guild. William E. Barry was appointed SAG representative on the committee, and one more selection was scheduled this week.

Meanwhile, in the nation, the prospects of peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization, appear better and nearer

However, the two organizations may be split anew by the impending battle over revision of the National Labor Relations Act, the National Labor Relations Board favoritism towards employee organizations being the chief target, and the A. F. of L., in common with National Association of Manufacturers, urging that this favoritism be eliminated. The C.I.O. opposes suggested amendments to the Act.

Vallar Resigns in Mexico City

George Vallar, manager for Paramount Pictures in Mexico City, has resigned. A. L. Pratchett, Latin American district manager, is acting as replacement till Mr. Valar's successor is appointed.

Liberal Group Wins in Equity Committee Vote

When the votes were counted last Friday at Actors' Equity headquarters in New York, the election of a nominating committee marked the re-emergence of a liberal and dissenting group. The only member of the conservative group elected was Percy Moore, who polled 207 votes.

Others elected were Raymond Massey, 223 votes; Whitford Kane, 215; Frederic March, 201; Calvin Thomas, 196, and George Coulouris, 194. Mr. March notified Equity Monday that he would be unable to serve on the committee because he felt out of touch with the Broadway theatre. His place will be taken by Katherine Locke, who was the first of six alternates chosen.

The committee, aided by three representatives of Equity council, Blanche Yurka, Franklyn Fox and Joseph A. Vitale, then prepared the regular ticket for a third vice-president, 10 councilors to serve five year terms and some replacements on the governing board for the annual election, generally held in late May or early June. After the committee has picked its ticket, those chosen are notified to see if they will accept. The ticket is then sent to all Equity members, and an opposition ticket may be prepared if there is a disagreement.

The ticket selected by the nominating committee was reported at the regular meeting Tuesday. Burgess Meredith was named third vice-president. Elected as councilors for a five year term were Augustin Duncan, Dudley Digges, Philip Loeb, Hiram Sherman, Muriel Kirkland, Patricia Collinge, Jack Whiting, Harold Vermilyea and John Locke. Elected for two years was John Alexander, and for one year terms, George Heller and Thomas Chalmers.

At the Friday meeting Equity also voted to hold a referendum on whether its members may be permitted to give Sunday performances without an increase in pay during the World's Fair. Stipulations included in the motion for the referendum are that all other theatre crafts and unions must also accept Sunday work at no raise in pay and that there must be one day off each week. Also, top price for musical and dramatic shows, respectively, is to be $4.40 and $3.30, and that if the concession is voted, it is to be for the duration of the Fair only.

Equity has protested the revision of hotel rates during the World's Fair as a "virtual eviction" of small salaried actors.

Koerner Succeeds Gross In RKO Coast Circuit

Charles Koerner, Boston division manager for RKO Theatres, has been named to take charge of the circuit's theatres on the coast succeeding Jack Gross who has joined Universal at the studio.

Mr. Koerner will have charge of RKO's theatres in Los Angeles, Hollywood, Denver and San Francisco with headquarters in the last named city. Mr. Koerner has served on the coast before and has also operated for RKO in upstate New York and formerly handled the Texas Interstate circuit for that company before the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell interests regained ownership of the circuit.

A farewell dinner will be tendered Mr. Koerner on Sunday in Boston.

P. K. Thomajan, recently affiliated with the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign, has been appointed copy chief of the Blackstone company.

OKLAHOMA EXHIBITORS POOL AGAINST CIRCUITS

State Manager Would Negotiate for Purchase of Product for Member Independents

by FREDERIC SCHOFIELD
in Oklahoma City

Details of a proposed film and theatre equipment buying pool being formed by independent Oklahoma exhibitors were revealed to MOTION PICTURE HERALD this week by one of the leaders of the movement which started last July as a means of competing with the major theatre circuits operating in the state, namely, Griffith Amusement Company, Standard Theatres, Corp., Southwestern Theatres, Inc., Robb & Rowley United, and Ralph Talbot Theatres, Inc.

Non-Militant Stand

That a non-militant attitude will be adopted in future actions by the proposed independent group which has not seen fit to announce its membership, was pointed out by the group leader. Any affiliation with Allied was denied and evidently reports to the effect that Allied was interested in forming an organization in Oklahoma in opposition to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, were not substantiated. Protection of the independent exhibitor's interests is the primary purpose for banding together to form the pool, the leader said, and militant tactics will be resorted to only as a last resort after all other means have failed.

A proposed meeting with a representative of the department of justice in Oklahoma City to hear complaints of aggrieved exhibitors is nearing, although no definite date for the meeting has been set. This meeting will be announced in advance and the sessions will be open to anyone who may care to attend, chain theatre operators, independents and reporters, according to present plans.

Would Have State Manager

The pool plan calls for a central office in Oklahoma City under a state manager who would negotiate for the purchase of product for all exhibitor members on film row in Oklahoma City. The state would be divided into eight districts to be put under the jurisdiction of a district manager for each elected by the exhibitors of that district by secret ballot. These exhibitor district managers would make trips to Oklahoma City to do the film booking for all members in their respective districts with their expenses to be paid by the members.

Under the plan exhibitors would sign their own contracts for product but the central office manager would negotiate with film exchange bookers for product and what rentals would be paid.

The advisability of purchasing theatre equipment under the pool setup and possibly the maintenance of a repair shop in Oklahoma City where ailing theatre equipment can be refurbished at cost to the exhibitor pool members, has been discussed.

An estimated cost of $5 to $10 a month, depending upon the size of the town and circumstances in each case, for the services rendered by the central office and other benefits, tentatively has been set.

A meeting of twenty independent exhibitors was held last week in an unnamed place in the state, but no report of action taken was forthcoming.

Dissatisfaction has been expressed in Oklahoma by many small exhibitors on the variations in prices paid in towns of similar size for film rentals and varying prices for theatre equipment. The group is reported to be collecting information regarding these claimed practices to be given to the department of justice representatives when a hearing is held in Oklahoma City in the near future.

Selection of Oklahoma as a center of the federal Government's anti-trust investigation was revealed only last week when authorities in Washington asked for quarters containing 25,000 square feet of floor space in the Oklahoma City postoffice building to house an anti-trust division to aid the Government in carrying on its investigation of unfair trade practices in the southwest.

Oklahoma City has been the scene for the last six or seven years of hearings on the $5,000,000 federal anti-trust suit of A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla., theatre operator, against the Griffith Amusement Company and Twentieth Century-Fox and other major circuits and distributing companies.

Allied to Meet On June 13th

The national convention of Allied States Association will be held at the Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis June 13, 14 and 15. The convention dates were set by Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied president, and W. A. Steffes, head of Allied of the Northwest, at a conference in Minneapolis this week. Northwest Allied will be the official host. Mr. Steffes heads the arrangement committee. The convention will open with a directors' meeting on June 13th and close with a dinner on the night of June 15th.

Allied of New Jersey will hold a statewide meeting, probably at New Brunswick, about the middle of the month. The tentative date is April 13th. State legislation will be a topic.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Arkasas has changed its convention dates from April 2-3 to April 23-24.

The midsummer convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will be held at the Ocean Forest Hotel at Myrtle Beach, S. C., June 4-6. The program committee is composed of Henry Berry, chairman; Roy L. Smart, George W. Parr, B. B. Benfield, and Ben Strozier.

To facilitate the handling of local issues and problems, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois will establish special welfare committees. The committees will embrace five exhibitors to be picked from the respective sections. Newly elected officers of the organization will be installed May 8th at a meeting to be held at the Coronado Hotel in St. Louis.

Officers and directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland recently elected at a meeting in Baltimore are Frank A. Hornig, president; L. C. Garman, vice-president; Herman A. Blum, treasurer; Walter D. Pacy, J. Louis Rome, Arthur B. Price, Samuel Soltz, Eugene B. McCurdy, Oscar B. Coblentz, Jr., Harry Silver and Julius Goodman, directors.

CONGRESS ASKED TO AID "LITTLE BUSINESSMEN"

Measure to Help Exhibitors Calls for 12 Regional Banks, and for Loans Up to $100,000

Legislation under which the United States Government would extend financial assistance to exhibitors and all other eligible "little" business men unable to obtain loans from banks in the usual manner has been introduced in Congress by Senator William Turner Logan (Dem., Ky.) and Representative Wright Patman (Dem., Tex.) and Hooris Jerry Voorhis (Dem., Cal.).

Would Set Up 12 Banks

Sponsored by the American Federation of Little Business, the bill provides for the establishment of 12 regional intermediate credit banks which would take the paper of local investment associations which would be established with authority to make loans, including character loans, up to $100,000 for business purposes when credit of the type applied for is not available through the usual local commercial banking channels.

The capital stock of the regional credit banks would be entirely subscribed for by the Government. The local associations would in part be privately financed, inviting private investment for 75 per cent of their capital with the Government subscribing the remaining 25 per cent. Loans would be insured by a Government agency, to be financed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Introducing the measure in the Senate, Senator Logan pointed out that while the Administration has done much to aid industry, "with all that we have done, we have done little or nothing for the small businessman."

"This is particularly regrettable," he said, "not only because little business, which in the aggregate employs more people and pays more taxes than any other economic group, is sorely in need of assistance, but also because the small business men and women comprise the bulk of that middle class of our population which has often and rightfully been termed 'the backbone of America'."

Loans by Other Agencies

The Federal Housing Administration and other of the Administration's "alphabetical agencies" have been making available loans to "little" businessmen for some time.

Some of the ideas now being incorporated in plans to extend governmental financial aid even further were broached by J. B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., of Chicago, manufacturers of Motiograph projection machines for theatres. He made his suggestions some time ago at the "little businessmen's conference" at Washington.

Convention June 27 in Detroit

The National Small Business Men's Association, with headquarters at Akron, Ohio, has announced Detroit as the place and June 27th-29th as the dates of its 1939 national convention.

Founded in November 1937, three months before the much-publicized calling of small business men to Washington in February 1938, the association held its first national convention in Pittsburgh, Sept. 13-16, 1938, with nearly 400 representatives of small business from 32 states.

"Since the Pittsburgh meeting membership in the Association has nearly doubled and local units have been formed in dozens of cities from Springfield, Massachusetts, west to Omaha," said DeWitt M. Emery, president of the association. "Membership now extends into 42 states and we expect to have every state represented in membership by the time of the Detroit convention. Eventually, we hope to have an active group of small business men in every Congressional District."

For a "Non-Partisan Voice"

Delegates at the Detroit meeting will give their entire time to the relationship between government and business in line with the stated purpose of the association "to give small business men a non-partisan voice in national affairs," according to Mr. Emery. They will check on progress made in attaining the program of immediate objectives adopted at Pittsburgh and will formulate plans for further removal of handicaps to the system of free enterprise under which American business has developed, he reported.

At the Pittsburgh meeting 16 speakers of national reputation, such as Matthew Woll for labor, L. J. Taber for agriculture, and others spoke. At Detroit, according to Mr. Emery, there will be fewer outside speakers and more time devoted to the detailed problems of small business, discussed by those who are engaged in meeting small business payrolls.

The association queried all candidates for Senate and House last November on the issues included in the immediate objectives adopted at the Pittsburgh meeting. In December, the association started its circulation of petitions for amendment of the Wagner Act, obtaining signatures from persons interested in small business in 43 states.

The association also has been working with the Social Security Board on plans for simplification, particularly of the unemployment sections of the law. It has been active in demanding reduction of WPA appropriations, making the fight on the grounds of necessity of return to Congress of appropriation control.

Ewald Heads Larger RCA Sound Products Division

Former Agent Testifies In "Big" Nick Trial

Robert Tomsen, former business agent of the St. Louis' projectionists union under John P. (Big) Nick, testified Tuesday that all Nick did for the Motion Picture Operators, Local No. 143, for his $125 a week salary was "to attend to wage negotiations." The testimony was in the St. Louis suit brought by 19 members of the union to oust Nick, their business agent Clyde Weston and George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, from control of the union.

Mr. Tomser declared Nick put 44 men in the union, some of them gangsters, without any of them having been voted on by the membership. He further declared that Mr. Browne talked to members of the local and told them that Nick was in complete charge and his word was law.

Declare ASCAP Deal Inequitable

The copyright committee of the National Association of Broadcasters at the conclusion of a two-day meeting in New York this week, branded its present agreement with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as inequitable inasmuch as it compels broadcasters to pay fees on programs not using ASCAP music, and passed a resolution to enter new negotiations with ASCAP predicated on the principle of paying royalties only on revenue from the sale of time for programs involving the use of ASCAP catalogues.

E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of ASCAP, said that the society will gladly consider any proposal that the NAB have to make. "But we can make no definite comment until ASCAP's board of directors has before it full details of the broadcasters' proposals," he added.

Mr. Mills said that "the present formula for licensing stations was in all aspects approved by the NAB at the time it was effected. ASCAP is entirely receptive to any sincere proposal made by any group authorized to speak for the broadcasters."

Mr. Mills' statement was made in Topeka, where he appeared before the Kansas House Judiciary Committee on the Nickell anti-ASCAP bill.

The present agreement between the NAB and the society expires at the close of 1940.

ASCAP'S future operating policy in North Dakota, which recently enacted a law to bar the society from the state, will be determined after the United States supreme court decides the constitutionality of similar state legislation. If the anti-ASCAP legislation is held to be unconstitutional the society will move for an injunction restraining North Dakota from enforcing its new law.

The anti-ASCAP bill in the Kansas legislature which has been approved by the Senate was reported out of committee in the House this week. However, the committee amended the bill to strike out the provision which prohibited any copyright owners or association of copyright owners from acting in concert when establishing a price for the performing rights to any copyrighted musical or dramatic musical composition.

An anti-ASCAP bill, similar to the measure introduced recently in the Oklahoma Senate, was introduced in the Oklahoma House this week.

NBC Increases Stock

The National Broadcasting Company has increased its capital stock from 50,000 to 100,000 shares of no par value, it has been reported by the Secretary of State of Delaware. NBC is incorporated in Delaware, with the United States Corporation Company as agents.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Arthur Byron, actor, will be sixty-seven years old on Monday. Fifty of his years have been spent on the stage, save for some intermittent screen appearances. Starting in theatricals in 1889, Byron did not reach Hollywood until 1932, when he was 60. Now he is along in his second half-century in the theatre, a theatre whose shifting world makes 50 years several respectable lifetimes.

He entered theatricals after his father told him, "Nobody seems to be able to teach you anything, so you better become an actor."

On the day the other week when the Brooklyn-born actor reached his 50th year in theatricals, members of his Broadway "Jeremiah" play company assembled on the Guild Theatre stage in New York, pressed his hands in congratulation, left him with a silver case for cigarettes, with suitable engravings thereon. The Guild management turned to him next, presenting a gold framed portrait of himself as King Zedekiah of "Jeremiah." Ethel Merman, for Actors' Equity, added the felicitations of Mr. Byrons' own. Came the curtain call and he went right on with "Jeremiah," probably thinking much of the changes since he first did "Across the Continent," in the Academy theatre in Jersey City, in 1889. Three hundred different roles and well over 10,000 performances have been counted by Byron since Jersey City.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas Cuff in New York facetiously remarked to a woman who had been unable to see but four motion pictures in five years, that she "hadn't missed much."

The New York Daily News' "Inquiring Photographer," Jimmy Jemail, took up the question and asked the "man-in-the-street" whether he felt that way about movie entertainment. Four out of five disagreed with the judge.

Most exclusive inner-organization "club" conducted in the pages of Oscar Doob's daily Loew Circuit "house-organ", The Loewdown, is the Dollar Club.

Loew theatre managers who pull genuine box-office stunts that can be measured in dollars and cents are entitled to membership, providing business is $100 above average per stunt. For example, blocks of tickets sold to conventions, the proceeds from special shows conceived and staged by the manager without home office assistance or direction, actual tickets sold to graduating classes, special merchandise nights, and such are possible sources of membership revenue. Members of the Dollar Club receive a framed certificate from Loew's and a new one dollar bill.

Don Allen installed old-fashioned fishing poles and cans of worms in the lobby of his Des Moines theatre, and offered a pair of passes to any woman baiting a hook with a worm between noon and three p.m. The idea was to get a little free publicity for "Huckleberry Finn." But long before three, the stunt cost Allen 150 free admissions.

And now that Herr Hitler has enforced all Reich regulations in his newly acquired Bohemia and Moravia, native cameramen in those areas find themselves subject to some strange rules. As in Germany, Austria and other Nazi controlled states, newsreel cameramen, writers, reporters and similar professionals are subject to the journalists law or Schriftleitergesetz, which requires that all writing and photographer news gatherers must be at least 21 years old, must be Aryan, cannot be married to or engaged to a non-Aryan, cannot cover anything incompatible with the "dignity and honor" of a German or anything likely to injure the strength of the Reich at home or abroad, or injure German fighting power, culture or economy. And all will have to wear regulation uniforms on certain occasions.

Czech comedians, both film and stage, will likewise be compelled hereafter to abide by Reich law, especially as it concerns the jokes they tell—remembering that only a few weeks ago, in Germany proper, funny men were ordered to "mend their ways" if they wish to continue on stage or screen. Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels "sacked" five comedians for "deriding" the Reich. They had been telling some jokes in Berlin, of which this is typical: An elderly physician beaten by holdup men on a street in Berlin one night yelled:

"Help! Murder!"

Dashing up a policeman quieted the victim: "Sshh! You must not discuss politics so loudly."

And another: The young son of Goebbels, at the age of interminable questioning, asked at the family dinner table: "Father, what is this Fascism I'm always hearing about?"

Goebbels replied, "Shut up and do what you're told."

Now, to prove that there is humor in Germany, Herr Goebbels is paying from $4 to $40 in a joke-writing contest in Berlin, which causes the New York Times to remark that "Nazis have such a sense of humor they can simply laugh their opponents to death."

The radio industry has been in growing need of some practical system for several years, for recording all words spoken daily through its "mikes." It finds it is not impervious to lawsuits which might grow out of some words broadcast. Careful maintenance of a script file does not always protect, since it is a well known fact that speakers can—and do—deviate from the printed page before them. Radio does record its programs of a controversial nature on plastic disks, but this procedure is cumbersome and expensive when a permanent record of every broadcasting day of eighteen hours or more each must be made.

Some months ago, J. Ripley Kiel, a midwestern inventor, produced the "Ripley machine," which, he claimed, would record a whole day's radio programs on 1,000 feet of 16mm motion picture film. He secured financial backing and models are being produced for experimental work with the broadcasting companies.

The Ripley machine cuts the sound on the film by means of a sapphire stylus. Cutting from one end of the film to the other, the stylus is moved automatically to a new groove at each end. Each groove, on 1,000 feet of film, records for 30 minutes.

Its owners say that a day's broadcasting can be recorded at a material cost of $7.50, whereas it would cost broadcasters at least $36 to cut a day's programs into conventional disks. And, even if the cost were no considerable item, the matter of storage space would present another problem in the handling of record files. Records sufficient to carry a day's broadcasting would number 36. Allowing 12 records to an inch, the stack at the end of a year would reach a height of 91 feet. A year's recording on film, they point out, could be stored in a cabinet no larger than a small steamer trunk.

Some persons can capitalize anything, like the management of the Cinema 49, on New York's West 49th Street. In the French picture, "Boquets from Nicholas," current at the Cinema, two words referring to drugs were censored by the New York State censor board. The words are "blacked out" in the English sub-titles in the picture. So, to get attention for the picture, the management started a "contest," offering $100 to anyone submitting the correct two words that were censored.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Routine Activity

The official arrival of Spring saw Hollywood start six pictures and complete five. With one exception in both groups, the product is run-of-the-mill material.

Universal began work on "Backstage Phantom." It will present William Gargan, Irene Hervey, Dorothy Arnold, Harvey Stephens, Walter Woolf King and Alan Dinehart. "Give Me a Child," a re-creation of "Life Begins," made several years ago, went into work at Warners. The cast includes Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gale Page, Eve Arden, Johnnie Davis, Henry O'Neill, Gloria Holden and Spring Byington.

Paramount launched "What a Life." Jackie Cooper is the star. In support are Billy Field, John Howard, James Logan, James Corner and Bennie Bartlett. "The Texas Steers," a number in the "Three Mesquiteers" series, started at Republic. John Wayne, Max Terhune and Ray Corrigan will be supported by Carol Landis, Ted Adams, Rosco Ates and Stanley Blystone.

"Boy's Reformatory" started at Monogram. It will feature Frankie Darro and Grant Withers with Junior Coghlan, David Durand, Ben Weldon and Lillian Elliott. The leading roles in MGM's "$6,000 Enemies" have been assigned Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson. There will be forty-five additional speaking parts.

Two of the completed pictures are credited to MGM. "It's a Wonderful World" will star Claudette Colbert and James Stewart with Ernest Truex, Frances Drake, Guy Kibbee, Sidney Blackmer, Nat Pendleton and Edgar Kennedy. Annabella, Robert Young, Walter Connolly, Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Virginia Field, Samuel S. Hinds and Arthur Treacher will be seen in "Maiden Voyage."

Gene Autry is the star of Republic's "Blue Montana Skies," in which will be seen Smiley Burnette, June Story, Tully Marshall and the Colorado Hillbillies.

Columbia finished "Mandrake the Magician." The cast includes Warren Hull, Doris Weston, Forbes Murray, Don Beddoe, John Tyrell, Eddie Laughton and Al Kikume.

RKO-Radio completed "G-Dog." It will present Tim Holt, Janet Shaw, Virginia Weidler, Robert Keene, Frank Thomas, Ralph Harolde and the canine actor seen in "Blind Alibi."

DECADES' SONGS IN "WASHINGTON SQUARE"

Irving Berlin song hits, upon which a generation cut its musical eye-teeth, were the music of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." The songs of two decades will be the musical content of "Rose of Washington Square," also Twentieth Century-Fox.

In "The Star Maker," Paramount, the tunes of Gus Edwards, who was considerable of a star maker himself, will be glorified by Bing Crosby. Among the numbers Bing will sing will be "Schooldays," "In My Merry Oldsmobile" and "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine."

With 1939-40 production programs teeming with biographies, it may be expected that studio music departments will devote much time to research of songs and tunes that were hits during the lifetimes of the personalities treated.

Biographies

Definite evidence, already at hand, indicates that the next major trend in picture production will be to biographies. At the present moment each major studio has either concrete or tentative plans to film actual stories that deal with the lives and important events in the careers of world famous men and women. Mainly scheduled for release on 1939-40 programs, some of the productions have already been completed or are in work. In all 26 biographies are planned.

A reason for the trend may be found in the present condition of world politics and economics and the state of affairs these circumstances have created for the business of picture production and distribution. Another may be that producers, just as tired of the boy-meets-girl type of fiction as are exhibitors and patrons, vision the romance of real life as a medium of popular theatrical interest and will develop to the extent which such experimental pictures as "The Story of Louis Pasteur," "The Life of Emile Zola" and others, indicated was possible.

Whatever the underlying causes, Columbia has announced a story based on the life of Alfred Nobel, inventor of dynamite and the endower of the famous prizes in the interest of art, science, literature and peace. Peter Freuchen, noted Danish author, who will write the story, is now conferring with members of the Nobel family.

MGM will make the life of Thomas A. Edison a subject of production attention and Greta Garbo will be starred in the story of Madame Curie, who, with her husband, discovered radium.

Frank Lloyd will produce "Ruler of the Seas" for Paramount. The substance of the story is the history of the great ship-owning Cunard family. Harry Sherman will make "Buffalo Bill," a picture that will tell the story of the scout and Indian fighter, Colonel William F. Cody. The studio also has started work on "The Great Enemy," the story of the Indian leader, Geronimo, and in addition has purchased the film rights to Rene Fueloep-Miller's popular biography of Dr. William Morton, "Triumph Over Pain." It is the story of a Boston dentist who discovered anaethesia and saved millions from needless pain.

With "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," a biography of the noted dancers, ready for release, RKO-Radio is busily assembling authentic material for a production based on the life of Lord Kitchener, noted British soldier who lost his life when a ship was destroyed by a mine during the World War.

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," inventor of the telephone, which 20th Century-Fox has completed. "Stanley and Livingstone," the biographical story of an English explorer who was lost in Africa and the man who found him, is in work, with Spencer Tracy and Richard Greene playing the leading roles. Presently, Darryl F. Zanuck has his research and writing staffs engaged in gathering data for the story of Charles P. Steinmetz, European war refuge who became a wizard of electricity. "Young Mr. Lincoln," an early life biography of the martyred President, will feature Henry Fonda.

Two from Small

For United Artists distribution during the coming season Edward Small will do a story on the life of Kit Carson and has "The Life of Rudolph Valentino" definitely pencilled on his schedule. Alexander Korda will make "Lawrence of Arabia." David O. Selznick will do "Swanee River," in which the story of Stephen Foster, composer of American folk songs, will be told.

Whether for U. A. or not, Samuel Goldwyn has committed himself to make "Strangers At Home," which has for its inspiration the life story of Hans Christian Anderson, writer of fairy tales. Gary Cooper and Zorina will be starred.

At Warner's, where "Juarez," the story of Mexico's patriot, Juarez, and Emperor Maximillian and Empress Carlotta, has been finished, five more biographies are on the program. One will be about Dr. Paul Neimoeller, German submarine commander, clergyman, and now prisoner in a concentration camp near Berlin. "The Story of the Wright Brothers" will detail the history of Wilbur and Orville Wright, inventors of the airplane. "John Dillinger" concerns the career of the infamous public enemy of recent memory. "John Paul Jones" is the biography of the American naval commodore of Revolutionary and War of 1812 fame. The career of Mrs. Leslie Carter, American actress, will be detailed in another production, title of which will bear her name.

Real Life Romances

Considerable discussion is being carried on at Universal about a picture which will be titled "The Life of Young Jenny Lind." Dealing with the early career of the "Swedish Nightingale," it has been tentatively earmarked as a starring vehicle for Deanna Durbin.

With Richard Dix featured, Republic has completed production of "Man of Conquest," in which the life story of General Sam Houston will be pictorially repeated.

From what is definitely known of the biographies in production or completed, all contain a real life romantic love story. They include the boy-meets-girl situation. It is unlikely that the others, story construction of which is only vaguely established, will ignore the quality.

HOPE FOR RENEWAL OF SPANISH MARKET

Settlement of Currency Problem First, Say Distributors; 200 Films Released Since 1936

The surrender of Madrid to General Francisco Franco on Tuesday brought a consensus among foreign sales executives in New York hopeful of renewed operations, although there was expressed a fear of possible Italian or German domination in the rebuilding of the Spanish motion picture industry.

Approach to Franco Awaited

While renewed interest in Spain as a market for American product was being evinced by American distributors, no unified or definite approach to the Franco Government had yet been made by the U. S. industry. Offices have been maintained in both the Loyalist and Nationalist territories, but for the most part they have operated with very small staffs.

Since the outbreak of the war, only one American company has sent new films into Spain, all others confining product released to reissues. Two hundred American films have been distributed in the country since 1936. All but a few of these has been accounted for by the eight large companies.

Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution of United Artists, said Thursday that one of the factors of first importance to American distributors is a determination of the currency. United Artists kept offices open in both Madrid and Barcelona, as well as its offices in Franco territory.

Sent Food from Paris

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to Arthur Loew, first vice-president, has kept offices open in Barcelona, Madrid, Seville and Bilbao. Mr. Loew said that the company had been sending food and clothing to its employees in Spain from Paris, and that the staffs in all offices had been greatly reduced because of the conscription of men by the armies of both sides. MGM had been able to deal with both sides, Mr. Loew said, and "although no actual contacts have been made, we are actively engaging in preparations for a continuing representation in the Spanish market."

If there is any "shut-out" arrangements by Germany, Italy and Spain, Mr. Kelly pointed out, the business of the American distributors would be greatly curtailed. While United Press reports say Italian troops were in the van of the army which occupied Madrid, there is also a possibility that Italians will take over film distribution in Spain, according to Mr. Kelly, who said there is an Italian group now in Spain attempting to set up a distributing organization, which would include American films.

Mr. Kelly was very hopeful of the future of American distribution in Spain, however, saying that "as far as we can understand, Franco has taken the position of 'hands off.'" He added "with Spain as the largest Spanish speaking country, General Franco could well support a studio."

Currency Problem Foremost

Among the other companies, the attitude was for the most part one of uncertainty regarding distribution possibilities in Spain.

Paramount, which kept its offices in Madrid, Barcelona, Burgos and Bilbao open during the war, "is not doing anything definite yet," according to George Weltner, assistant foreign manager. He called the currency problem of the greatest importance.

Joseph S. Hummel, general foreign sales manager of Warner Brothers, said that the company is "just feeling its way in this new situation."

Twentieth Century-Fox has instructed its manager in France, William Morgan, to make a survey of the Spanish Nationalist territory. Small staffs were maintained in both Loyalist and Insurgent territory during the war.

With money embargoed by both combatants ever since the outbreak of the war, a decision as to the eventual disposition of American film funds will bulk large in any agreement which may be made between the distributors and Spain. Manuel Augusto, head of the Nationalist Department of Motion Pictures, in a recent article in the magazine Spain, said that the defreezing of film funds would proceed "according to the manner in which each company conducted itself during the war." He added that he expected "to see all this capital completely free."

Documentaries and Newsreels

Also raised by Senor Augusto was the possibility of native documentary films and newsreels, to be made for South American as well as home consumption. In this connection he said, "We also want the motion picture to cooperate as a spiritual link in our communications with other peoples and especially with the South American countries, which speak our language. To give them the Spain of folklore is not enough. We also want our productions to be an authentic manifestation of the national essence."

Miguel Echegeray, official representative of the Nationalist Bureau of Press of the Department of the Interior, with offices at 353 Fifth Avenue, New York, pointed out that the working out of a final plan with distributors might hinge upon recognition of the Franco Government by America.

Moffitt Returns to Kansas City 'Star'

John C. Moffitt, a Hollywood screen writer for the last three years, has returned to Kansas City to resume his duties as drama editor of the Kansas City Star. Landon Laird, who has held the drama editorship in Mr. Moffitt's absence, will continue to be associated with the department and has been assigned to write a special column dealing with all types of amusements.

Mr. Moffitt originally went to Hollywood to write a life story of Mae West. Paramount purchased his play "Roaring Girl" on which the studio based the film "Exclusive." His other screen credits include "I'm from Missouri," "Ride a Crooked Mile," "St. Louis Blues," "Tropic Holiday," "Double or Nothing," "Mountain Music" and "Rhythm on the Range." His most recent assignment was on "Happy Ending," the new Pat O'Brien and Olympe Bradna film.

The Queen theatre, De Queen, Ark., opened on Thursday to an invited audience. The theatre is operated by the R. Lee Williams Corporation.

Harold Kitterman, formerly of Columbia Pictures, has joined Monogram's Salt Lake City exchange as booker, replacing Evelyn Nursener.

Tax Collections Rise on Broadway, Down Elsewhere

Admission tax collections in February were at the lowest level for any month since August, 1938, at $1,503,127, the internal Revenu Bureau reported on March 21st.

The month's collections were $61,000 under the $1,564,134 reported for January and $156,500 under the February, 1938, total of $1,659,640. The drop from January was in sharp contrast to the situation a year ago, when collections in February were $306,000 above those of the preceding month.

For the eight months ended with February, the bureau reported, collections aggregated $13,381,836, a loss of $32,918 from the $14,467,074 reported for the corresponding period a year ago.

While collections for the country as a whole declined between January and February, revenues in the Third New York (Broadway) district took a sharp swing upward, the bureau reported, totaling $514,746.21 compared with $447,839.87 in January and $560,240.25 in February, 1938.

Most encouraging was the increase in collections at the box offices, which jumped from $361,463.75 in January to $446,555.34 the following month, where they were nearly $29,000 above the $417,766.18 reported for February of last year. Collections from the permanent use or lease of boxes and seats also increased, from $42.74 in January to $612.45 in February, where they contrasted sharply with the $2.95 collected in February, 1938.

Receipts from all other sources, however, declined, the specific figures being as follows: Free or reduced rate admissions, $6,819.77 to $6,096.57; tickets sold by brokers, $20,908.99 to $13,786.20; tickets sold by proprietors in excess of the established price, $465.96 to $19.05; and admissions to roof gardens and cabarets, $58,138.66 to $47,676.60.

Graphic Circuit To Expand

Newell Kurzon, son of Sam Kurzon, head of the New England Graphic Circuit, said this week that expansion of the circuit is planned. Mr. Kurzon was in Boston to establish a branch office there. The circuit operates 12 theatres in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York.

Devlin Plans Travel Series

Major Paul P. Devlin, who has severed connections with Andre de LaVarre, producer of the Screen Traveler series, plans to produce and distribute a new series of travel subjects.

French Film Acquired

Spectrum Picture Corporation has arranged with Variety Film Distributors to distribute "Heroes of the Marne," French film, in America. Raimu is the star of the picture.

The RKO-Pathe branch office in Los Angeles changed its location on Wednesday to 8611 Sunset Boulevard, Beverly Hills.

20th CENTURY-FOX ANNOUNCES 52 FOR 1940, FIVE TO COST $2,000,000

Company Increasing Budget to Offset Narrowing European Market with Big Pictures of World Appeal

Third of the new season's product announcements to come from the large distributors, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, in annual convention on Thursday through Saturday at the Congress hotel in Chicago, made known that it again will produce 52 features, a total to which the company has been adhering generally in recent years.

There will be 52 single reel subjects besides the Movietone News.

Headlined by at least five $2,000,000 productions, "The Rains Came," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Little Old New York," "Brigham Young" and "Drums Along the Mohawk," and possibly others, the complete roster of the new program was disclosed by Herman Wobber, general manager of sales.

Increasing Budget

Instead of curtailing production in the face of threatening loss of European markets, it was announced that Twentieth Century-Fox will spend more money than ever before, with the expectation of offsetting the European situation by recapturing bigger business through the production of more pictures based on subjects with greater world appeal. Development of the South American and other new markets also is expected to be a factor and with the Latin market particularly in mind, S. R. Kent, company president, will leave shortly for a tour of that field.

The 1939-40 campaign will be further encouraged, it was announced, by "the biggest newspaper and magazine advertising campaign yet undertaken by Twentieth Century-Fox," with special appropriations for each of the company's big productions, as well as heavy display space to acquaint the exhibitor and the public with the company's entire production plan.

Two Million Ad Budget

A total of $2,000,000, the largest advertising appropriation in the company's history, will be spent promoting the 1939-40 product, the convention was told Thursday by Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity.

Mr. McCarthy said that the bulk of this would be expended in cooperative advertising in daily newspapers. Schedules are also now being prepared for the use of a number of mass circulation national magazines as well as motion picture fan magazines and trade publications.

"Advertising in the daily newspapers will play an increasingly larger part in the selling of our new motion pictures next season," declared Mr. McCarthy. "They have proved for us the most effective method of arousing wide public interest and stimulating attendance at the theatres showing our films.

"The daily newspapers are peculiarly suitable for motion picture advertising. Our problem of making advertisements coincide with the release dates and the booking dates of our pictures is solved only by the daily newspaper, which, because of its flexibility, is equipped to make quick changes and which gives us, as well as the exhibitor, a maximum opportunity to capitalize on last-minute developments that might increase business.

"The 1939-40 advertising plans provide for the use of almost 300 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 30,317,641. This is a considerable increase over the number of papers used by this company in previous years. For 1938-39, the company made use of 24 national magazines with a combined circulation of 22,610,486. The new budget will permit the continued use of these periodicals."

The delegates on Thursday evening saw, for the first time, the company's new "Alexander Graham Bell," at a private screening at the Chicago theatre. The night before they all attended the annual Golden Gloves amateur fight championship.

Zanuck to Make 24

Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production in Hollywood, will make 24 specials of the new season's product. The convention announcement cited a total of 32 story subjects from which his final selection will be made. Included in the list which Mr. Zanuck personally will make are three Cosmopolitan Productions, to be determined later.

Completing the total of 48 releases, the Sol M. Wurtzel units will make 28 pictures, concentrating mainly on the popular series pictures, such as the Jones Family, Charley Chan, Mr. Moto, and four Jane Withers comedies.

52 Single-Reel Subjects

Twentieth Century-Fox will hold to a policy of "fewer and better short subjects," according to Mr. Wobber. In addition to Movietone News the company will release 52 single-reel subjects for 1939-40.

Amplifying Mr. Wobber's statement, Truman Talley, producer of Movietone News and short subjects, and his staff, Lew Lehr, Lowell Thomas, Ed Thorgersen and Vyvyan Donner discussed plans for the year's short subjects in more detail.

"The trend in short subject production is definitely away from quantity, as our policy of making fewer and better shorts demonstrated this season," Mr. Talley said today, "and it is reasonable that we should continue along the same line for 1939-40. Due provision has been made for expansion or contraction for reasons either of unusual interest in subject matter or company policy.

On the 1939-40 short subject schedule there will be six in the series of "The Magic Carpet of Movietone"; four Fashion Forecasts, filmed in color under direction of Vyvyan Donner, with Ilka Chase as narrator; six "Sports Reviews" by Ed Thorgersen; four "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" and six "Dribblepuss Parade Comedies," comedies, with Lew Lehr.

Paul Terry, producer of Terrytoons, told the convention that he would deliver 26 cartoons, ten in color. The cartoon characters, "Captain McDoodle" and "Gandy Goose," will be continued.

Kent Goes Direct from Studio

Mr. Kent and Mr. Wobber, who had been in Hollywood for the previous three weeks discussing pictures for the forthcoming year with Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck, went direct from the studio to Chicago. All meetings were conducted by Mr. Wobber.

The eastern group of delegates included home office executives and sales representatives, headed by William Sussman, William Kupper, William Gehring, all division sales managers; Felix A. Jenkins, secretary of the company; C. E. McCarthy, advertising and publicity head; Truman H. Talley, producer of Movietone News; W. J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution; Sir Gordon Craig, general manager of Movietone News in Great Britain; R. Sutton Dawes, director of sales in Great Britain and Paul Terry, maker of Terrytoons. Other members of this executive group were Jack Sichelman, Martin Moskowitz, William J. Clark, E.

Facsimile Broadcasting New Medium To Carry Film Exploitation Matter

A new utilization of radio to serve the ends of motion picture publicity and exploitation has been inaugurated by Twentieth Century-Fox. Cooperating with Station WOR of the Bamberger Broadcasting Service, the company is supplying color stories and news matter on its product for dissemination over the radio station's newly developed facsimile broadcasting apparatus in the daily edition of the "facsimile newspaper of the air," which is received by approximately 1,000 sets equipped for the service in the area served by WOR.

Material for the first broadcast, which took place last Wednesday, was derived, appropriately enough, from the publicity devised for "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," previewed this week.

The WOR "Home Facsimile Edition" has been in successful operation for about a year. The systems of transmission used are known as the Finch and RCA systems, designed independently by W. H. H. Finch and Radio Corporation of America. Printed words and photographs are scanned and converted into electrical impulses which modulate radio waves generated by ordinary radio frequency apparatus. At the receiving end the facsimile page is printed upon a continuous ribbon of paper.

Arrangements for the exclusive use of Twentieth Century-Fox news over the facsimile system were made by Alfred J. McCosker, president of WOR, and Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for the film company. No announcement was made of present or future plans for carrying paid advertising in the form to which newspaper readers are accustomed.

250 at Convention

District managers, branch managers and salesmen from all the exchanges in the United States and Canada were at the convention, attended by some 250 in all.

Special guests were Spyros Skouras, president, and William Powers, H. Fitzgerald and J. J. Sullivan, executives of National Theatres, with which Twentieth Century-Fox is associated. Also attending was E. B. Hatrick, vice president of Cosmopolitan, whose productions Fox will release for the first time, starting next season. Warners have been releasing the Cosmopolitans, and prior to that, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer handled them.

The 1939-40 Program

The full 1939-40 program as announced by Mr. Wobber follows:

The Rains Came, the "biggest production ever attempted by 20th Century-Fox," based on the novel by Louis Bromfield. Clarence Brown will direct, with a cast co-starring Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent, and a support including Cesar Romero, Joseph Schildkraut, Maria Ouspenskaya and Henry Travers.

Stanley and Livingstone, a $2,000,000 production which has been more than two years in the making. A special crew was sent to Africa to obtain scenes. Directed by Henry King, the cast includes Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Brennan, Henry Hull, Henry Travers and Charles Coburn.

Hollywood Cavalcade, called the "Big Parade" of film history patterned to the scale of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Alice Faye and Don Ameche will be co-starred. The screen play is by Ernest Pascal, from a story by Lou Breslow.

Brigham Young, a special on the life of the Mormon leader.

Sequel to "Kentucky"

Maryland, to be produced in color as a sequel to "Kentucky." The story deals with the breeding of thoroughbred trotting horses and the history of Maryland. It was written by Sonya Levien.

Lady Jane, with Shirley Temple, to be filmed in color. Adapted from the child story by Mrs. C. V. Jamieson, with a New Orleans at Mardi Gras time background. To be directed by Walter Lang.

Everything Happens at Night, comedy starring Sonja Henie, and featuring her ice ballets.

Drums Along the Mohawk, to be filmed in color. Dealing with the early days of pioneer trappers, this novel by Walter Edmonds has been undergoing research and writing work for two years.

Exhibition Stems Mexico's Decline

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

Stiff competition from Hollywood in the form of top flight pictures in Spanish is making itself felt in Mexico's film industry, particularly in production. Also, Hollywood is attracting many of the best Mexican players and the Hollywood product is finding good acceptance throughout Latin America, causing Mexican producers to worry about their exports. Finally there is the drag of mediocre films produced by Mexican companies.

The Mexican industry, which only dates back to 1929 when sound came in, was progressing fairly well until the present acute depression set in. Yet, despite the sharp economic slump, Mexican exhibitors are doing about the biggest business there is today in Mexico. Major cinemas can still command a 40 cent top.

Production Money Called Scarce

The plight of the producers is something else. Money is scarce, and the output of mediocre films is attributed largely to the lack of adequate financing. The same reason also accounts for the migration of Mexican players to Hollywood.

Taxes are obviously burdening the industry. There is a movement for the federal government to subsidize the industry, along lines employed by some other countries. The industry hopes that if the administration cannot take it under its financial wing, in view of the depression, it should at least relieve the situation by lifting some of the taxes. The argument is that inasmuch as pictures are an established commodity in Mexico, the government would make more money out of the industry by rendering as much encouragement as possible.

President Lazaro Cardenas has assured those producers who asked for help along these lines that he will do all possible to relieve the situation.

The Mexico City municipal government, urged by numerous cinema patrons who complained of the annoyance, has enacted a law which forbids the wearing of hats by anyone in cinemas, theatres and other indoor places of public amusement. Some women's organizations are protesting the regulation. They say women have a perfect right to wear hats anywhere.

"Good Neighbor" Hour

For the purpose of strengthening good will between Mexico and the United States and attracting more American tourists, the Mexican government has instituted the "Good Neighbor Hour" every Thursday from 11 p. m. until midnight (New York time) from the radio stations XEXA and XEDP in Mexico City and XENT at Nuevo Laredo, across from Laredo, Texas.

The Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's strongest labor organization, has consented to reconsider the ban it placed on the Italian production, "Scipio l'Africano," on the ground that it is Fascist propaganda. The ban applies to all Mexico and has been in effect for several months. The Confederation recently lifted the ban it placed on the German-made "Carmen," which it considered to be Nazi propaganda.

So thoroughly have the cinema and radio captured the patronage of the Mexico City public that a group of stage players have asked President Cardenas to provide a federal subsidy to assure that the theatre in Mexico, particularly its lighter aspects, shall not pass into oblivion. Variety houses now charge only five cents for a show of eight acts.

New Corporations Formed

Three incorporations this week with the New York secretary of state, in Albany, belong in the motion picture industry classification. They are the Schine Rochester Corporation, of Gloversville, for operation of three Rochester houses, with directors R. E. Wallace and Mark Benjamin of Gloversville, and Alton F. Dockstader, of Johnstown; Famport Productions, Inc., of New York City, with principals Geraldine Weiss, Bessie L. Maarsen, and Rose Leader; Television Technicians, Inc., with directors Arnold Katz, of New York; Ely Jankowitz, of Brooklyn, and Mildred G. Feder, of Bayonne, New Jersey.

Artist Commissioned To Paint O'Donnell

Members of the Variety Club of Dallas in appreciation of their chief barker and organizer of the club, R. J. (Bob) O'Donnell, general manager of the Interstate circuit, have commissioned John Doctoroff, Chicago portrait painter, to do an oil painting of Mr. O'Donnell. Paul Short, divisional manager for National Screen Service in Dallas, headed the Variety Club committee which arranged for the painting.

The club has delegated 17 representatives to attend the national convention of Variety Clubs in Detroit April 28-30 in an effort to secure the 1940 convention for Dallas.

Projectionists and stage employees of North Carolina will have their convention at Charlotte April 23rd. W. H. Fowler is the president.

UA SIGNS SELZNICK, LOEW, LESSER, LUBITSCH

30 Films Next Year; United Artists Celebrates 20th Anniversary April 23 to May 20

Moves to give additional strength to United Artists' new producing organization came this week with the signing of David Oliver Selznick, David L. Loew, and Sol Lesser-Ernst Lubitsch as a production unit. The contracts were negotiated by Murray Silverstone, operating executive, who is due to return to New York from the coast at the end of the week.

Celebration April 23–May 20

The contributions of the new producers are to be added to those of Alexander Korda, Walter Wanger, Hal Roach, Douglas Fairbanks, Edward Small and Charles Chaplin, with Samuel Goldwyn's new season plans still indefinite.

The announcements of the new producer-affiliates tied in with the company's 20th anniversary celebration, along with the designation of the period from April 23d to May 20th as "United Artists month." Approximately 30 films will be released next year.

The deal whereby Selznick-International will continue releasing through United Artists was worked out by Mr. Selznick, Mr. Silverstone, John Hay Whitney and Henry Ginsberg, vice-president and general manager of Selznick-International. The contract is flexible as to the number of pictures to be made and the time of production, but at least three will be delivered in the first year. The films on the Selznick calendar include "Rebecca," "Intermezzo," "Titanic," "Flashing Stream," "Freedom of the Press" and "Ordeal."

Two from David Loew

Commenting on the new long term contract made with David L. Loew, Mr. Silverstone said, "Starting off and maintaining a standard of million dollar productions, with outstanding name directors as well as stars, Loew will deliver two for the 1939-40 schedule." Mr. Loew, for many years a vice-president and member of the board of directors of Loew's, Inc., is a son of the late Marcus Loew.

Sol Lesser and Ernst Lubitsch have signed a five year deal whereby they will make a minimum of three pictures a year, each budgeted at $1,000,000. Mr. Lesser is president of both the Ernst Lubitsch Corporation and Sol Lesser Productions, now combined to release through UA. Two of the first three films will be directed and produced by Mr. Lubitsch. The third will be from a stage success. Mr. Lubitsch will not be able to start his new affiliation until January of 1940, as his present contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer calls for the completion, first, of "Ninotchka," the Greta Garbo film, and "Shop Around the Corner," James Stewart-Margaret Sullavan picture. Mr. Lesser will join the company in September of 1939. Financially associated with the producing company will be Louis Lurie, San Francisco theatre operator.

The Edward Small product is headed by Howard Spring's novel, "My Son, My Son." His five other productions for the 1939-40 season are: "South of Pago Pago," an adventure romance set in the South Seas; "Food for the Gods," from the H. G. Wells novel; "The Life of Rudolph Valentino," "Two Years Before the Mast," Richard Dana's sea story, and "Quantrill, the Raider," story of William Clark Quantrill, Civil War leader. Mr. Small's current production schedule will close with "The Man in the Iron Mask" and "Kit Carson, Avenger."

James Roosevelt Sails

James Roosevelt, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Ltd., sails for England Saturday on the Normandie, taking with him a print of "Wuthering Heights." It was denied by Goldwyn officials that the trip was for the purpose of conferring with Alexander Korda on phases of Mr. Goldwyn's law suit against United Artists. Merle Oberon, star of the picture, also is sailing on the Normandie.

Exhibitors will be asked to join in the celebration of United Artists' 20th anniversary, which will be observed in all the company's exchanges from April 23d to May 20th. Among the activities planned is an exhibitor endorsement of the policy that "quality entertainment can be achieved only when producers are permitted to make pictures the way they want them." Endorsement on the part of exhibitors of this policy of the founders of the company will be recorded in a "20 Golden Years Register," available at all UA exchanges.

A solid gold badge of merit will be awarded to all members of the sales force who achieve a 100 per cent record in sales for the year ending June 30th.

Hints New Erpi Sound Methods

T. K. Stevenson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., said in Hollywood this week that "new methods at present being deleveloped in final form in our research laboratories will greatly increase facility of recording and better theatre reproductions." Mr. Stevenson is on the coast for an inspection of the new ERPI plant in Hollywood.

Mr. Stevenson, who is accompanied by T. Brooks Price, general counsel, said that much of the increased activity for new equipment is due to heightened motion picture interest in South America and other Spanish speaking countries.

He said that ERPI's foreign business in the first two months of this year increased 25 per cent over the similar period last year, despite the fact that the company is continuing its policy of not selling to German-controlled countries.

Halt Portable Showings

The standard rental agreement of the Film Boards of Trade in Canada has stopped the further use of 35 mm. pictures in halls by prohibiting the booking of standard films except for theatres having permanently installed projection machines and sound systems. This means the termination of standard film exhibition in Canada with portable projection equipment.

Aalberg in East

John O. Aalberg, director of RKO's sound department, is in New York from the coast on a tour of inspection in which he is checking on sound in RKO theatres in connection with new improvements.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

New

A new organization, Christy-Bass Productions, the principal asset of which is George Bass, Jr., son of the music-hall top liner, has launched into activity with "A Brief Case", a slapstick comedy inspired by the conviction in the continued appeal of the custard pie and its kindred comedy elements.

Working with the unit is William Christy, who claims Hollywood associations. Ernest Palmer, one of Britain's crack cameramen, is in charge of photography, and the cast includes Finlay Currie, Charles Penrose, Wally Patch and Eve Shelley.

Production is at the Rock Studios.

Revival

A revival in modernized form and screen adaptation of a stage thriller of yesteryear "An Englishman's Home", will see the launching into actual production of a new company, Aldwych Productions, whose pictures are to be distributed by United Artists.

Production will start shortly, probably at the Denham Studios, under the aegis of Reginald Fogwell, with Albert de Courville directing the picture.

"An Englishman's Home", is a story of the invasion of Britain by foreign enemies.

First RKO-Radio

First RKO-Radio Picture to be produced as such in Great Britain, "The Saint in London", has gone on to the floor at Elstree under the direction of John Paddy Carstairs. George Sanders stars in the title role with Sally Gray playing feminine lead.

"The Saint in London" is third of the series of Leslie Charteris "Saint" stories to be made by RKO Radio, who have hitherto confined production to their Hollywood studio.

An exclusively British unit will be employed and arrangements have been made for a predominantly English cast to play in the film. David Burns, however, has been signed to enact a prominent role.

Itemized

British production has been launched by Anglo-American Film Corporation at the M. P. Studios, Elstree, with "The Men From M.1.5" taking the floor under the direction by John Baxter. The script is by Michael Hogan.

Plans to make a color film based upon the fairy tale of Cinderella has been announced by Somlo Films, British production company. The script already has been completed by Thorold Dickinson.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

"The Patriot," the new novel by Pearl S. Buck, recent recipient of the Nobel Award, has succeeded Rachel Field's "All This, and Heaven Too" as the best seller of fiction, according to the monthly tabulations of "Best Sellers and Renters" in The Retail Bookseller, house organ of The Baker & Taylor Company, New York. "All This, and Heaven Too" continues to lead the best renters.

Ten Best Sellers

(Based upon a count of sales from February 15th to March 15th)

1. The Patriot, by Pearl S. Buck.
2. The Tree of Liberty, by Elizabeth Page.
3. Wickford Point, by John P. Marquand.
4. All This, and Heaven Too, by Rachel Field.
5. Rebecca, by Daphne du Maurier.
6. Seasoned Timber, by Dorothy Canfield.
7. Gone with the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell.
8. Disputed Passage, by Lloyd C. Douglas.
9. The Case of the Perjured Parrot, by Erle S. Gardner.
10. The Adventure of Christopher Columin.

Ten Best Renters

(Based on nationwide reports)

1. All This, and Heaven Too, by Rachel Field.
2. Rebecca, by Daphne du Maurier.
3. Disputed Passage, by Lloyd C. Douglas.
4. Three Harbors, by F. Van Wyck Mason.
5. Song of Years, by Bess Streeter Aldrich.
6. My Son, My Son! by Howard Spring.
7. Frost Flower, by Helen Hull.
8. Danger Signal, by Phyllis Bottome.
9. . . . and Tell of Time, by Laura Krey.
10. Royal Regiment, by Gilbert Frankau.

Distinguished

Distinguished actors of the French screen appear in "Young Man's Fancy", a Michael Balcon production presently being directed by Robert Stevenson at the Ealing Studios. The three artists, Mme. Aimos, Bertic and Rognoni, appear in scenes laid in Paris and have small, but it is reported effective, character roles.

Rognoni is known to French audiences as the voice used to double, for French distribution for Wallace Beery, Spencer Tracy and Edward G. Robinson. He also "dubbed" for Warner Oland in the Charlie Chan series.

Workers Star

Workers in the Lancashire cotton industry are stars of a documentary film produced for the G.P.O. Film Unit by Albert Cavalcanti, "Health in Industry." The film, which is being directed by Patrick Jackson, seeks to present modern methods of fighting occupational diseases and of reducing pit and factory accidents. It shows the effect of lead poisoning, cancer of the skin, anthrax and silicosis and the benefits of preventive methods of treatment.

Due for production by the G.P.O. Film Unit shortly will be a film aimed to popularize television.

London's traffic problems are covered in "The City" and London's health administration in "The Health of the Nation".

Stardom

Syd Walker, one time music-hall comedian, the last few years has played minor character roles in British films. His success as the "junk" man in a leading British radio feature "Band Waggon", has now lifted him to stardom. He is playing a leading part of a detective in the new Grafton Film production "I Killed the Count", currently on the floor at the Highbury Studios.

Playing with Walker, who is a Cockney comedian, are Ben Lyon and Terence de Marny, both radio favorites in this country; Barbara Blair, American actress-chanteuse, and Ronald Shiner, Cockney character actor.

"I Killed the Count" is based upon a stage play of the same name and is being produced by I. Goldsmid and directed by Fred Zelnick.

Brandt Heads Foreign Pictures Distribution

Harry Brandt, head of the Brandt theatre circuit in New York City, and president of the Independent Theatre Owners, has formed a new organization for the distribution of foreign films in this country. The company, Film Alliance of the United States, Inc., with temporary offices in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York City, was formed by Mr. Brandt in association with Nat Wachsberger, French distributor and exhibitor.

"Quai des Brumes," "Le Roi," both French-made, and "The Challenge," English-made, are the first three pictures understood to be ready for release. Mr. Wachsberger was expected to sail from France for New York, this week.

Monogram Signs Child Stars

Jackie Moran and Marcia Mae Jones, both 14 years old, have been signed by Monogram to co-star in four films.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS SHOW CONCERN AFTER FIGHT TELEVISION BROADCAST

Committee of CEA Goes into Action on Day It Is Appointed; GB Equipping Larger Theatres With Screening Apparatus

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Prophets, whether of the arm chair variety or otherwise, who foresaw as a result of the Boon-Danahar broadcast a state of intellectual panic among students of the entertainment scene, have not proved far wrong, though "concern" is the more exact word.

All Sit Up and Take Note

All trade and entertainment sections have, since that eventful day in February, sat up to take note of the situation. Not least alert of these has been the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, whose long detachment, now transformed into a state of preoccupation, has inspired it to set up a new committee to report on television. Significantly the committee sat and deliberated on the very day upon which it was appointed.

Another fight has been televised in public, with the approval of the British Broadcasting Corporation, though this time not quite the same interest was provoked. Long battles of words, statement and counter-statement, have been engaged in between the BBC and other entertainment groups. A vital principle has been conceded with the BBC's statement that it will not oppose the rediffusion in public places of television broadcasts of major national events and privately promoted sporting events for which rediffusion fees are asked.

In direct contradiction to their repeated insistence that the permit to rediffuse the Boon-Danahar fight was not a precedent, in spite of the guarded nature of their comment, this would seem to be a change of policy and attitude, and the conceding of a principle upon which the whole future of picture house and public television may yet hinge.

Planning Protection

Organizations representing those whose interests would be immediately affected by public television—writers, film directors, musicians, theatre employees and so forth—already have met in conference to examine the situation in the light of the latest developments and to consider what policy, if any, might be adopted corporatively as protection and defence.

The Stonehaven advisory committee of the home office, which concerns itself exclusively with cinema licensing and its attendant intricacies, is said to have considered public television in its reference to the licensing and control of picture theatres.

Meanwhile, though it is not possible to particularize upon the immediate developments in the new medium, Gaumont British, associated with the Baird system and concern, is equipping its leading theatres with big screen apparatus. Larger houses in Central London, among them the Tivoli, the Dominion, New Victoria and the Gaumont Chelsea, will go temporarily and partially into the hands of excavating engineers bent upon preparing the way for cathode ray television projection. The Monseigneur chain, linked with Scophony, also plans an expansion of its Marble Arch enterprise. It is said that the Derby, classic of Britain's flat racing, will be publicly televised at the Odeon theatre, Leicester Square.

DOWAGER QUEEN MARY SEES ZUKOR ON SET

Adolph Zukor and David E. Rose, managing director of Paramount's organization in Great Britain, were presented to Dowager Queen Mary last Friday when she visited a set in Denham and watched a unit filming "This Man in Paris."

Barney Balaban, in a cable message to New York from London, said "Queen Mary . . . was greatly impressed by the fact that an American company is sponsoring British pictures," and "seemed to regard this as further evidence of the cordial relations and close cooperation which exists between Great Britain and the United States."

Bent upon the acquisition of the necessary material assistance for developing its programs, new finance in the form of a new share issue has been planned by Baird Television, Ltd. Television stocks are rising. Some stocks have doubled in price. Report has it that British Thomson-Houston, Phillips, Pye and EMI, presenting completing experiments, this year will enter the market with cinema television apparatus.

For the present, of course, thanks to the geographical limitations of television broadcasting, picture house television and indeed television reception of all kinds is confined within the limits of an approximately fifty mile radius, and so the voicing of exhibitor concern has been confined, for the most part, to London exhibitors. It is they who have led the demand for investigation and periodical report. No decision has yet been taken by the BBC on provincial development, although it is known that the Television Advisory Committee has considered the practicability of regional transmitters and ultra-short wave relay stations from London to Manchester and Birmingham. These would be spread twenty and thirty miles apart, along the direct main routes, and a short wave length of four or five meters—set low to avoid interference—would be employed. Meanwhile, the Committee awaits results from the experiments of the Post Office and outside technicians.

It would seem likely, following the BBC's new policy, that it will be possible for major national events to be shown on cinema television screens as well as promoted events of a sporting character. For these last, of course, royalties would be paid. It remains to be seen whether "events of national importance" would include the Derby, the University Boat race and the Isle of Man Tourist Trophy race. As regards promoted events, the BBC will insist that no exclusives should be given, but that applicants should be granted rights on equal terms based upon seating capacities. Material for cinema television programs, then would appear likely to concentrate at the outset upon national news, whether military, social or sporting. The setting up of an independent organization, bent upon providing dramatic and musical entertainment for exclusive diffusion to picture houses, a sort of trade television service, has been mooted by Sagall of Scophony and mentioned by Ostrer of Baird. The BBC's attitude to copyright or monopoly of the ether waves will be a vital point in this regard.

Exhibitors would seem to be moving towards the conviction that a real competitive factor is involved, that they can no more turn back the tide of television than could the late lamented King Canute, and that by cooperation and investigation with other interests, a great amount of damage can be avoided.

A sort of new menace is feared by students of television with promoters of sporting events exploiting the new entertainment vogue by demanding high royalties for the privilege of diffusion. High fees were paid for the rights to screen the Boon-Danahar and Harvey-Gains fights, but it is feared that these are a fraction of what may be demanded in the future. Boxing impresarios see a new source of income and will act accordingly against a movement which permits a boxing fan to see intimately and comfortably for two or three shillings what the promoters have been asking, and getting, five or ten guineas for.

The Baird company have launched a new financing plan and announce the issue of a £400,000 ($2,000,000) five per cent loan stock, convertible at option into a new class of preference share. Favorable terms are offered and present shareholders are given first opportunity of buying. The prospectus says: "Certain shareholders and creditors of the company have already informed the board of their intention to apply for a total of £250,000 loan stock; but the directors' proposals will not be proceeded with unless at least £325,000 of the loan is subscribed."

Plan Criticized

The new financing scheme has met with acid criticism in financial circles, notably from the London financial press which has suggested that GB shareholders should oppose any suggestion that their resources should be made available to Baird Television. It is calculated that Gaumont's investment in Baird amounts to £250,000, none of which so far has had any return. Baird, it is stated, has now an overdraft and loan amounting to £250,000.

Against opposition such as the above, British Cinema television, greatly concentrated at present in the pioneering work of Baird, faces the problem of development.

Organize Screen Aid

The British Ministry of Labor has established a new department to consolidate the aid expected from the film industry in propaganda in the event of a national emergency. Bryan Wallace, scenarist, has been appointed film advisor in the national service.

British newsreel companies have obtained permission to film the Football Association Cup Final at Wembley this year, but no permission for television has yet been given.

FARNSWORTH OFFERS $3,600,000 ISSUE; SHORTS CALLED TELEVISION'S NEED

CBS Starts Public Broadcasting June 15, General Electric July 1st; Gaumont British Equipping Eight London Theatres

Developments in television this week included the flotation of the first large stock issue, by the Farnsworth Television and Radio Corporation, announcement that Columbia Broadcasting will start New York telecasting on June 15th, followed by General Electric's first operation of its station July 1st. From London came word that Gaumont British is preparing eight of its London theatres for the installation of television equipment.

600,000 Shares Offered

The first public financing for Farnsworth, one of the largest "independent" pioneers, was carried out Monday with the offering of 600,000 shares of common stock at six dollars a share. A portion of the cash proceeds from the sale of the shares will be used for the acquisition of the business and properties of Capehart, Inc., and certain properties of the General Household Utilities Company.

On the completion of the financing, the company plans to begin the manufacture of television transmitting and receiving apparatus based on the inventions of Philo T. Farnsworth, its director of research.

Ten Years, Says Paley

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, who is now on the coast, said Monday that when CBS starts its television program in the middle of June, the first releases will concentrate on news, and will be confined to the New York City area. He predicted television would not be comparable to present day commercial radio for at least 10 years. In Hollywood, Mr. Paley will confer with film executives on how CBS may cooperate with them to the best advantage of both.

The revised plans for the Radio Corporation of America, parent company of National Broadcasting Company, television exhibit at the New York World's Fair call for eight display sections. They include a television display and laboratory. A total of 80,000 people have visited Radio City to witness the television tour, since the inception of the tour last September, at 40 cents apiece. During the Fair, NBC expects to do an even larger business on the tour.

General Electric plans to begin operation of its television station on July 1st, with the transmitter above John Boyd Thacher Park in Albany. It will have a 25 mile radius.

Action in England

The Dominion, New Victoria, Tivoli, Chelsea, Gaumont and three other central London houses are being altered by Gaumont British for the installation of television apparatus. Following discussions on television, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has agreed to the formation of a non-technical committee which will report to the General Council monthly. Major Gale, CEA treasurer, declared that it is foolish for exhibitors to imagine that they can stop television, and urged cooperation and study with a view to minimizing any loss to film theatres. The third British film to be telecast, "The Edge of the World," is set for a British Broadcasting Corporation telecast on Saturday.

Officials of BBC have asked the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to install a test receiving set in western Canada, in territory which engineers claim to be one of the best in the world for receiving purposes. With such a receiving set, "freak reception" could be studied, such as that in which a BBC broadcast was picked up on Long Island by NBC.

Roland John Kemp of Chelmsford, England, has designed a television system to make possible the blind landing of planes in fog. The system would give the pilot a picture of the field and also of the angle at which he must come to earth for a safe landing. Two transmitters are used on the landing field, one for short wave radio and the other for television. These are keyed together, as are the corresponding receivers on the plane.

Set Drive for Mayer

The Twentieth Century-Fox Des Moines branch has set April 30th to June 10th for a drive in honor of the 25th anniversary in the film industry of Stanley Mayer, branch manager. Territorial exhibitors are also planning a banquet. At present Mr. and Mrs. Mayer are in Washington on a vacation.

Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, has returned to Hollywood from a month's vacation.

Film Must Be Exceptionally Interesting to Hold Audience Even 15 Minutes, Says C. W. Farrier, NBC Coordinator

Shorts preferred.

That is the message television gives to motion picture producers who expect the new "art," burgeoning on April 30 with the opening of the New York World's Fair, to use much film in lieu of "live" talent, according to C. W. Farrier, "television coordinator" for the National Broadcasting Company. (Picture on page 10).

Calls Features Too Long

It is conceded by Mr. Farrier that television's unusual requirements, which make new training necessary for actors and technicians, make it impossible to fill the company's schedule with "live" studio entertainment; hence, films must be used—but not features, according to Mr. Farrier.

"So far," he said, "we've found feature length films as used in theatres too long for television. One's interest is not held long enough and there are technical factors. We're finding that the film has to be damned interesting to keep people absorbed even 15 minutes."

Mr. Farrier asserted that shorts such as "the March of Time," seemed "too long," to him and to persons who were used as test audiences.

"Somehow," he said, "it doesn't seem as good on the television screen as it seems on the motion picture screen."

Technical Limitations

Mr. Farrier explained his reference to the "technical factors" inhibiting showing of feature films.

"We have found features bad because of the fact that in any long picture there are scenes in which the television camera cannot follow the film because of its smaller resolution capabilities. Mob scenes and extreme long shots, with small detail, are examples."

NBC's World's Fair Telecasts

NBC, Mr. Farrier explained, will inaugurate its public television broadcasts on April 30th, coincident with the opening of the New York World's Fair. Two hours per week, to begin with, will be devoted to public telecasting. The time probably will be between 8 and 9 p. m. Special events will demand, and receive, extra time, he asserted.

In addition, the company will broadcast five hours daily, five days weekly, "test" programs, such as it has been doing until midnight every day.

Two Types of Programs

Mr. Farrier outlined the fare on the two types of programs. The public telecasts will use dramatic material, for which rehearsal has been going on for several months, and "suitable" short films. The test programs will use mostly film, of the type which has been used thus far: documentary shorts, commercial shorts from producers and sponsors, shorts from advertising agencies, travelogues, and other shorts—"a million of them"—from independent theatrical film sources.

Mr. Farrier refused to reveal what company's short product NBC would use. He said the company is now "dickering" with every major distributing company, and with Grand National; and with travel agencies, foreign consulates, and the United States Government, for short product.

(Universal)

Melodrama

"Big Town Czar" will tell a typical story of a racketeering chief who arose from the slums of the New York tenements to become a big shot gangster and ends up in the gutters. It will be a case of rival gangs and gangsters preying on each other, with the public suffering no more damage than is the lot of the ordinary innocent bystander. In other words, it's a matter of internecine strife.

Ed Sullivan, newspaper reporter, who will appear in the picture, is the author of the story on which the production is based. The screen play is credited to Edmund L. Hartmann, whose credits include many melodramatic original screen stories and adaptations. The director, Arthur Lubin, was responsible for "Beloved Brat," "Midnight Intruder," "Secrets of a Nurse" and the recently previewed "Risky Business."

The featured players are Barton MacLane, the detective in the "Torchy Blane" series and most recently in "Prison Break" and "The Storm," Tom Brown, Eve Arden, who was in "Stage Door" and "Letter of Introduction," Frank Jenks, Walter Woolf King and Jack Larue. The support includes Sullivan, Jerry Marlowe, who will make his first screen appearance, Gordon Jones and Horace MacMahon.

Release date: April 21, 1939.

The Return of the Cisco Kid

(20th Century-Fox)

Western

"In Old Arizona" and "The Cisco Kid," although made a long time ago, have already pre-exploited "The Return of the Cisco Kid." The first named won the Academy's best actor award for Warner Baxter in 1929. He repeated the character in "The Cisco Kid" a couple of years later. We asked a group of reporters recently what they considered Baxter's best character portrayal. Six out of eight voted for the "Cisco Kid." He will repeat the character in "The return of the Cisco Kid."

The production will be a glorified western, produced on a scope similar to "Jesse James" and "The Oklahoma Kid," which have given wider audiences greater interest in outdoor action films. It will be Baxter in the role of a romantic, swaggering, law-defying caballero who robs and makes love with equal abandon. It is the occasion for a continuation of quixotic dare-deviltry, tender love making and eye-opening pictorial spectacle, an entertainment prescription which apparently is pleasing the tastes of all ages.

Behind-the-scenes items of exploitation value are the facts that this will be a Cosmopolitan production and naturally the recipient of flamboyant publicity in the Hearst press; that it is being produced by the maker of "Lloyds of London," "In Old Chicago" and "Alexander Graham Bell," Kenneth Macgowan; that it is based on an O. Henry story and that it is being directed by Herbert I. Leeds, whose credits include "Five of a Kind," "The Arizona Wildcat" and "Danger Island."

Baxter, naturally will be the dominating name asset, but there are other personalities worthy of more than ordinary attention. Lynn Bari, after an apprenticeship period in secondary pictures, will be the heroine. Baxter's chief henchman, the dumb but ruthless "Lopez," will be Cesar Romero, who has delivered good performances in many pictures, notably Shirley Temple's "Little Princess." Another of those support actors who make the stars look good, Henry Hull, also will be seen. Impressive in "Boys Town," as he was in "Jesse James" as the country editor, he will again be seen as a pompous old windbag and lovable liar. Further strength is given the list of principals by the inclusion of Robert Barrat and C. Henry Gordon. Such talent as Chris-Pin Martin, Soledad Jimenez, Harry Strang, Arthur Aylesworth, Victor Kilian and Ward Bond will be seen in minor parts.

Release date: April 28, 1938.

The Second Shot

(RKO Radio)

Melodramatic Romance

Bizarre and highly theatrical romance and melodrama provide the story basis of "The Second Shot." The main locale is Panama with its jungle. A disillusioned cabaret entertainer becomes the respectable "companion" of an oil prospector who has been fleeced. When he is about to be double crossed out of a fortune, she helps prevent this. For a time she believes herself a murderess and goes to New York, but when he arrives to tell her she is not a killer, it's love.

The picture will present Lucile Ball, leading woman of the late "Anabella" series, and Allan Lane, presently featured in "They Made Her a Spy." Both have been together previously in "Twelve Crowded Hours" and "Having Wonderful time," as principals. The support includes Donald Briggs, Evelyn Brent, Bernadine Hayes, Steffi Dunna, Abner Biberman, who was "Chota" in "Gunga Din," and Earl Hodgins.

The picture is based on the story "Panama Flo," written by Garrett Fort. The screen play is the work of Michael Kanin, who did the same job for "They Made Her a Spy." Jack Hively also directed "They Made Her a Spy."

Release date: To be determined.

Each Dawn I Die

(Warner)

Melodrama

Following quickly on "Angels with Dirty Faces," with "The Oklahoma Kid" intervening, "Each Dawn I Die" promises to be a melodramatic vehicle that should elevate James Cagney to greater popular heights than ever before attained. There is a distinct possibility that it will be beneficial to George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft, Thurston Hall, Maxie Rosenbloom and Joe Downey.

"Each Dawn I Die" will be a prison picture. Its principal characters will be desperate and dangerous men. The basic plot has a dual theme; one is a smashing indictment of political corruption, the other is a vivid exposure of prison abuses.

The hero is a newspaper reporter who has been made a victim of political racketeering. His sometimes ally and other times enemy in the grim and bitter story is a four-time loser doing a 199 year sentence. They endure innumerable abuses and persecution. Then following a sensational break and a bloody riot, the hero is delivered from injustice.

Exhibitors can go far back and recall a long list of impressive prison pictures, such as "The Big House." Yet the technique of screen story telling has advanced measurably since that picture, and from the manner in which the substance of Jerry Odlum's novel is used one can expect the new production to include all the old and worthy melodrama as well as much that is new.

William Keighley, experienced in melodramatic treatment through films of the caliber of "Special Agent," "G-Man" and "Bullets and Ballots," is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

Little Mother

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy

Insofar as this picture will have a story theme, it will be that "appearances are deceitful." The plot concerns the hilarious experiences of a shop girl in trying to convince the world that she isn't the mother of a baby she is forced to take care of. Not only do her friends, employers and executives of a foundling home insist the child is hers, but the pompous and irascible store owner is led to believe that his son is the baby's father. The story's comedy is the result of the efforts made by all concerned to straighten out the affair.

"Little Mother" will be a solo-starring vehicle for Ginger Rogers, her first since "Vivacious Lady." The other half of the love interest team is David Niven, currently in "Wuthering Heights" and recently seen in "Dawn Patrol," "Four Men and a Prayer" and "Three Blind Mice." The supporting cast will include Charles Colburn, who was with Miss Rogers in "Vivacious Lady" but is more readily remembered for "Made for Each Other," also Frank Albertson, E. E. Clive, Ernest Truex, currently in "It's a Wonderful World" and most recently in "Ambush," and Bessie Thomasetsky.

The production is based on a story by Felix Jackson, for which Norman Krasna did the screen play. Such pictures as "Three Loves Has Nancy," "Wife vs. Secretary" and "Hands Across the Table" establish the manner in which he combines snappy dialogue and provocative situations. It is a B. G. DeSylva production being directed by Garson Kanin, maker of "A Man to Remember" and "The Great Man Votes."

Release date: To be determined, but after "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle."

National Variety Meets April 28

The national convention of Variety Clubs has been set for April 28 at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit. John E. Flynn is in charge of convention arrangements, and Frank J. Downey is banquet chairman.

20th-FOX REPORTS $7,252,466 NET; REPUBLIC'S CONTRACTS AT 7 MILLIONS

$154,000 in Dividends to B. & K. Stockholders; Agfa Ansco Shows $991,925 Net Income for Last Year

While Sidney R. Kent, president, and Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox Film were announcing product making and selling prospects this week to Fox sales forces in convention at Chicago (see page 53), the corporation was reporting from New York to stockholders on 1938 operations, disclosing a profit of $7,252,466, compared with $8,617,114 for 1937.

Stockholders of Consolidated-Republic, too, heard about the state of their holdings, H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated, at the annual meeting in New York, reporting that Republic had $7,000,000 in film business on its books.

Paramount reported that its Paramount Broadway Corporation, operating the Paramount theatre and home office building at Times Square, had a net operating loss of $235,307 for 1938, and that deficit at December 31st was $537,364.

Stockholders of Balaban and Katz, Paramount's midwestern circuit affiliate, will receive dividends totaling $154,000 on Saturday on 13,061 shares of seven per cent preferred and 264,206 shares of common stock. Annual meeting will be held August 18th.

Agfa Ansco Corporation, of Binghamton, manufacturers of raw film and photographic supplies, in its annual report issued last Friday, showed net income of $991,925 for 1938, after provision for depreciation reserves, interest and $182,528 estimated U. S. and Canadian income taxes.

Percy N. Furber, chairman of the board, reported that Trans Lux Corporation, New York, operating newsreel theatres and movie ticker installations in stock brokerage offices, had profits of $133,717 in 1938, compared with $349,382 in 1937.

Twentieth Century-Fox's Position

Twentieth Century-Fox's $7,252,466 1938 net included dividends from National Theatres Corporation, coast circuit, in the amount of $882,000 compared with $1,134,000 in 1937. These dividends were received in the fourth quarters of the respective years. Fox Film profits for the fourth quarter of 1938 were $2,630,374 compared with $3,718,000 for the fourth quarter of 1937 and $1,202,433 for the third quarter of 1938.

National Theatres and its voting controlled domestic subsidiaries had consolidated net income of $2,617,653 for 1938 compared with $2,988,228 for 1937. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation's 42 per cent interest in National Theatres Corporation indicates an interest in these earnings of $1,099,414.

Twentieth Century-Fox paid dividends on the preferred stock in 1938 of $1.50 per share and $2.00 on the common stock. Total dividends paid amounted to $4,899,218.

The consolidated balance sheet as at Dec. 31, 1938 showed current assets amounting to $31,275,908 including cash of $6,502,168 as against current liabilities of $6,211,515. Also included were approximately $20,000,000 of productions released, at cost less amortization ($9,658,738); unreleased, at cost ($7,609,247), and in progress, at cost ($2,888,162).

Assets of $14,471,711 were listed as Gaumont-British, England, $3,737,567; the 42 per cent of National Theatres, $8,859,886; Movietonews, $608,619; advances in Hoyts Theatres, London, and Roxy theatre, New York, $893,636.

Total assets were $60,703,113.

The company reported gross income of $2,156,693 for the Roxy in 1938, and operating expenses of $1,780,595, which, after interest, depreciation and taxes, resulted in net profit of $110,095.

Republic's Operations

Republic Pictures is showing a profit and has unplayed contracts amounting to more than $7,000,000, H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, told Consolidated's stockholders at their annual meeting last Thursday in New York. A year ago at this time the figure was about $6,000,000. He estimated Republic's profit for the first 1939 quarter as $150,000, and said that a profit was shown in the final quarter last year. Unliquidated product totals $4,742,173.

Mr. Yates said that Consolidated is completing a deal to lend Edward Small, United Artists producer, $150,000 in return for an exclusive printing contract. Universal's note for $1,000,000, which was due within the last 90 days, has been extended another year and may be renewed an additional year.

Owes Consolidated $2,500,000

Questioning brought out that Republic owes Consolidated $2,500,000, of which $500,000 is current. Consolidated has a $750,000 investment in Republic stock, owning 48 per cent, directly and indirectly; Consolidated sales to Republic in 1938 were $1,081,910, compared with $1,033,043 in 1937; instructions have been issued to Republic to limit prints and get 50 bookings per print.

Questioned, Yates said his salary is $75,000 a year from Consolidated, with none from Republic or other subsidiaries. He said several stockholders have submitted recapitalization plans and that something may be worked out soon.

Ralph Poucher, vice-president, estimated Consolidated's first quarter profit as about $258,800, against $166,125 in the corresponding 1938 period, both before taxes, though sales increased only about $200,000.

The stockholders gave the officers a vote of confidence and reelected four directors for three years, as scheduled. The directors met later and reelected the officers.

Documentary Film Appetite Growing Says Joris Ivens

Joris Ivens, one of the chief exponents of documentary films, returned to New York this week from Hollywood after declaring at a Hollywood press conference that he thinks the American film goers "are awakening their appetites for documentary films."

Ivens, who made "Spanish Earth" some years ago and whose latest effort is "The 400,000,000," a six-reel film of the Sino-Japanese war, said that "Spanish Earth," with a production cost of $18,000, was a financial success, having been shown in 300 theatres in the United States. "The 400,000,000," given a $5.50 top price coast premiere in Hollywood at the Esquire Theatre last Sunday, is being distributed in the United States by Garrison Film Company of New York. Ben Goldstein is handling it on the Pacific Coast.

The Dutch film producer-director spent six months in China and spent, he says, $40,000 on "The 400,000,000."

"It tells in documentary style the oppression of the Chinese people—the 400,000,000 victims of Japanese aggression," he said. The persons putting up the money for the film were Luise Rainer, Dorothy Parker, Lillian Hellman, Ernest Hemingway, Archibald MacLiesh, Herman Shumlin, Dudley Nichols and W. Osgood Field.

Documentary films should take their place on the regular theatre screens with films of strictly entertainment content, Mr. Ivens told the press. It makes for a variety of film fare, he said. "The 400,000,000" should appeal to the American public, for 90 per cent of them are against the Japanese invasion, he added.

"I think that American people are thirsting to see new ideas in motion pictures, things which are true to life and tell a vital story," he asserted.

Having previously said that "The 400,000,000" tells only the Chinese side of the war, Mr. Ivens was asked if he felt that it might divide the vast screen audience into two camps and lessen the number attending theatres.

"I do not," he said. "'I think that such pictures will bring more persons to theatres. Documentary films should find a niche between newsreels and entertainment films."

Safety Rules for Trucks

Eighteen executives of various fire underwriting and insurance companies, truck transport and safety and other organizations met last week at Wilmington to revise rules and regulations for truck transportation of explosive or highly inflammable materials, including motion pictures. Representing the motion picture business were Arthur S. Dickinson and A. L. Armstrong, both of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

While the conference took up virtually all aspects of such transportation, physical operation, construction, safety devices and the like, little change was found necessary for film deliveries by truck.

Radio to Extol Its Virtues in Public Campaign Starting on April 17th

A joint goodwill promotional campaign sponsored by the National Association of Broadcasters and the Radio Manufacturers Association will be launched April 17th, the first cooperative effort of radio set manufacturers and broadcasters to exploit the virtues of radio.

The idea was first discussed after the motion picture business announced its "million-dollar" "Motion Pictures Are Your Greatest Entertainment" campaign, last fall.

Final plans for the radio campaign were made at a meeting in Washington of a joint committee representing both organizations, last week, following a study of a questionnaire which the NAB sometime ago sent out to members, asking for views as to the desirability of such a program and the shape it should take.

The advertising effort of the radio industry will proceed simultaneously along four lines: to sell the public on the American system of broadcasting; to advertise the variety and diversity of program structure and the fact that there is no censorship except by the listener; to increase the amount of listening, both by offering better programs and by the sale of additional receiving sets; and to demonstrate the idea of quality reception, showing that the programs go out perfectly from the transmitters and if not received with equal perfection the fault lies with the receiving set.

Nazi Press to Ignore U.S. Films

The Hamburger Tageblatt, official Nazi party paper, will no longer review or advertise motion pictures from the United States, according to a wireless Monday to the New York Times from Hamburg, which disclosed "the first step in what may become a nationwide ban (in Germany) on American films."

Sharp curtailment of American film distribution in Germany started with the Nazi' rise to power and has continued since.

The Tageblatt announced that in view of the "offensive character" of several American films, it will no longer give any notice to U. S. pictures, continued the Times dispatch, which added that the German newspaper took offense at Warners' "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

It was said that the Tageblatt suggests that the American film industry has begun an offensive against the Third Reich. "The mask has fallen," it said. "The supervised American film companies have joined in a chorus of never-ending insult and abuse of Germany."

Czech Treaty Suspended

Official suspension of the reciprocal trade treaty between Czechoslovakia and the United States was announced this week by the State Department at Washington, following the Nazis' recent acquisition of virtually all of the Czech country.

The action had been expected since the Administration had previously classified Czech areas as German-controlled and goods therefrom, including films, as German in origin and not eligible for the treaty concessions formerly given Czechoslovakia. Motion pictures were included in the Czech trade treaty.

Sanctions Czech Goods Here

The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League in New York announced this week that it is not extending its boycott of Nazi-made merchandise to goods marked "Made in Czechoslovakia," and which are in the U. S. as having been made in Czechoslovakia prior to its domination by Hitler. Some Czecho-made films are in circulation in this country, and presumably these, too, would be excluded from any boycott action by the League.

The League on Tuesday sent word to every member of Congress to consider a plan to combat anti-American propaganda.

The plan, advanced by Professor Harold Lasswell, would, besides other propositions, compel Nazi, Fascist or Communist radio speakers to buy an equivalent amount of radio time following their broadcast to permit democratic speakers to refute their statements and defend democratic ideals.

Films Aiding Refugees

The United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs on Monday publicly acknowledged the aid being given by members of the motion picture and theatrical professions to plans for the launching of "the largest campaign for refugees ever undertaken," as sponsored jointly, through the United Jewish Appeal, by the United Palestine Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee and the National Coordinating Committee Fund.

"Important men in the motion picture and theatrical field were among the first to pledge support," declared Henry Ittleson, philanthropist and financial leader, who is chairman of the campaign. He said that employes in motion pictures and theatricals have requested a participation.

March of Time Reels To Schools in 16 MM.

Thirty March of Time releases, which have completed their regular theatrical runs in this country, have been made available, in 16 mm. sound form, to the schools and colleges serviced by the Association of School Film Libraries, according to Fanning Hearon, executive director of the association.

"In making arrangements with the March of Time," Mr. Hearon pointed out, "prints will be sold only to members of our association. This is to protect the producers against any misuse of their product."

The subjects, chosen, according to Louis De Rochemont, producer of the March of Time, "according to a preference vote among recognized authorities on the educational value of motion pictures," are divided into these classifications: Youth Problems; Conservation Problems; Civic Problems; Safety; Health; Labor Problems; War and Peace.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

FLIGHT TO FAME: Charles Farrell, Jacqueline Wells—A very good action mystery play.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Lew Ayres, Doris Nolan, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—A pretty good picture but it was tiresome in some parts. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 4-6.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MY SON IS A CRIMINAL: Alan Baxter, Jacqueline Wells—Played on week end March 17-18th to good business. Pleased fairly well. Running time, 72 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

REFORMATORY: Jack Holt, Charlotte Wynters, Bobby Jordan—Well received. Columbia has the best one-day pictures. Jack Holt is as good as ever in this one. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 15.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

SMASHING THE SPY RACKET: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—A fairly good "B" class picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry—Played this one late but at that I took the first available time offered. Was complete bust and barely paid wages, let alone the rental asked.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

WEST OF SANTA FE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—The best Western of the Charles Starrett series. It looks like Columbia would get a new supporting cast once in a while. The Sons of the Pioneers are very good and they are the best drawing card. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 4-5.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Ian Hunter, Claude Rains—Bucked hockey games and everything else with this one but came out on top. A box office natural in any situation.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—Do not fail to run this picture. James Cagney and Pat O'Brien really do a swell job of acting. The "Dead End Kids" really look and act the part they have. Everybody should be pleased with the show. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 18-20.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan—A very good military picture. Depicts life in V.M.I. known as the "West Point of the South." Quite interesting from start to finish. Splendid acting by all. Wayne Morris does particularly well and unless I am mistaken he is on his way to stardom. I publish my own weekly theatre newspaper. A copy is yours for the asking. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan—An excellent little comedy which was far better than the stage play. Drew lots of laughs from the audience, which was composed mostly of the younger element. Just average draw at the box office but all in all a pretty fair comedy. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, Claude Rains, May Robson—This picture pleased my audience 100 per cent. Well produced and a very good story. Business very good. Pictures like this will bring business to any theatre. Played March 19-20.—Running time, 20 minutes.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, Claude Rains, May Robson—By far and wide the class of the crop. This holds the year's house record and is very worthy of it. There is no doubt in my mind that Warners have the best all round stuff on the market.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan—A pretty good show with plenty of action. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 8-9.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connelly, Lynne Carver, Rex Ingram—Very good. Mickey Rooney pleases everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—Absolutely the weakest picture I ever saw. There weren't any laughs in the entire picture. The worst Laurel and Hardy ever made. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 1-2.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BOYS' TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Gene Reynolds, Henry Hull—Hearty approbation and much deserved, too, on this picture by the men here. Those who see this truly great picture will certainly leave the theatre with a sincere sense of justice towards the urchins of the street. Spencer Tracy in his role of Father Flanagan reached the apex of his acting career, and richly deserves the desire of all Hollywoodites, the "Academy Award." Mickey Rooney continues to be tops as a juvenile actor, his portrayal of the tough "Whitey" Marsh being a natural. Incidentally, he does some of the best emoting we have ever seen screened. However, the life experience of some of the men here, they believe, permit them to offer what they claim justifiable criticisms of the picture. First: Father Flanagan's visit with "Whitey's" brother was much too short under the circumstances. It seems that when a warden will so courteously turn his office over for such a visit, he will permit the visiting priest more than two minutes with the prisoner. Second: the escape of "Whitey's" brother from the deputy was too easily perpetrated and maintained an air bordering on the ridiculous. Third: it seems highly improbable three bank robbers (especially the two not related to "Whitey") would permit an unarmed youth to capture them as easily as they did. The building they were in certainly must have had a back door and some windows. However, despite the minor weaknesses of the picture, as detected by our audience, it is one every American should see, for only in a country like America could such an institution as "Boys' Town" be established. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 18.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell—Say, here is a picture. Held the few people who saw it in rapt silence during the entire duration of the long story. But it didn't draw any business. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Very gay and funny. Will please anywhere.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard, Kent Taylor, Alan Marshal—Very interesting entertainment. Rather depressing in some places, but pleased.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard—This was exceptionally good, but business very poor due to basketball.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Mary Howard—Excellent. Audience reaction and comment very good. Sure to please those who don't want to have to figure out a plot. Clear, intelligent, laugh-provoking fun to thrills and excitement. Played February 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal—Our audience got a tremendous kick out of this picture. While not a "terrific" picture, is good program fare. Lots of laughs. Clever lines and situations. Played February 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus—A wasted date for us as we had very poor Sunday-Monday.—A. N. Niles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns, and Gracie Allen—The honors go to Gracie Allen in this picture. Very good entertainment and will please old and young.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clarke Gable, Edward Arnold, Joseph Schildkraut, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn—Good acting, but not a picture for small towns.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Lionel Barrymore, Virginia Bruce, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Victor McLaglen—Very good, indeed. Fine acting by everyone. Mr. Eddy improving with his acting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LISTEN, DARLING: Judy Garland, Freddie Bartholomew, Mary Astor, Walter Pidgeon—Not as good as I had expected. I was kind of disappointed as I had expected to see something much better. The plot was very weak, indeed. Judy didn't sing enough, either. Something was lacking in the picture and it only made the "B" grade when it should have been tops. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 11.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler—The best of this excellent series. The Hardys are tops in entertainment and in this one we have Virginia Weidler, who gives a performance that would be a credit to our "first ladies of the screen." She had us all crying when she talked to her pony after he had broken his leg. Wish she would join the Hardy Family. How about it, Judge Hardy? Can't you adopt her? This pleased them all. We always look forward to these features. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 10-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas—Pretty good drama which failed to draw. Joan Crawford does not pull in a small town. Played March 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney—A very good show with Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney both doing marvelous acting. But I can't understand how it can rain a downpour one night and the next morning the ground is as dry as ashes and the dust flying around as it did in the show. Played this during a snow storm, so didn't do so good. It should pull, in good weather. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 11-13.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Robert Taylor, Wallace

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer, Florence Rice—A sweetheart of a picture. Very fine singing.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly—A good picture with plenty of action, but it wasn't half as good as "Test Pilot." Running time, 106 minutes. Played February 26-28.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—A very fine picture, but made the box office very pathetic grosses. About 30 per cent lower than an average western. Why did we play it on a weekend? Prestige don't fill the pockets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

NAVY SECRETS: Fay Wray, Grant Withers—Would make a nice bonfire for a fishing trip. Played March 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

TOUGH KID: Frankie Darro, Dick Purcell, Judith Allen—Just fair. Nothing to get excited about, or to excite your audience. Frankie Darro is too much "the little man." Played February 26-March 1.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Paramount

AMBUSH: Gladys Swarthout, Lloyd Nolan—Just another program picture that they kill a couple off. Talk about cycles; gangster pictures have it. With business off to some extent, it takes a lot more picture than this one to get business. And that goes for a lot of them that have come through this season, Paramount the worst offender, with us. It is this kind of product that is jamming up business, that I am sure. We see no recession with good ones.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

EAGLE AND THE HAWK, THE (Reissue): Fredric March, Gary Grant, Jack Oakie, Carole Lombard—Most people had forgotten it. Did above average Lenten business and satisfies all thrill seekers. Sell it without mention of reissue and you'll do a better business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

FRONTIERSMAN, THE: William Boyd, George Hayes, Evelyn Venable—Keeps up that high "Hopalong" average. Well cast and gorgeous natural backgrounds. Will satisfy your action lovers. Played March 4-7.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

IN OLD MEXICO: William Boyd, George Hayes—A cowboy picture. Pretty good. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 11.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

KING OF CHINATOWN: Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff—Very good little program picture. Stars very good. Tamiroff not quite as good as he was in "Ride a Crooked Mile." Very fine direction was evident in this little picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff, Shirley Ross—Paramount has come through with a hit picture. It is equally as good as Bing's last picture, and if they keep this pace with him, he will be on top again. And boy, what a honey Franciska Gaal is in it. She is as cute as a button and the little lady can act. Here's to you, Miss Gaal; you were certainly right on top of the ball, all the way.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison, J. Carrol Naish—Outside of dropping you flat at the end, the picture has something different in crime pictures. Predict that your audiences will "take to" Patricia Morison and we expect her to go along in better pictures later. She's charming and exciting. Make a fuss over her. We need a few refreshing new faces, and figures. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—Seemed to please. Adverse weather conditions made unprofitable run. Would suggest that Miss Lamour be kept in pictures where she didn't have to talk or try to change her facial expressions. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore—Did a nice business on this one, even though it had been run at a house two miles away in advance of my date. Couldn't see the picture myself, but it appeared to please the cash customers. —Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

Republic

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—Pretty good.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

HEROES OF THE HILLS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Priscilla Lawson—The Three Mesquiteers are well liked here. I think this was one of the best they have made. Running time, 55 minutes. Played March 11.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Seemed to please. Drew good. Possibly could stand a little more action in the Autry musical westerns for their own good. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MISS X: Michael Whalen, Mary Hart, Chick Chandler—Very fine program picture. Many comments as to entertainment value of this picture. Chick Chandler very, very good in his role. Thanks, Republic, for this nice program attraction.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis—I honestly believe this to be the best Autry I have ever played. I understand Republic is taking John Wayne out of the Three Mesquiteer westerns. Why not put Smith Ballew in his place. Of course, he wouldn't be as good as Wayne, but believe he could fill the bill. What about it, Republic?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ROUGH RIDERS' ROUND-UP: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Average western which failed to draw. Played March 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WESTERN JAMBOREE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Not one of Autry's better pictures. People come to hear you sing, Gene, so give them plenty of music.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WOMAN DOCTOR: Frieda Inescort, Henry Wilcoxon, Claire Dodd, Sybil Jason—A good program picture. Pleased Bank Night audience.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BRINGING UP BABY: Katharine Hepburn, Gary Grant—A highly publicized bust if ever there was one. Not only did it lose money, but I pretty nearly lost my scalp when the patrons got after me. Am playing "Holiday" next week and sure I have two strikes on me before I go to bat.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

FISHERMAN'S WHARF: Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo, Henry Armetta—Fair. Good singing from Bobby Breen.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT MAN VOTES, THE: John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler, Katharine Alexander—John Barrymore is without a doubt one of the outstanding stars of the screen. A better title would have been more suitable. Those who attended liked the whole cast and voted it an outstanding show. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

GREAT MAN VOTES, THE: John Barrymore, Virginia Weidler, Peter Holden, Katharine Alexander—Very disappointing as we had read such high reports about this picture. We could not see any entertainment in it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.; Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee—A good show, but it leads me to believe they are trying to type Irene Dunne, one of the finest in the business. However, it paid its way and pleased those that saw it.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

JOY OF LIVING: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Irene Dunne, Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee—A very enjoyable picture, but due to bad weather we failed at the box office to make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Chester Morris, Victor McLaglen, Wendy Barrie—Action picture. Good for gift night.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie—A fair picture which just about broke even. Had been played by my opposition in advance.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

WISE GIRL: Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland—This was a good little picture, but it didn't pull. Miriam Hopkins has never made any money for me yet.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—A regular western picture. That's all.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—Mr. Toler does very well as a substitute for Warner Oland.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Alice Brady—Played this one two months after my opposition and still hit the big marks with it. Product like this is easy to sell and is a salvation to situations such as mine.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—Fonda, Power and Kelly do very fine acting. Pleased one and all.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—Many complaints on glorifying the outlaw. Some did not come on this account. Well made and excellent cast. Beautiful photography. Business good, but not nearly up to "In Old Chicago." —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Bill Robinson, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr—The poorest business we ever had on a Shirley Temple picture. About 35 per cent off. We still did above average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—And did we get fooled! Business not even half as good as usual with this star. She will need a couple of specially good ones to make up for this one.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—Pleased every one. Miss Young and Mr. Greene very good, but Brennan stole the show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field—Fair but no draw.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders, Virginia Field—This one didn't jell for us, and it is my bet that if and when that 20 per cent elimination comes through there won't be so many of this type produced. On the face of this concession, isn't it reasonable that the producers are going to use more care and thought to the lower classifications, knowing that the exhibitor is going to pick and eliminate those that he is sure are not up to the standard that the public is demanding, and are refusing to support by spending their two bits?—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ROAD DEMON: Henry Arthur, Henry Armetta, Joan Valerie, Thomas Beck, Bill Robinson—For real good comedy Henry Armetta surely gets the laughs. Tom Beck, who played the part of the race driver, was not so convincing. Bill Robinson's novelty tap routine fits very well and was well received. Well liked. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Jim Haney, Milan Theatre, Milan, Ind. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Very well received Plenty of thrills and action.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis—As usual, airplane pictures do some business. But the flying these gals do stretches the credibility a long way. It would take an Earhart to keep up with them. Now, I ask you? And I know darn well the public did not believe they were flying those planes. The picture outside of that is none too good.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis—Fine airplane picture which pleased and did above average business. Played March 15-16. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Rather a morbid picture that didn't seem to please as much as it could. Drawing power was fair. Had plenty of action to suit all. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin —Only fair. If Fox does not make better musicals than this, I don't think I want to play any more of them. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 9-10. —J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—Quite a few laughs. Will please the younger element.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Binnie Barnes—Pretty fair musical comedy which failed to draw. I think some had it confused with the "Three Mesquiteers." Played March 13-14.— E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes—No draw; no money; no like. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Calleia—Well, we were somewhat disappointed in this picture. Story was good and it was our opinion that acting honors went to Joseph Calleia. Why don't we have him more? Believe Hedy has possibilities and there is no question that she is beautiful. But she hasn't the voice to help build her into a great star. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Brennan—Here is one that fooled us. We looked for business on this one, as western pictures have always been popular, but failed to make film rental, believe it or not.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Richard Carlson, Joan Fontaine—About as good a picture of West Point as ever shown. Hayward very good in part. Same Carlson. Would suggest that United Artists give their pictures a little publicity where it would do a little good. Nobody ever heard of this feature here, so business poorest in years. Running time, 109 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—A fine comedy with a cast that is just about perfect. Patsy Kelly as a saleslady for "Vibrato." Claude Gillingwater as the wealthy grandfather and Eugene Pallette as the editor almost steal the show from the two top stars, Fredric March and Virginia Bruce. This pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 3-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard—Drew average Sunday-Monday business and seemed to please very much.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

Universal

DANGER ON THE AIR: Donald Woods, Nan Grey, William Lundigan—Played this with "Road to Reno," also from Universal, and hit an all-time low for a weekend. Those over-rated 60 minute features will break the best house on earth.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

DARK RAPTURE: Mr. and Mrs. Armand Denis—The best of its kind that we have run. Go back and pick this up for a weekend date if possible. Wonderful audience reaction and it brought in a class that seldom comes to the show. Running time, 79 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LAST WARNING, THE: Preston Foster, Frank Jenks, Frances Robinson—A pleasing program picture that should do business. Tried it Friday-Saturday to no business whatsoever. Running time, 63 minutes.— A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, George Murphy—First class fare, which no exhibitor should be afraid to ballyhoo too loudly. Unfortunately, it ran into a major hockey game here and nothing on earth can buck that in this locality. At that it came out on the right side of the ledger and did make friends for the house.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish—A nice surprise in this one. Drew a good crowd and they seemed to enjoy it.— Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Tom Brown, Barbara Read, Lewis Stone—Maybe these pictures will go somewhere else, but I can't put them over.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

NURSE FROM BROOKLYN: Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly—Not a bad little picture, but not strong enough to stand alone, and my patrons hate double bills.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mischa Auer, Helen Broderick—I don't know what to make of this picture. For a certainty it did not bring them in and those that saw it are just as puzzled as I. They don't know whether to go for this Darrieux or not. Since I had it on a straight percentage, I came out without being hurt, which is some consolation.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

ROAD TO RENO, THE: Hope Hampton, Randolph Scott, Helen Broderick, Glenda Farrell, Alan Marshal—This hit an all-time low for a weekend. It was double billed with "Danger on the Air." Those over-rated 60 minute features will break the best house on earth.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

SECRETS OF A NURSE: Edmund Lowe, Helen Mack, Dick Foran—A nice little picture. We can expect big things from Universal this year. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SOME BLONDES ARE DANGEROUS: Noah Beery, Jr., Dorothea Kent, Nan Grey—Another of those pictures which antagonize the public just about as much as the exhibitor. Sold too high to be double billed and too short in running time to stand alone. These pictures are a genuine drag on the market. You never read of them in any magazine and they boast no cast.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Good. But misses the initial thrill that "the monster" gave to audiences in the first and original "Frankenstein." Rathbone overacted a little. "Ygor" is a refreshing touch to the monster-loving audiences. Will do business if you sell it "scary." Played February 26-March 3.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

WIVES UNDER SUSPICION: Warren William, Gail Patrick, Constance Moore, William Lundigan, Ralph Morgan—A fair programmer, but nothing to shout about. Went down badly at the box office.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone—Two days to poor business.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FOUR'S A CROWD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell, Patric Knowles—A very good picture with a very good cast. Good sound. Good photography and good plot. If I had only been able to secure it first run instead of third run, I'd have been all set. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—Went back and picked up this picture; we knew it was good. But even a good outdoor picture in color couldn't get them out. What has happened to the show business? And why would they bury a grand actress like Margaret Lindsay in such a small part? Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—A good picture, but I believe Dick Powell should sing more. It had some very good comedy in it. Charles Winninger really goes to town in this one. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 22-23.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland—Just as cute a little picture as you would want to see anywhere. No business even on cash night. Everybody in our town basketball crazy.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Kay Francis, Humphrey Bogart—Just fair. No drawing card. When are we going to be through receiving gangster pictures? Such pictures are not entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, John Litel—Don't know whether this series will develop into anything or not. It was just ordinary entertainment with no draw. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Just a picture. O'Brien deserves better stories than "Off the Record" and "Garden of the Moon."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter—A wonderful picture if a person had not read the book. If the book has been read the reaction is that Litvak took too much liberty with his privilege as a director and spoilt the entire story with the last reels, as they stray far and wide from the story. Warners muffed this when they did not allow Alan Hale to die in the stable after winning a horse race. Feel that Anita Louise was miscast. Running time, 99 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter—Good picture for the feminine trade but it's a poor draw for the masculine side. Hence, we didn't do much business on this. Played February 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, "Dead End Kids," Claude Rains—There can be no question but what a new star is born in John Garfield. This picture carries a punch in every scene. It is a natural for a weekend picture, but take my advice and put a note on your ad that it is not a gangster picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TORCHY GETS HER MAN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Okay for its type. No business, however. Played January 31.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TORCHY GETS HER MAN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—We played this one in conjunction with the personal appearance on our stage of Lucky Millinder and His Orchestra "direct from Loew's State Theatre in New York City." Result was a nice little business. However, the picture alone without the stage show would be quite weak. I do not feel the picture could hold its own. 'Nuff said. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, John Litel, Charles Bickford—This went over with a bang. Just the type of picture for my fans and a humdinger at the box office. Also sold in the proper classification to let the exhibitor last a little longer.—Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada. General patronage.

Columbia

FLAT FOOT STOOGES: Three Stooges—Have seen better comedies than this one. With all the buildup these three get we feel that the All Star series are much better than this offering. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

KANGAROO KID: Color Rhapsodies—A fair cartoon but no comparison with Vitaphone Merrie Melodies. Got by and that is all. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BODY: Broadway Comedies—Just fair two-reel comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCARY CROWS: Scrappy Cartoons—I guess Disney spoils us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Educational

LOVE AND ONIONS: Two-Reel Comedies—A fairly good comedy with some music worked in. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BURIED TREASURE: Captain and the Kids—One of the best cartoons of the series. Running time, nine minutes.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN'S CHRISTMAS, THE: Captain and the Kids—Terrible. Better get new subject matter. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DEFYING DEATH: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—An excellent Floyd Gibbons Thriller. It sure held our audience tense. The courageous act of this woman should be an inspiration to all who view this picture, albeit several errors crept into the film. To wit: the mother of 1904 as pictured in this short was attired in a mode of dress somewhat ultra-modern for those days. And how anyone, especially the kiddies, could absorb so much smoke without a cough is somewhat miraculous. Also, those fire laddies were in for a long run to that blaze. The engines rolled from the Los Angeles Fire Department fire station presumably to Brooklyn. Running time, 12 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

DUEL PERSONALITIES: Our Gang—Good "Our Gang" comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF NEW BRUNSWICK: FitzPatrick

Travel Talks—We are proud FitzPatrick hasn't overlooked us in Canada. We think it pretty nice place. Would like you to see Ontario.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialty—An excellent Pete Smith.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RIDE AND SHRIEK: Our Gang—The Our Gang comedies are always good. This one is just about the funniest one that I have seen so far. Some patrons sat through it twice. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HANDICAP: Original Sing Band—This is almost like a screen snapshot. It has a good plot and several good tunes in it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

HOW TO WATCH FOOTBALL: Robert Benchley—This is one of the poorest shorts that Robert Benchley made. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

IMPERIAL DELPHI: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—A very fine colored travelogue. Drew applause.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAMA'S NEW HAT: Cartoons—The best of these black and white cartoons. Audience in an uproar.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEN OF STEEL: Musical Comedies—Good two-reel musical.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE OF SALT LAKE: MGM Miniatures—A very good short with some swell shots of a swarm of crickets. Running time, 11 minutes.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PETUNIA NATURAL PARK: Captain and the Kids—A very interesting short.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PETUNIA NATURAL PARK: Captain and the Kids—Fair Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

STRANGE GLORY: Historical Mysteries—These subjects give you something to think about.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SYDNEY, PRIDE OF AUSTRALIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Another wonderful Travel Talk by James A. FitzPatrick. To me this is the most enjoyable short made. They are all good in photography, color and description. Running time, 9 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THEY'RE ALWAYS CAUGHT: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—So instructive we had the school children as our guests to a matinee.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TUPAPAOO: MGM Miniatures—Another "What Do You Think". We think it very fine.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WRONG WAY OUT, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another excellent short from this series. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

FROLICKING FROGS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An unusual and excellent reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MY FRIEND THE MONKEY: Betty Boop Cartoons—Average Betty Boop cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: No. 58—O.K. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 5—A male quartet dressed in the garb of the "Gay Nineties" rendered several old favorites in a pleasing manner. Entertaining reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: No. 5—Very good, indeed. I am playing this series up on the fronts of 5,000 of my mailing list envelopes. Continual plugging of a short like this can result in a stream of quarters at your box office. Running time 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE GOES HOLLYWOOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—The best Disney cartoon I have seen with the exception of the Donald Duck series. If this one does does not please everyone, it is not Walt Disney's fault. Running time, 7½ minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

FASHION FORECASTS (AUTUMN STYLES): Fashion Series—I ordered the spring fashion forecast and they sent autumn, which I ran March 3-4-5, so this was a complete washout. We in the dust bowl may not be quite up-to-date, but we are not so far behind that we want to sit through a reel of autumn fashions in the spring. Color very good but not the type to interest a small town audience.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

FASHION FORECASTS (WINTER STYLES): Fashions Series—Very good reel in fine color. Will please the ladies; others no.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOOSE FLIES HIGH, THE: Terry-Toons—Very clever. These cartoons look all right. Our first one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOUSEWIFE HERMAN: Terry-Toons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MODERN DIXIE: Magic Carpet Series—Very good. Instructive as well as entertaining.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE BEARS, THE: Terry-Toons—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 57—A trip through Yellowstone that was exceptionally good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WILD AND BULLY: Mentone Musical Comedies—A fair musical that did not have enough variety in it to make the hit that the others of this series have. Western in locale. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CRACKED ICE: Merrie Melodies—A very good and as usual clever Merrie Melody. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FEUD THERE WAS, A: Merrie Melodies—A very good cartoon. It is one of the best "Merrie Melodies" that I ever saw. Running time, seven minutes.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE AN EDUCATION: Merrie Melodies—A very good short subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ZERO GIRL: Broadway Brevities—Played this as a buildup for "Ice Follies of 1939" and can add nothing to the favorable comments that have been written previous issues. Perfection in every sense of the word. The best Brevity in many moons.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serial

Columbia

FLYING G-MEN: James Craig, Lorna Gray—Very good. Excellent opportunities for tieups and exploitation. Running time, 18 minutes, each chapter.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

IN COURTS

$100,000 Movie Quiz Suit Is Dismissed

The suit for $100,000 against Donahue and Coe, Inc., agency that handled the advertising for the Movie Quiz, and Edward J. Churchill, president, has been dismissed by Salvatore A. Cotillo, New York supreme court justice, with permission to amend the complaint.

The action was started by Edward J. Pfeifer, who claims to have given the idea of a Quiz to the defendants in June, 1938, and who asked for 10 per cent of the profit. Justice Cotillo ruled that a contract upon which a suit was based must be in writing.

"Lynton" Appeal Allowed

MGM is allowed an appeal to the New York Circuit Court of Appeals, from a decision of Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell, which awarded a judgment against the company for $532,000 and for $70,000 in fees and allowances, for plagiarism in the picture, "Letty Lynton." Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum ruled this week.

Fairbanks Loses Tax Case

The United States supreme court held this week that profits accruing to Douglas Fairbanks from redemption of bonds of the Elton Company, to which he had transferred his interests in nine films, were profit and not gain from sale of or exchange of capital assets. The case came before the court on appeal of Mr. Fairbanks from a lower court decision in the case brought by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to recover taxes claimed to have been erroneously refunded.

Indicted on Copyright Charge

A federal grand jury in Fort Worth, Tex., has indicted Howard Goldin for copyright infringement of the film, "Lash of the Penitentes," copyright of which is owned by Michael J. Levinson. The indictment also charges Mr. Goldin with having made a print or duped negative of the copyright picture and exhibiting same in various cities in the United States.

Patent Trial Starts

Trial of the patent infringement suit brought by Virgil C. Crites against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Albert A. Radtke, Leonard Day, Thomas J. Martin, Radtke Patents Corporation and United Research Corporation was started this week in federal court in New York before Judge Mortimer W. Byers. The suit charges infringement of a patent providing "methods of and means for optically recording and reproducing sound."

Oklahoma Motion Filed

The National Theatre Supply Company and C. P. Anderson, formerly branch manager in Oklahoma City, defendants in a $100,000 suit in Oklahoma County district court, have filed a motion to strike out the second amended petition of the plaintiff, Sol Davidson, former theatre supply dealer, claiming that the petition does not comply with the order of the court. Mr. Davidson originally filed the suit late in 1937 charging that Mr. Anderson caused his discharge from the employ of the Oklahoma Theatre Supply Company, a competitor.

Jack Hays' $500,000 suit claiming breach of contract in the management of Shirley Temple has been dismissed. The suit was filed in Los Angeles against Mr. and Mrs. Temple, parents, originally in 1936.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

No exhibitor in his right mind ever is going to pull his newspaper advertising on the assumption he can get by without the aid of this invaluable medium. It appears though that the theatremen of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have had to do just that, at least until last week, when a five-month strike embracing all the city's papers was settled.

Since majority of opinion holds that the daily newspaper is the backbone of theatre advertising, then how did the theatres function without this backing? With all obstacles considered, quite well, according to the story in last week's issue by Joseph Polley, Motion Picture Herald correspondent in Wilkes-Barre. In the beginning business was off, writes Mr. Polley, but after the theatremen "took matters into their own hands to present their offerings to the public," it was claimed that business went back to pre-strike levels.

Of course, various mediums of outside advertising were increased, heralds distributed and trailers listing attractions at all local houses, chiefly operated by the Comerford circuit, run in the six downtown theatres. But of greatest interest to Round Tablers was the effectiveness of a "Movie Guide," credited with doing the best job of sustaining theatre interest. Tabloid in size and running eight pages, some 80,000 copies of this weekly "guide" were printed and distributed house-to-house, attaining a greater importance with every issue.

While the Pennsylvanians are welcoming the return of the dailies, their ability to go without should serve as deep food for thought for theatremen especially in situations where relations with newspapers leave much to be desired.

DIVIDENDS IN SCREWBALLERY

Featured a few weeks back was a detailed account of various didoes indulged in by the Griffith-men in the Southwest to entertain customers at the annual "April Fools Prevue." It is then that manager and staff "let down their hair" and invite patrons to do likewise in putting over a flock of screwball gags. Everyone has a high time and the evening adds up to be an excellent goodwill builder as well as a box-office smash.

That these unique presentations go so well in the lesser communities brings up the question why some of the same isn't being done in the more metropolitan centers. It may be recalled that some years back, the "Take-A-Chance" shows put on by New York and Chicago deluxers commanded profitable attentions. While such entertainments may not have been as atmospheric as are the "Prevues", audiences entered upon the spirit of the occasion with commendable appreciation for these away from the conventional presentations.

Folks are folks, in New York as well as Enid, Oklahoma. Big city funny-bones function as do those in the hinterland and react as spontaneously to well-devised hocus-pocus. Eyebrow-raisers who shake their heads are referred to "Hellzapoppin," screwball entertainment of the deepest dye and the standout entertainment of Broadway's current season.

IN A TOWN OF 4000

Managers in much larger communities inclined to astigmatism in searching out exploitation possibilities right to hand, are directed to the story on a following page which details highlights of the campaign put over by Dwight Seymour for the West Texas premiere of "Oklahoma Kid."

Seymour's situation is a town of 4,000 with the usual advertising limitations in budget and facilities. Neither of these appeared to prove obstacles in the way of an outstanding campaign fashioned with a few dollars and much work.

THEATREMEN IN PRODUCTION

For more than one reason, Round Tablers are hailing the announcement that Jack Gross has been selected for the important post of assistant to Cliff Work, Universal Studio's general manager. First, because the former RKO Theatres' western division head is held in high regard by his fellow-workers, and secondly, the appointment emphasizes the continuing influence of talented theatreman in production.

With this strong addition to its forces, Universal rounds out a formidable executive general staff of seasoned exhibition-trained manpower which obviously is to be credited no little for the rapid progress the company is making in turning out boxoffice product.

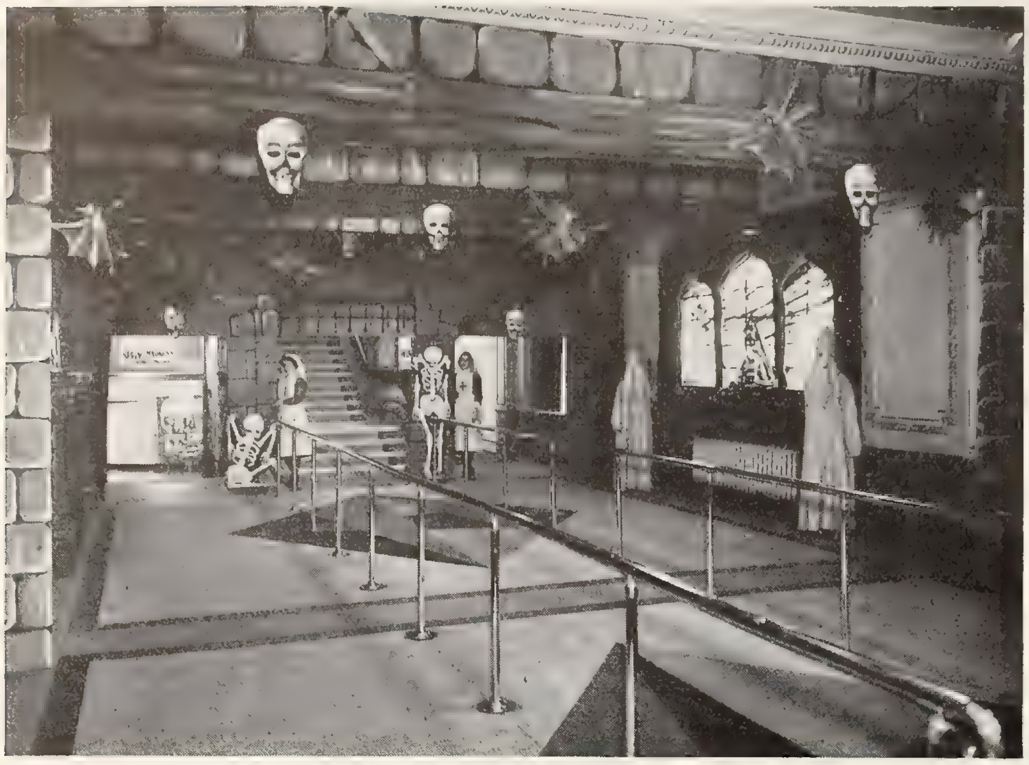
Round Table In Pictures



Only the stout-hearted found courage to stalk through Aubrey L. Bustin's lobby during his date of "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" at the Coliseum, in London. Entire lighting effect was in green and subdued lights, while bats suspended from ceiling with lighted eyes swung madly about. Skeletons were chained to walls, and reclined on mantelpieces, skulls peered through cell windows, and entire staff was attired in white cloaks with hoods.

Since Hobart, Okla., boasts many relics of Geronimo, whose raids furnished much of the suspense in "Stagecoach" and who spent his last days at nearby Ft. Sill, Gus Hoenscheidt, at the Kiowa Theatre, promoted use of full regalia worn by the squaws at the old Indian pow-wows. Outfitting his cashier in the costume, girl was planted in lobby during run.

Bob Russell, manager at the Palace, Canton, Ohio, credits his house artist, Frank Eggleston, for the eye-arresting lobby setpiece created for the engagement of "The Little Princess." The two cutout heads of Shirley and Richard Greene were made by air brush. Display was animated by the turning of the star-studded wheel behind the head of the starlet. Personal endorsement message of the theatreman was planted at right with scene stills and star comments at left. Entire display was moved to prominent downtown window during run of picture.

Overseas showmen find use for outdoors stunts too, as may be seen on photo reproduced at left showing two boys astride bannered ponies advertising Al Buehrig's opening date on "Stablemates" at the Metro Theatre, in Durban, South Africa. Boys patrolled the gates at the local race track distributing heralds plugging the date.

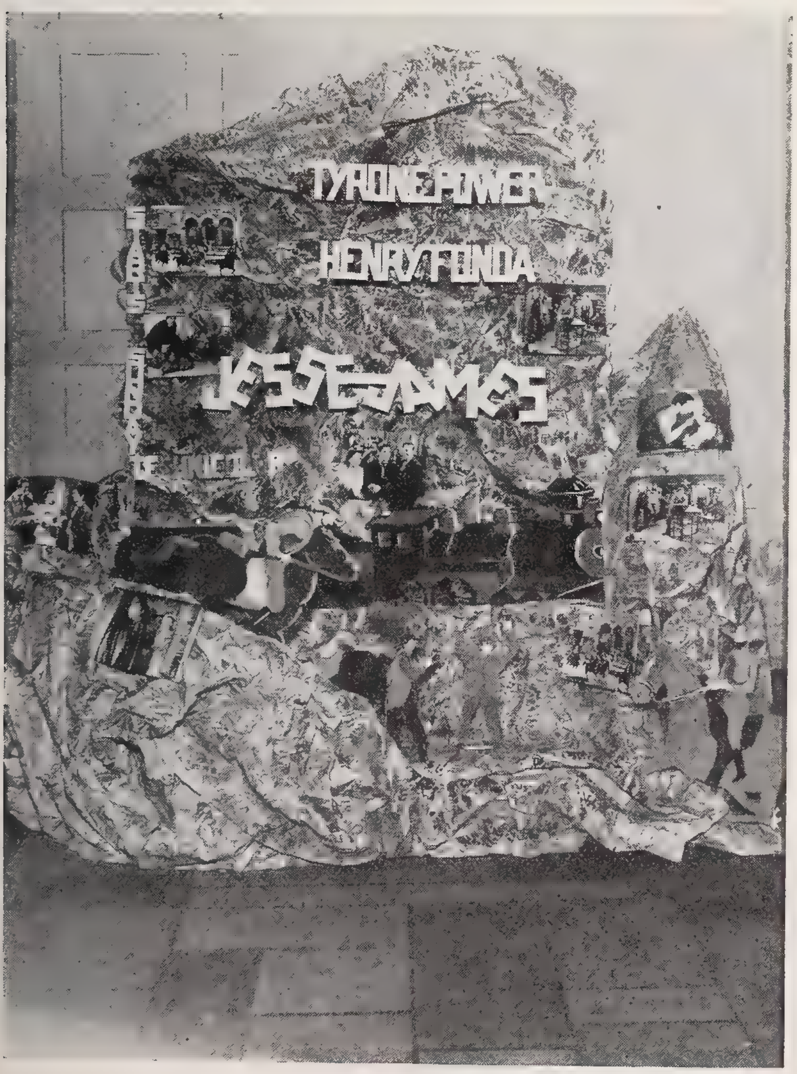
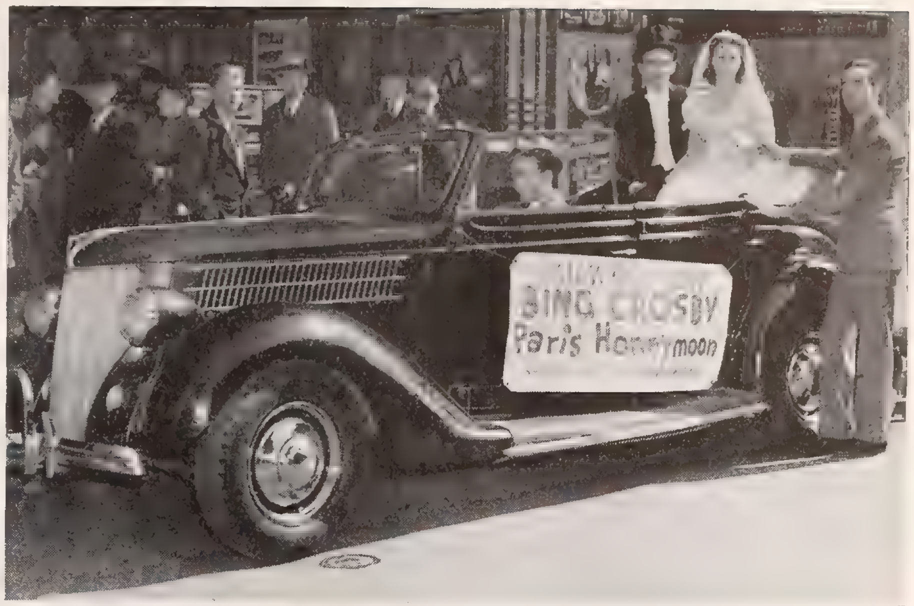
Three lads dressed in overalls paraded streets of Muncie, Indiana, as part of Melville B. Grundy's comprehensive campaign on "Huckleberry Finn" at the Rivoli Theatre. Back banners stressed that the boys were fishing for fun to be found at the theatre.

Illustrated below is advance lobby display created by Larry O'Neil, Holland Theatre, Bellefontaine, Ohio, for "Jesse James." Setpiece was built from heavy brown wrapping paper placed on frame, crinkled and brushed with various water colors to give a rock effect. Lettering used was cutout from compo board and then colored. Larry credits his assistant, Bill Connor, who aided in construction.





Parked at busy intersections was Spence Pierce's street bally for "Paris Honeymoon" at the Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Couple dressed as bride and groom drove about town in bannered car, distributing formal invitations. That's Spence accepting one of the invites. Campaign included windows and Crosby tune radio contest.

Symour Sponsors Inaugural Western Texas Premiere

What was termed the West Texas premiere on "Oklahoma Kid," which took place in the 4,000 town of Kermit, Texas, at the Kermit, and the first event of its kind ever to be held in that section of the state was given a comprehensive advance, covering various angles of exploitation as reported here by Dwight Seymour, City Manager for Griffiths Amusement Company in that situation.

Emphasized as an outstanding street stunt was an eight-wheel wagon of historic lineage, borrowed from old-time rancher who lives nearby. The wagon, properly bannered, was parked across from the theatre for ten days ahead and on opening day attached to teams of horses which pulled the bally about town, a battery-public address system was used at the same time to plug the opening. Costumed riders on bannered horses made up the rest of the procession. Another outside stunt that attracted was an actual airplane wing lettered with picture and theatre copy and placed in vacant lot next to postoffice for two weeks ahead.

Imprinted tags were distributed for 10 days ahead at all local affairs, such as the fire department dance, high school parties, etc. Employees of leading retail stores were also tagged. According to Seymour, this item was in wide demand. Directly in front of the theatre safety zone, the Round Tabler created an old time fort with lumber promoted from the local yard, the poles made into a ten-foot square in the center of which was placed a small block house with rifles protruding from each corner of the fort.

Window displays played a large part in the advance with particular attention directed to a frontier scene in miniature with toy soldiers, Indians, covered wagons, etc. State colors, green and white, were used in the background, as was large state map hung from the ceiling, properly lettered. Another window included relics, among these old rifles used during the opening of the Cherokee strip as shown in the picture.

Library System Tied To "Champs Elysees"

The main branch of the New York Public Library on Fifth Avenue participated in the advance campaign for Tri-National's "Champs Elysees" at the Little Carnegie, with an exhibition in the main corridor of an elaborate display case with stills of the Sacha Guitry film; a panoramic colored lithograph of the Champs-Elysees about 1855; a volume of typography published in Paris in 1772, showing a contemporary engraving of the heart of the French capital; and an early Baedeker, opened at an account of the Champs-Elysees origin. Branch libraries through Manhattan, Bronx and Queens displayed similar material reports Leo Pollock, Tri-National advertising director.

In the theatre lobby, the French Line had a model of the liner Normandie set against a background of colored posters of France and agencies of the steamship company are providing other exhibits during subsequent playdates in other cities.

Lobby display was featured by setpiece spotlighting feminine members of the cast.

MAYBE HE WAS TRYING IT OUT

The patron discovered giving himself a quick once-over with an electric razor plugged into the house current last week at Loew's Regent, in Harrisburg, may have been doing a bit of advance for the premium manufacturers. It appears that electric dry shavers are now offered as a theatre premium by Sterling Shaver Corp., of Chicago, "at a price so low that exhibitors can afford to give it just for a few attendances." Special promotion material includes free displays, handbills and attendance cards.

Wade Promotions Feature National Advance for 'Bell'

Featured exploitations on 20th Century-Fox's "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," in advance of the national release date was the twin preview, on March 29th, at the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco and in Constitution Hall in Washington, D. C.

The Washington preview had a particular significance in that the Capital is the home of Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, daughter of Alexander Graham Bell, the showing, therefore, sponsored by the Grosvenor family. In attendance were cabinet officers, diplomats, scientists, newspaper correspondents, among others.

Mayor Greets Visitors

The San Francisco showing was put on with an elaborate advance including a special train from Hollywood carrying stars, executives and newspapermen. At the Fair an official tour of the grounds was slated before the preview and for the attention of the crowds assembled, public address system was installed so that all present could hear the stars participate in the program at the theatre. Mayor Rossi welcomed the visitors in San Francisco and was host at a dinnner given by the city in the evening after the preview.

The opening blast in the extensive national campaign on the picture was staged in Boston recently where in celebration of the 63rd anniversary of the first complete speech ever sent and received by telephone, Don Ameche gave the longest chain telephone interview on record. At one time the star spoke with motion picture critics on newspapers in 15 key cities in all parts of the country.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mystic Wishing Sand Ballyhoos "Gunga Din"

Distributed by F. E. Ackerman, Regent, Bay City, Mich., in advance of "Gunga Din" were small imprinted envelopes containing "mystic wishing sand from the desert." Copy on outside read "place the contents of this envelope on the palm of your left hand, make your wish, close your eyes and slowly allow the sand to trickle through your fingers." In addition to playdate copy, the envelope carried the line "No greater wish could be made than to want to see "Din."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Kerasotes' Anniversary

The thirtieth anniversary as theatre operators in Springfield, Ill., celebrated a few weeks back by Gus and Louis Kerosotes, was turned into a citywide campaign largely through the efforts of Dave Jones, the circuit ad head. Among the featured activities arranged was a special eight-page anniversary newspaper section, emphasized by a full page in color topped by photos of the brothers and congratulatory copy. Page was sponsored by leading merchants and community heads.

QUIGLEY AWARDS FORTNIGHTER APPOINTMENTS REACH NEW "HIGH"

Selection of Winners in Last Judging Tops All Listings; Extra Preliminary Two-Week Period Added to 1st Quarter

THAT the new policy of the Quigley Awards is encouraging increased contributions of top-flight exploitations is indicated by the record total of Fortnighter Appointments voted in the last Preliminary Judging with 20 entries selected for the high honors. Names and theatres are listed in another column with winners' exploitations outlined on this page and next. Photo by Aubrey Bustin's lobby on "Frankenstein" at the Coliseum, London, and story of Dwight Seymour's campaign on "Oklahoma Kid" will be found elsewhere in this issue. E. E. Crabtree's camera club tieup will be explained next week.

In order to even up the time limitations between Quarters it has been decided to add another Fortnighter Period to the First Quarter which officially now will end on April 10.

"March of Events" Local Newsreel Sponsored by Bisbee Merchants

Composed exclusively of local happenings and news breaks is the monthly newsreel now sponsored by Ted DeGrazia and leading merchants for showing at the Lyric, Bisbee, Ariz. Each month, four different business establishments are contracted to underwrite cost of the film in exchange for adequate pictorial advertising and comment, a total of 15 showings guaranteed by the Round Tabler who acts as director and cameraman in addition to a staff of editors, commentators, etc. Merchants pay 50 cents a foot; minimum, 30 feet and maximum, 90.

To keep in touch with everything of interest, DeGrazia distributes cards inviting locals to report anything that might be filmable, stamped and self-addressed postcards supplied by the cashier for the purpose.

"Let Freedom Ring" Exploitations Offer Cash Prizes and Free Breakfasts

In Syracuse, Loew-man Frank Murphy, tied in the Journal for a "Find the Wasp" identification contest for "Let Freedom Ring" with six five dollar prizes offered to those who accosted the Wasp with a copy of the paper. Contest ran for four days, daily stories advising readers where the Wasp could be found each day. Highlights of the publicity was a four-column action shot showing crowds running after the Wasp cornered by the seeking throngs.

The same slant was put on by Francis Deering, for the date at Loew's, Houston, Texas, with one $50 prize for a one-time capture. Here, too, the contest ran over for a number of days in a tiein with the Press for extended publicity. In addition, Deering secured his Fortnight with a breakfast preview of the picture at six-thirty to sell the romance to the womenfolk, some 500 turning out to enjoy breakfast on the house before the early showing. Promoted doughnuts and coffee were served and Francis advertised phone call service to those who wished to be awakened in time to participate. All advertising and publicity plugged the catch line, "Oh, Girls, Can You See, By the Dawn's Early Light."

Hopi Indians in Hartford Sell "Stagecoach" for Simons

That traffic-stopper Jack Simons dug himself up a band of Hopi Indians to tie-up Hartford ahead of "Stagecoach" at Loew's Poli, the aborigines' appearance plugged in advance with an old-fashioned coach, properly bannered. On arrival, the Hopis set up a miniature village in theatre lobby where they give exhibitions of native handicraft, singing and dancing. At noon of opening day, broadcast was arranged over WTHT on a downtown corner.

After the broadcast, Simons took the band over to the state capitol to meet Governor Baldwin who was made an honorary chieftain and presented with gifts. Back at the theatre, the visitors were greeted by members of a local Indian society, the activities of the entire day hitting the local papers and meeting with the Governor sent out over the A.P. wires.

The obvious difficulties in the way of properly publicising a daily-change operation were overcome somewhat recently at the Revere, in Revere, Mass., with a giant lobby setpiece created by Manager Harold Leand to sell the house institutionally. Display measuring 12-feet high from floor to ceiling contained a series of photos, each photo showing close-ups of various equipment, and departments of theatre operation, including backstage. Individual cards alongside of each picture explained the subject matter, with copy above tieing in the idea reading "Things You Never Knew Till Now About The Revere Theatre." Photos were eight by ten enlargements, framed, glassed and screwed to display board.

Teaser Campaigns Click For Manuel and Schlax

Effective teaser newspaper campaigns which won Fortnighters for both entrants were reported by Managers J. E. Manuel, Schine's Strand, on "Idiot's Delight," Delaware, Ohio, and F. B. Schlax, Strand, Oshkosh, Wisc., on "Darling Daughter."

Manuel's campaign was one of protest against the recent overseas objections to the picture. The theatreman ran a series of large displays, signed "A Delaware Businessman" (himself) in which he vigorously championed the cause of American motion pictures with such copy as "America's third largest industry refuses to be dictated to by foreign propagandists." The teasers ran four days, each heightening reader curiosity by referring to the next day's copy, the payoff being a smash ad, the day before opening, headed "why did a foreign dictator try to suppress this film."

Schlax confined his advance teasers on "Daughter" to a series of one column breaks on theatre and woman's pages each illustrated by cuts of various characters. Copy was tied to each character such as "Mother Says" followed by pertinent lines from the script. Each ad underlined "why blame daughter." On day ahead, Schlax ran a two-column display of the seldom-used personal endorsement

Kalberer Seeks Oldtimers For "Sweethearts" Contest

Counted among his most effective promotions put on recently by Manager A. J. Kalberer, of the Indiana Theatre, Washington, Ind., was a seven-day newspaper contest on "Sweethearts" to find the city's oldest sweethearts. Put on with the sponsorship of the local Herald, a series of front page two-column stories were run.

Prizes supplied winners were promoted and participating merchants all came in on the co-op ad pages to further publicize Kalberer's date on the picture.

According to the historical records of Hot Springs, Ark., Jesse James and his gang pulled quite a few jobs in that sector. So for an unusual slant for his campaign on "James," at the Paramount, W. Clyde Smith, Malco City Manager in the resort city, borrowed a group of photos showing the community back in the time of the picture, planted them for a series in the local press, each shot illustrated by a caption referring to the outlaw and his local depredations. Paper followed through with a series of feature articles about the photos in addition to interviews with local residents who were friends of the James family.

Besides this publicity for which Smith was voted his Fortnighter, the Round Tabler pointed his campaign at the young folks with a costumed Jesse James dance sponsored by leading local fraternity.

Planes Fly Over Brockton For "Tailspin" Opening

Three planes all of the same make were used for the date on "Tailspin" at the Brockton Theatre, Brockton, Mass., three days ahead as featured air exploitation. Planes made three flights per day, each of 45 minutes' duration, covering the city and surrounding area. Wings of the planes were lettered with theatre copy large enough to be read at a height of 2,000 feet. Manager J. J. Cahill, who had the cooperation of Alec H. Hurwitz, his assistant, in promoting the flight, reports the stunt a first-timer locally for positive results. All advertising plugged the copy "Watch for the Tailspin formation fliers over Brockton and vicinity," and on opening night executives of the local airport, pilots and their wives and other flying personnel were guests at the theatre.

Samartano Ties Beauty Salons To Advance "Pygmalion" Sale

All beauty parlors in Meriden, Conn., some 15 in number, tied in for a Beauty Salon Week on "Pygmalion" as arranged by Joe Samartano, manager at Loew's Poli Palace, main feature of tiein being a series of four co-op ads in the local papers.

In these ads, a ticket was given through the courtesy of the beauty salons to any woman having a permanent wave during this special campaign. The tickets were bought from the theatre at full price and Samartano reports in practically every case where a single ticket was given with a permanent, the person receiving it purchased another ticket. As a result, 15 beauty salons were active and selling the greater part of the theatre's advance sale. All cooperating merchants displayed a special emblem announcing the tiein and plugging the picture.

Miniature Racetrack Animation Aids Corker on "O'Conner"

Unique animation reported by Moon Corker for his date on "Burn 'Em Up O'Conner" at the Palace, Athens, Ga., consisted of two miniature racing cars. Built by local boys, these were placed on a 10-foot drum made of compo board, each car piloted by a one-fifth horsepower motor and wired to a steel post connected by a revolving ring. These two cars hurtled through a 10-foot space at the rate of 50 miles per hour.

Corker reports that at times such large crowds gathered that it became necessary to disconnect the cars and take them inside the theatre to make the street passable. A racer built by a University of Georgia student was bannered with appropriate copy and used as a street ballyhoo during the two days' engagement of the picture.

"ZENOBIA" CONTEST ATTRACTS MANAGERS

United Artists' offer of $500 to theatremen for best campaigns on "Zenobia" has already brought over 100 filled-in entry blanks before national release date, according to home office information.

Prize money is topped with $250 for first; second, $75; third, $50, and five prizes of $25 each for next best. Contest now officially open closes on June 1st and to receive consideration entries must be postmarked no later than midnight of June 1st.

Tomber Promotes Newspaper For Weekly Movie Column

The local weekly Tribune, circulated widely in the drawing area and until lately lacking adequate motion picture coverage was sold on the idea of a weekly column to be written by Stuart Tomber, at the Fargo Theatre, Sycamore, Ill., material to be supplied and written up by the Round Tabler himself, writing under the byline of "Con Triber." In existence for the last three or four months, the weekly feature has grown more popular with each issue.

In addition to picture news, Tomber finds the column a great outlet for special announcements, happenings around the theatre, contributions, etc. He also reports an active correspondence worked up among readers with sufficient unsolicited material pointing to wide interest in the column.

Harris Crashes Bowling Congress With Special Theatre Score Cards

At the annual bowling congress now current in Cleveland, in which are participating some 23,000 bowlers from all over the country, Milt Harris, Loew's Cleveland Theatres' ad chief, promoted theatre banners in all parts of the auditorium, carrying publicity on the current Loew shows.

To land this exclusive, Harris arranged for a special score card with spaces for the records made of the different teams of the five man, two man and individual events and distributed thousands of these to bowlers as they register and spectators. Reverse side of score card carried ads for the current showing at all the Loew houses. Milt credits his assistant, Ed Huegle, for aid on the idea.

Tough-to-Get Co-op Pages Promoted by Ray Bell

The difficulties in the way of landing a page of co-op ads in Washington, D. C., were overcome to a great extent in behalf of "Made for Each Other" at the Palace by Ray Bell, Loew's Theatres' ad director in the capital city, who promoted one of the few solid pages of this kind with a contest angle. Readers were asked to tell in one sentence why they preferred doing business with any single store advertising on the page, the best of the answers, forwarded to the newspaper, receiving guest tickets for the show. Two days ahead of the page, papers ran sizeable house ads on the contest and on day of publication scatter ads were also planted throughout the issue to call attention to the page.

Bell also lined up 15 large co-op ads in other papers for the same date and reports four additional on the personal appearance of Clem McCarthy plus three more on personal appearance of John Bowles.

Burhorn's Pre-Easter Treasure Hunt Sponsored by Local Merchants

For the purpose of stimulating pre-Easter business for participating merchants in his area, and his picture "Trade Winds" at the Gayety, Chicago, John Burhorn organized a treasure hunt with the cooperation of his local paper, The Daily Calumet, which took place on St. Patrick's Day. In the windows of cooperating stores different star photos were placed. The same photos were reproduced on special heralds gotten out by Burhorn, and to the first person presenting herald in store which displayed same photo, a special prize was given.

Each of the heralds were imprinted with a different number, which allowed participants to win additional prizes. Each merchant posted numbers in different parts of his store and those holding heralds with any of the corresponding numbers won the extra prizes in addition to guest tickets.

Rosenthal Ties Mayor MacLevy To "One Hour for Lunch" Plug

Feature-calibre exploitation was put behind the MGM short "One Hour for Lunch" by Manager Morris Rosenthal, Loew's Poli-Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., the Mayor himself tying in with Rosie to publicize the reel, newspapers running shot showing His Honor at lunch, captions including title of the short.

As followup, Morris planted strips on outside windows, mirrors and counters of downtown lunchrooms and restaurants, illustrated by shot of Bob Benchley at a cafeteria, copy reading: "Bob Benchley complains about having only an hour for lunch—but he doesn't know that we serve a complete meal in 17 minutes."

Tied in on this angle was a special card distributed in the lunch rooms with the suggestion that diners see the short during their lunch period, then have the card punched at the boxoffice, which would also allow them to return at night to see the rest of the show without further charge.

Select Boys' Organization Used to Stimulate Grosses

Members Are Paid Commissions on Outside Ticket Sales Made in Theatre Area

by KEN FORCE
in Kansas City

Organization of a Boys' Club by Louis B. Sponsler, manager of the Fox Waldo Theatre in Kansas City, has been highly successful in producing actual ticket sales, intensive advertising of specific pictures in the Waldo area, and an immeasurable amount of good will.

Sponsler's plan developed out of his success with youngsters eight to 14 years old in the Br'er Fox Club, which meets at the theatre every Saturday matinee, and which, therefore, is primarily a promotion of direct ticket sales to the boys themselves and for their benefit as well.

With the executive committee of the Br'er Fox Club as a nucleus, Mr. Sponsler last summer selected about 40 lively lads from that organization, which numbers 2,000, and with them created the Waldo Boys' Club. While there are no officers, a waiting list of 100 indicates something of the group's importance to members of the organization.

Last year the boys conducted a campaign to sell tickets for a Waldo "Jubilee," and did it so successfully that they disposed of hundreds at 25 cents apiece. Tickets were redeemable at the Waldo box office during the Jubilee, boys earning a nickel commission, or 20 per cent, on each ticket sold. In addition, after he had sold 50, the youngster received a week's pass (it required the sale of 100 if he was 14 or over). If he sold 200, he received a month's pass.

Separate Territories Assigned

Each member was assigned two square blocks, the one in which he lived and an adjoining one. The first week of the campaign he worked his own territory. During the second week he worked in any part of the 80 blocks that, roughly, make up the Waldo district. Practically every home in the entire area was thoroughly canvassed. Boys carried a route book which contained a list of their prospects. In this they noted purchases and against the names of those who didn't buy they jotted down the reason and the time of a callback, if there was to be one. In some instances they returned several times during the second week in order to get the sale. During the second week also they called on their friends in other than their own two blocks.

Club Members Meet Weekly

The campaign started off with an evening meeting of the boys in Mr. Sponsler's office at the theatre. After it was over he invited them to stay and see the show. The club then held a meeting about every four days. They were given 10 tickets at a time, at the meetings, and when they sold them, they turned in the money and received 10 more. On some occasions boys left the meeting and returned the same evening with money for 10 sales. One or two of the boys sold as many as 20 tickets in one evening.

In September of last year, your Round Table published an article on the successful "Br'er Fox" children's clubs at the Fox Midwest theatres in and about Kansas City, with Manager Louis B. Sponsler, of the Waldo, credited for doing much to bring this organization to the fore.

On this page is detailed a second article by Ken Force, having to do with the ways and means adopted by Mr. Sponsler to utilize his kid club membership in building up the box-office during the off weeks of the year.

Meetings last for about 30 minutes and almost invariably are attended 100 per cent. Why? For one reason, the waiting list of 100. For another, they get the free show. They also receive the crackerjacks, peanuts, candy, or whatever else is left over from the Br'er Fox meeting on Saturday afternoon. If a lad is sick, he has father or mother call and report.

Tickets sold by the boys were specially designed for the occasion (see cut) and on the back of the ticket were listed pictures with their stars which played during the Jubilee period. Information on the card formed the nucleus of the boy's sales story. He pointed out that he was earning money for a vacation, for Scout camp, sport equipment, swimming, or what not, and that he was also trying for a pass.

To begin with, the boys selected were those with spunk, not too bashful, and with capacity and enthusiasm so that they went up to the front door of a prospect with courage and personality. Obviously, those they called on were either neighbors or friends. Sales of tickets for Jubilee Weeks were almost automatic.

The Boys' Club was so successful in its first venture it now is a permanent institution at the Waldo, and Mr. Sponsler plans to have members sell tickets for a special occasion about three times a year: during the summer, around Xmas time, and in February, bad periods at the hox office.

Special Fox Waldo Benefit Ticket

During the two weeks before Xmas, always a difficult time to sell attendance to a theatre, this past year members of the club sold admissions good at any Fox house in Kansas City. These were promoted by all Fox theatres in the city as Xmas greetings or gifts. Club members reveived no commission, working only for a pass and a cash prize of three dollars.

During the last two weeks of January the idea was again employed, this time to sell tickets good at the Waldo during a Midwinter Carnival in February. On these tickets boys received a five cent commission.

Boys have to have time to play, Mr. Sponsler pointed out. In summer, of course, they are out of school and can work any time. In winter an hour before and an hour after supper is the best time.

Plan Avoids Benefit Pitfalls

"While the plan works out something like a benefit," Mr. Sponsler said, "it has several advantages over that plan. In the first place, the usual percentage paid on a benefit is 30 per cent; here it is 20. In promoting a benefit, those selling tickets approach friends and acquaintances who buy as a necessary evil, and the benefit consequently often earns as much bad will as good. Buyers are reluctant to make the purchase. In the Waldo plan the spirit is much, much better. Buyers know they are helping some lad with spunk enough to go out and ask for help.

"In other ways it creates good will. This is, of course, in addition to the advertising on specified pictures.

"We find that when we do something to encourage the business activity of boys we earn gratitude of parents. Ten mothers and fathers took the trouble personally to call and thank us for the work of the club. Fathers get out in the family car in the evenings during a campaign and drive the boys to make sales calls. Mothers also help.

Residential Districts Preferred

"The plan might not work in an apartment district, I don't know," Mr. Sponsler concludes. "All our business comes from homes which people have bought or are living in for the benefit of their children. It is a district of homes, not all fine ones, but substantial residences housing good families. Parents in such families want to see their boys developing. Mother and Father always have wanted the boy to learn the rudiments of business, to earn some money and to take care of it or spend it on something he needs or wants. It doesn't matter whether the family is well-to-do or poor. In nine cases out of ten the rich man's boy has as much of a problem to earn vacation and spending money as the poor man's."

VINCENT F. O'LEARY
manages the Melrose Theatre in Melrose Park, Illinois. He began his career in 1927 when he served as usher, chief of service and then assistant manager of the Majestic in E. St. Louis, Ill. Three years later found him managing the Orpheum in the same city and the following year he was transferred as assistant at the neighboring Majestic Theatre. The next two assistant's jobs for him were at the Paramount in Hammond, Ind., and the Palace in South Bend, Ind. He came on to his present house in 1937, where he is doing a fine job.

bowed into theatre business when he started as advertising manager for the H. H. Johnson shows in Madison, Indiana. A month later he took over the office managership of the Johnson Theatres and now, in addition to these chores, has been named manager of the new Ohio, also in Madison, Indiana. Burkert has promised faithfully to keep us informed of his activities and we know he will fulfill it.

opened the first picture and vaudeville house in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1910 and is very proud of the fact that he showed the fire marshal there the first piece of film he ever saw. A few years later he and his wife worked behind footlights, remaining there until 1930. Jack secured a managerial position at the Riviera Theatre in Manayunk, Philadelphia, after that date and is still at it.

is the skipper of the Strand Theatre, a Central States Circuit house, in Fort Dodge, Iowa. He entered showbusiness in 1923 when he started ushering in a theatre at Albert Lea. He also worked on the stage as prop boy and later as property man. In 1929, while attending the University of Minnesota, Henry again secured an usher's job with Publix' Century in Minneapolis. He returned to Albert Lea a couple of years later to act as manager of the Rivoli and in 1936 obtained his present post.

claims his first job to set him going in the theatre was that of popcorn boy at the Lyric in Mena, Arkansas. From this he was promoted to head doorman. Noticing his interest in advertising he was given a chance to take charge of publicity and did so well that he soon became director of publicity and assistant manager of the Met Theatre in Jackson, Tenn., at which house we now find him.

JOHN F. SPELLMAN
manages Graphic Circuit's Brandon Theatre in Brandon, Vermont. He was previously associated with the RKO in Boston, Mass., working there for four years. He started from the bottom, doing usher duty and gradually worked himself up the ladder. We anticipate hearing from you often, Jim, for undoubtedly you are doing a good job of work.

WILLIAM C. POWELSON
is no newcomer to showbusiness, having entered this field 14 years ago, when he was an usher at Loew's Aldine Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa. His subsequent jobs in this city were those of assistant and he covered the State, Ritz, Penn and Stanley Theatres. He followed with a superintendent's post at the Harris, then became assistant and treasurer at the Enright. Relief managing was another addition in his career. The first managerial position he held was at the Belmar Theatre and he moved from there to the Harris Tarentum and Peoples Theartres, in the same capacity. With such a wealth of experience we feel sure he is doing a grand job at managing his present house, Warner Bros.' Strand in Tarentum, Pa.

is the assistant manager of the Decatur Theatre in the Bronx section of New York City. Three years ago he secured an usher's job in the U. S. Theatre and also acted as chief of service. He came on to the Decatur after that, where he has been working for the past two years. Since you are not very far from Round Table headquarters we invite you to come on over and say hello, Brent.

started in theatre business several years ago and his first job was that of doorman at the Hippodrome Theatre in Washington, D. C., working for Mr. Sidney Lust. Since then he was at different houses for the same chain and now is connected with the Cameo Theatre in Mt. Ranier, Maryland. George is a talented person and has taken up the role of sign painter, which, he says, aids him no end in this business of selling pictures.

is the present manager of Borg and Peters' Crystal Theatre in Salinas, California. In 1923 he acted as janitor at the Fox in Oakland, Cal., and a while later became assistant manager at the Rialto Theatre, in the same sector. He was transferred to the Plaza in the same capacity and then moved to the Palace. In 1927 he went to Granada, remaining there for three years, then receiving a promotion to manager. His next spot was to the Capitol as manager and in 1938 was offered the post he is now holding.

started as extra usher for Harris Amusement Company's Sheridan Square Theatre in 1929 and soon after became assistant chief of service and finally chief. He left the theatrical business to study flying but the theatre bug having got him, he returned shortly after to do doorman duty at Warner Bros. Sheridan Square. In 1935 he became assistant manager of this house and two years later was promoted to assistant city manager of the Greensburg Theatres. The next move brought him to manage the Strand Theatre in Greensburg, Pa., and we now find him at the Strand in Oakland Pittsburgh, Pa., in the same capacity.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

Following the title is information regarding the classification of the subject matter of the feature. A comedy is denoted by the abbreviation Com.; Melodrama by Mel.; Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel.; Musical by Mus.; Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com.; Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parentheses after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

DEPENDABILITY

If there is one word which sums up the average exhibitor's impression of Motiograph Projectors, that word is dependability. And if this exhibitor's theatre happens to be one of the thousands which are Motiograph equipped, he knows that it has real dollars-and-cents meaning.

Only in dependability such as Motiograph's, is found positive box-office protection against the haunting possibility of equipment failure — and a blank screen. Only such dependability carries with it, durability — long life — and low cost of up-keep — which make a consistent, year-to-year contribution to theatre operating profits.

The leading independent theatre equipment dealer in your film territory will welcome the opportunity to explain the reasons behind Motiograph's traditional dependability. See him today — and ask for the new descriptive book on the Model "K" Projector. There is no obligation.

SALVAGING A RELIC OF MOTION PICTURE PAST

STRIKINGLY demonstrating the epochal difference between the motion picture theatre of today and that of yesteryear—suggesting as well, perhaps, the changed social status of the screen theatre—these pictures show the Cabrillo theatre in San Diego, Calif., before and after remodeling. At left the Cabrillo, which is operated by L. B. and G. A. Metzger, is pictured in its original front treatment, typical of the nickelodeon period. Above is the new front, with its trim modern lines, giving full attention to the promotional functions of the theatre facade, yet doing so with refinement. Faced in white stucco in a panel and ribbed-recess formation, the front is dominated by a semi-circular marquee trimmed with fluorescent neon-tubing and Adler silhouette type attraction boards, the opal glass of which is lighted in a series of colors in vertical wavy lines. The curving ribbed recess just above the marquee is floodlighted by concealed reflector sources on the roof of the marquee. The name sign letters are edged in fluorescent neon-tubing (zeon). The entrance area and vestibule are faced in Vitrolite trimmed with chromium bands. Entrance doors, which are of sandblasted glass, are also chromium-trimmed, and display frames are of chromium. An interesting treatment of the sidewalk unites it with the vestibule floor; both are of terrazzo, laid in a multi-colored pattern which begins at the sidewalk in a wavy band following the curve of the marquee. The interior of the Cabrillo has also been modernized, the auditorium was restyled, a women's lounge added, and the ventilating system improved. Earl F. Giberson, of San Diego, was the architect.

Store-Space Theatres Growing in Los Angeles

A MUSHROOM-LIKE growth of small theatres operated largely by persons not previously identified with the theatre business, is acquiring dimensions causing established theatre interests in the California metropolis to give it increasingly perplexed attention. Among the latter the attitude is taken that these theatres, considered in the aggregate, are characterized by an extremely small size and a standard of construction and architectural treatment which, if sufficiently extended, would return film exhibition sooner or later to the nickelodeon level.

While leading circuit officials and independent operators express themselves as opposed to theatres of such standards, and say they may soon act in support of such opposition, none have given permission to be quoted at this time. However, S. Charles Lee, Los Angeles theatre architect, said, "The motion picture industry, by allowing itself to be cheapened with small and many times uncomfortable theatres in store spaces, is virtually opening the door to radio and television."

He said that he had been asked to plan many theatres of this type in recent months.

"Although I try to solve the problems of the exhibitor in his way, by meeting his budget," Mr. Lee continued, "I am also much concerned with the advancement of the motion picture business. The so-called 'shooting-gallery' defeats that purpose and serves to encourage the public to remain at home or get their entertainment elsewhere than in motion picture theatres.

"Most of the theatres that I have done more recently have been of the smaller kind, but some of them, for existing commercial buildings, have had all facilities reduced to a minimum. And it looks as though building of these houses is going to continue for the next seven or eight months."

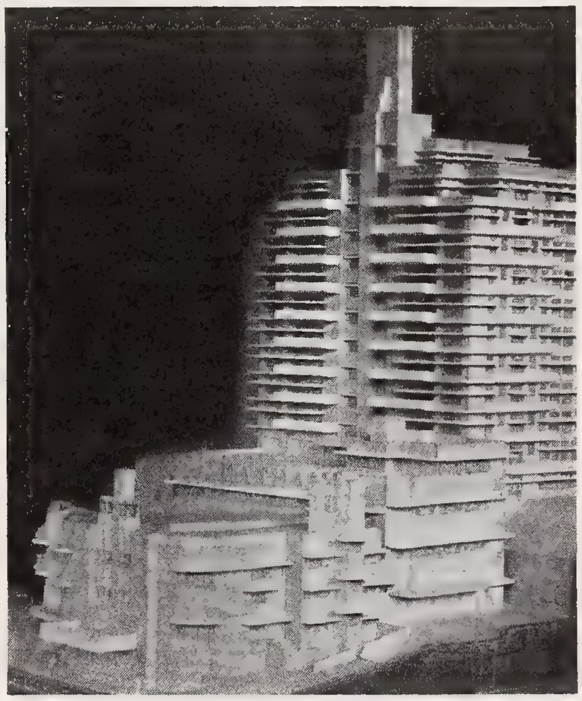
A method pursued, Mr. Lee said, is to build a theatre in dismantled commercial space on a down payment of $5,000, mortgaging the equipment and furnishings to the owner of the building to finance the project, which may cost in the neighborhood of $20,000.

A survey of the Los Angeles metropolitan area indicates the existence of over a hundred of such store-space theatres, with 75 of them in the city alone. In some instances there are two or more only a few doors apart.

At the offices of Fox West Coast Theatres, it was stated that no attempt would be made by this circuit to meet the competition of these theatres by means of similar ones, but that it would continue to erect theatres representing present-day standards in the industry.

Photocell Control for Auditorium Lighting

ORGANIZED INTEREST in characteristics of the physical theatre and their bearing upon effective presentation of the picture and the comfort of patrons, appears to be developing in England, where the theatre, as a problem of engineering, rather than one predominantly of ornamentation, has received less notice than has been given it during the last few years in the United States.



Introducing some variety into the news from China. Pictured is a model of a building to be erected in Singapore, housing a 1,250-seat theatre. According to the plans of Frank W. Brewer, Singapore architect, the theatre will be as modern inside as outside, with elaborate treatment in modern materials and lighting equipment. To be called the Cathay, the theatre section will include a bar, spacious foyer, and several lounges. The owners are Loke Wan Tho and Mrs. Loke Lew.

Among reports from London is one concerning the application of photoelectric cell control to auditorium lighting to vary the intensity of the light provided by the running illumination of the auditorium according to the light reflected from the screen. This is offered as a possible solution of the persistent problem of light interference, but goes beyond the problem that has been commonly considered—that of direct interference with screen vision by light sources and reflective surfaces in the screen area—to the broader one of the effect of general auditorium light level on clear and comfortable vision of the screen.

In its recognition of the problem, the method, experiments on which have won the interest of the British Illuminating Engineering Society, recalls the means to vary illumination of the screen area according to the intensity of the projected light—that is to say, film density—which was described by Ben Schlanger, New York architect, before the spring 1938 convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. This method, however, involved a special screen with spill light arrangements instead of immediate masking.

Greater interest in ventilation is also being taken by British exhibitors, according to the Ideal Kinema, which publication also comments editorially in its latest issue on action of the Cinema Exhibitors Association looking toward the improvement of comfort conditions inside the theatre and the provision of more suitable marquees.

1939 Projects Advance But Still Under 1938

ALTHOUGH REPORTS of new theatres and remodeling planned for later this spring and throughout the summer have been comparable in number with those at this time last year, new construction and major alterations the first two months of the year have been below those of the same period of 1938, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York. The Dodge service covers, however, only the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains.

In these states, construction and remodeling contracts reported during January and February covered 96 projects with a total cost of $1,965,000. These figures compare with 110 projects costing $3,556,000 during the first two months of 1938.

Construction contracts in February of this year substantially exceeded those of January, however, amounting to $1,154,000, as compared with $811,000 in January in the same 37 states.

Reminders, Suggestions, Precautions For That Old Spring Cleaning Job

● A timely accounting of cleaning methods old and new that not only make the theatre spic and span following winter's grind, but that do so safely

THE EXCEPTIONAL intensity of cleaning methods used for spring overhauling requires more than ordinary precautions to prevent damage to the articles and surfaces involved. The winter has seen slush and grime brought in on the shoes and clothing of patrons, while the air has introduced into the theatre the smoke of domestic heating plants. When spring puts an end to these conditions, even those portions of the theatre that normally receive little or no attention are thoroughly refurbished, and exceptional treatment is usually indicated even for surfaces that have been given more or less regular cleansing. It is time, therefore, to point out effective methods—and to sound the old along with the new precautions.

Spring cleaning should be directed toward two objectives, of which the effective removal of dirt is one, the other protection of the surface. Use of the right cleaner on the wrong surface, or on the right surface but in the wrong way, can do damage that may in some cases prove seriously expensive to repair.

Walls, floors, furnishings, fabrics, fixtures, carpets, all present special requirements with reference to both the effectiveness and the safety of the cleaning processes. A few of the most necessary precautions will be reviewed here.

¶ MARBLE SURFACES

Marble requires a highly exceptional precaution by reason of being porous to water. If there is ordinary salt, for example, dissolved in water, as evaporation proceeds some of the salt will crystallize out. Further evaporation permits more of the salt to deposit on the crystals previously formed, causing those crystals to grow larger. This process of growth will take place inside the pores of a marble surface that has been washed with water containing any substance of a crystal-forming nature. But crystals trapped inside the pores of marble have no room for growth, except by exerting pressure on the marble from within and disintegrating its surface. Very real and serious damage is caused in this way. Several precautions are possible.

If the theatre's water is truly pure, preliminary flushing before use of any cleaning compound will fill the pores and limit the penetration of the cleaning substances applied afterward. The protection afforded is incomplete, since the water in the pores will absorb by solution some of the cleaning compound subsequently applied. Crystallization within the pores will therefore not be eliminated entirely, but it will be reduced. However, if the theatre has hard water, more harm than good may result; and not all water-softeners are acceptable in this instance. They may merely substitute one form of crystal for another. It may be highly desirable to obtain special advice, based on analysis of the local water supply, if the theatre has marble surfaces or statuary of appreciable value.

If the water is satisfactorily pure, soap makes an acceptable marble cleanser, since it does not form crystals. Rough or pitted floors, which cannot be thoroughly cleaned with mop or brush because the dirt is sunk in crevices that cannot be reached, can be cleaned satisfactorily with pure water and a mild detergent carrying a high percentage of soap. Dirt that does not flush out with water alone, because it is greasy and therefore does not allow water to wet it, is effectively wetted by a strong soap mixture and is then floated to the surface where it can be mopped away. If the floor is thoroughly flushed this treatment will not make it slippery, for most of the soap will be carried forward with the squeegee, and what remains will be sunk in the indentations beneath the walking surface, where as a rule it can do no harm.

¶ PAINTED SURFACES

Paint and paint substitutes are of several kinds; painted surfaces may have more than one type of finish or glaze. Washing them may remove the glaze and injure the paint itself, depending on the materials involved.

Some walls, for example, carry a top glaze of ordinary laundry starch, which of course will come away if washed with hot water. Luke-warm water is safest, but does not clean as quickly. Comparative tests with coolish and warmish water may be made in some obscure place where damage to the paint finish will not be noticed, to determine how hot the water may be made for quick results without getting it too hot for the safety of the surface.

Soaps or cleaning compounds used on painted walls should have little if any free alkali, which is a solvent for oil paints. Many cleaning compounds, which depend on free alkali for their efficiency, will remove paint along with the dirt, hastening the time when a more or less expensive repainting job will become unavoidable. It is obviously cheaper to use a more nearly neutral cleaner, even at the cost of some additional expenditure of time and elbow grease.

Calcimined surfaces are not cleaned. The calcimine is taken off with a sponge and cold water, and a fresh layer applied.

¶ WOODWORK

Only cold water and entirely neutral soap should be used on woodwork. Hot water softens the paint, and a slight trace of alkali in the soap removes it. Shellacked surfaces should not be washed at all, there is strong danger that the shellac will turn milky white on contact with water.

To improve the appearance of wooden seats, an excellent procedure is to have a good painter give them a coat of four-hour valspar varnish. Thereafter they are treated with a furniture cleaner instead of by washing. It is advisable to use wax polish instead of oil polish, rubbing the wax in well until there is no surplus on the surface to come off on patrons' clothing. It is undesirable to try to do all the seats in one night; the job can be scheduled over a period of several weeks.

Crystal lighting fixtures present a very special cleaning problem. The dangling crystals are upheld only by bits of wire, easily corroded through. Failure of a thin wire may allow the crystal to drop on a patron's head, or spatter fragments of flying glass over a substantial area of the theatre. It is obviously important to avoid cleaning procedures that may weaken the wires. A little soap and water, trapped in the fine hole in the glass through which the wire runs, and not flushed away, can cause a good deal of rusting. The presence of the soap retards evaporation of the water, some

The Latchis Memorial Theatre

As unusual among theatres erected today as it is lavish in its reproduction of the art of Classic Greece, the Memorial Theatre in Battleboro, Vt., gains interest from the story of the man it commemorates and from the enterprise of his sons who built it on the site of their first theatre

THEATRE PHOTOGRAPHY BY LEWIS R. BROWN

WHEN THE four Latchis brothers of Brattleboro, Vt., and Keene, N. H., set about to erect a fitting memorial to their late father, Demetrius P. Latchis, who rose from proprietor of a small fruit store to owner and operator of a group of motion picture theatres, they decided to make it a theatre on the site of his first venture in show business, fitted out according to modern operating standards, but of an architectural design adapted to display of the classical art of Greece, his homeland. S. W. Haynes, Brattleboro, was the architect.

The Latchis Memorial theatrein Brattleboro therefore is probably the most unusual theatre erected in the East in recent years. This may be true not only because of its authentically reproduced art, but for the distinction of several of its features, one of which is a long ramp and stairway on either side of the auditorium leading from the balcony to the stage.

Peter D. Latchis, chief executive of the Latchis circuit of fourteen theatres, has been the mainspring of the undertaking and continues at the helm; the other brothers, Spero D., Emmanuel D. and John D., assist in the remaining work of developing the large building block surrounding the theatre into a commercial and apartment-residence unit.

The main four-story building angles into the corner of Main and Flat Streets and extends about 60 feet along either street, while an old theatre building and an adjacent garage on Flat Street (both being remodeled to fit into the scheme) will give a 450-foot frontage on that street with parking space beyond for 200 cars.

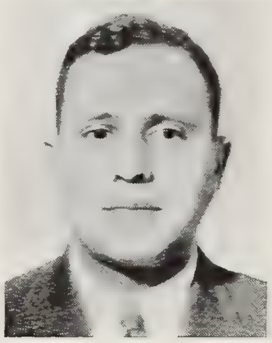
LATCHIS THEATRES: THE STORY OF AN IMMIGRANT AND HIS SONS

IT WAS in 1921 that Demetrius P. Latchis, in association with his four sons—Peter D., John D., Spero and Emmanuel D.—became a motion picture exhibitor. In that year he built and opened a theatre in Brattleboro, Vermont, where the Memorial, erected by his sons, now stands dedicated to his memory. Eleven years later, when he died, he and his family owned and operated six theatres. Yet in 1921, he was already 57 years old and had never even seen a motion picture.

Peter D. Latchis

This was the beginning of the Latchis circuit which today, under the management of the four sons, with Peter D. as the chief executive, comprises fourteen theatres in Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, while other theatre properties are owned by it and several others are soon to be constructed.



John D. Latchis

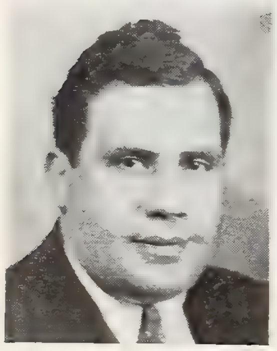
Demetrius P. Latchis had never been without the courage to embark on new ventures in later life. Born in St. Basil, Greece, he was 37 years old when he came to America. At the beginning of his new career, he established himself in Hinsdale, New Hampshire, where he opened a fruit and confectionery store. A few years later, however, he removed to Brattleboro, continuing in the same business. When in 1921 he built the Latchis theatre there, he moved his fruit and soda-fountain enterprise to a store in the theatre building. Fruit and confectionery merchandising is still an important part of the Latchis business interests.

With immediate success encouraging them in their new, strange venture the Latchis family built a second theatre at Keene, N. H. In 1924 they added the Colonial in Keene, which is now the headquarters city of the circuit.

Spero Latchis

In 1927 property in Claremont, N. H., was bought, and the building of a theatre begun the following spring. This theatre, opened in December 1928, with a seating capacity of 1,150, was considered one of the finest in the East at that time.

In 1929 the Latchis's bought the Strand theatre at Milford, N. H., and in 1935 a one-half partnership of the business of the Strand at Windsor, Vt. In the following year the Windsor theatre, in the central part of the town, was built and opened. In October 1937 were bought both the site and the building of the Strand theatre, and today the Latchis circuit owns all the real estate connected with theatres in Windsor.



Emmanuel D. Latchis

The lease on the Woodstock theatre, Woodstock, Vt., was taken over from Arthur C. Barwood in 1937, and later that year the Community theatre there, including the land, was purchased from William La Mere.

In the spring of 1937 ground was broken in the business section of Milford, N. H., for a new Latchis theatre with a seating capacity of 600. The building also contains two large stores and second-floor offices.

In just the previous year Latchis expansion had extended to Massachusetts, the Plymouth and Rialto theatres in Leominster having been leased from the McEvoy Amusement Company. A year later the Metropolitan theatre building in that city was bought from the banking commission of Massachusetts. The lease on this theatre, now held by Levenson Brothers, is soon to expire, giving the Latchis interest "control" in Leominster. Also in 1936 the Lawler theatre in Greenfield, Mass., was leased for several years.

Construction of a theatre building in Springfield, Vt., is to begin as soon as the commercial area of the Memorial building in Brattleboro is finished. Latchis plans also call for the construction of two more theatres this fall or in the spring of 1940.

On July 4, 1937, Demetrius P. Latchis's sons presented the last show at the first Latchis theatre in Brattleboro. The next day demolition of the theatre began. Razing of three adjoining structures to make room for the new Memorial theatre had got under way in the spring. The Memorial was opened September 24, 1938. When the building is completed, it will also have eight stores and 50 apartments.

¶ THE LOBBIES

Street past the sea-green granite blocks that form the first story (the upper stories are of cast ornamental stone), one comes to the theatre entrance located between two store spaces.

Entrance is through an open vestibule into a long outer lobby (17 x 60 feet), gained through three pairs of doors of golden oak with brass bars. The terrazzo floor of the lobby is in green, cream, brown and red geometric figures, while centered along the floor are three nickel-stripped inlay figures of ancient Greek theme, one being the Diana of Versailles, the second Bellerophon and Pegasus, and the third Hercules and the Lion.

Around the walls of the lobby is a three-foot band of green and white Vermont granite with base and cap of black marble. The upper walls are of stucco blocks in cream, stone, brown and green and are capped by a small Greek cornice in green, gold and red. On either side the lobby walls hold three antique gold frames, each of which accommodate one one-sheet and eight 11 x 14's. Three multiple-color lighting fixtures are located on either wall. Radiators are set in the walls, three on either side (the Memorial is heated by steam radiators throughout).

The ceiling is of sky blue with six modernistic lighting fixtures, chromium-topped and with three small chromium bands, each outlet providing red, white and blue lighting. Entrance to the stores on either side is gained from this lobby. A six-foot exit extends from the inner end of the outer lobby.

Entrance to an inner lobby is gained likewise through three pairs of golden oak, brass-trimmed doors. This lobby is 22 x 16 feet and its floor is centered with an 18-foot circle inlaid with the twelve signs of the Zodiac in nickel-striped black. This lobby is 11 feet high. The walls, of a cream color, are capped with a Greek cornice of conventional Greek forms in red, green and gold. A blue ceiling is divided by two beams and has two lighting fixtures in each section; these are chromium trimmed and have small five-leaf olive branches extending from the top. Made of white opal glass, the fixtures are wired for red, blue and white light.

On the right wall of this inner lobby hangs an oil portrait of Demetrius P. Latchis, painted by Louis Jambor of New York, Hungarian-born artist, who did all of the murals in the Memorial theatre.

¶ THE AUDITORIUM

Entrance into the auditorium is by two 5-foot arches on either side of the fountain, and by narrower openings at either side of the foyer, while staircases from either side of the vestibule (next to the entrance doors) give access to the balcony.

The main floor seating is divided into three banks, a middle section having thirteen seats across, and side sections of seven seats. The chairs are 22 inches wide, and rows are spaced 34 inches back to back. Cushions are constructed of rubber (United States Rubber Company "sponge" type), and are covered in coral Velmo mohair. The total capacity is approximately 1,200, with almost 900 seats on the main floor.

Over the aisle entrances on the auditorium side and back of the fountain are plaques of Greek mythological figures, and on the rear center wall is a plaque of Apollo and the Nymphs. At the sides of the plaques are four pairs of green and blue lumiline lamps.

The soffit of the balcony is divided into two sections with a beam in the center, the material used being buff Evenaire panels 12 inches wide and 10 feet long. This section of the auditorium is lighted by six diamond-shaped fixtures made up of lumiline lamps against reflectors. Each fixture has eight lamps, four of which are blue and four yellow.

Aisles are 4 feet wide and laid with red carpet. The aisles are lighted in a scheme devised by Peter D. Latchis, consisting in light strips 12 inches long and 4 inches wide, built in the floor at 6-foot intervals and staggered along each side, and covered with yellow opaque Vitrolux glass.

The walls of the auditorium are of stucco blocks (heating units set in, five on each side). From the front of the balcony to the stage there is a balustrade of four levels, 6 feet in width and 60 feet long. This balustrade is built from the main floor with fluted Ionic columns ranging from 12 feet to 18 feet in height. Each column is 16 inches in diameter, and two fluted columns are built on a base 3 feet above the floor. These columns are decorated in old gold with capitals in green, red and gold. Above the columns is a cornice 2 feet high with ornamental plaster at the cornice and base, and above this is a balustrade 30 inches high, made of wood but painted in a stone effect. Above two columns is a lighting arrangement 4 feet high and 4 feet wide, consisting of a 4-foot square pane of frosted

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Earl Shutt has sold the Moore theatre at Mooreland, Okla. to his brother, Melvin Shutt.

The Rialto at Windsor Locks, Conn., is scheduled to be closed early in June for complete renovation.

The United Theatre Equipment Company has been incorporated at San Francisco, with a capital stock of $25,000, by F. C. Cannon, B. E. Kragen and L. Wadsworth.

Glen Gilmore has reconditioned his Nu-Sho theatre at Bixby, Okla., installing Heywood-Wakefield chairs and new carpeting.

George Bromley and Alec Mounce have begun the construction of a new theatre to seat 900 in Los Angeles. They recently sold their Victoria in that city to J. Byron Cunningham, after having operated the house for eleven years.

The Ismo theatre in Coffeyville, Kansas, which was operated by Southwestern Theatres, Inc., of Tulsa and Oklahoma City, Okla., has been sold to Fox West Coast Theatres.

Simpson Theatres, Inc., of Gastonia, N. C., has been formed to operate a motion picture business under authorized capital of $50,000 by T. B. Autrey, H. M. Pickett, and T. B. Autrey, Jr., all of Charlotte, N. C.

S. J. Callahan has purchased the Best theatre in Broken, Okla., from Charles Buffum.

Bailey Brothers have completed the installation of new RCA sound equipment, American Seating Company chairs, and stage drapes, in the Whalley theatre in New Haven, Conn.

Eastern Theatres, Inc., operators of the Tivoli in Chattanooga, Tenn., plan to remodel the house, including the installation of new seats and other equipment. Cost of renovation is placed at $50,000.

Eugene Hickey has purchased the Moore theatre at Folsom, Calif., and expects to remodel the house.

Work is to begin soon on enlarging the balcony and making other improvements at the Lincoln theatre in New Orleans.

Fox West Coast Theatres has acquired the Belmont Stores theatre in Long Beach, Calif., from William Woodworth, who has retired from show business. The house seats 850.

Production made a photographable gesture toward Projection the other day as John O. Aalberg, director of the sound department of RKO Radio Pictures, called on executives of the International Projector Corporation while in New York. Shown are Herbert Griffin, executive vice-president (at his own unusually neat desk), Mr. Aalberg, Herbert Starke of RKO Theatres, California division; and (standing) George Friedl, Jr., director of sound engineering at the Simplex plant.

The Griffith circuit is remodeling the State in Guthrie, Okla., at a cost of $5,000. The house will be given a new front, poster frames, marquee and drapes.

The Schine circuit is remodeling the recently acquired New Plaza in Milford, Del. A new heating plant and ventilation system are being installed. New steel girders are to be erected and the roof is to be rebuilt.

The Centre theatre at Peterboro, Ontario, which has been rebuilt from the old Royal theatre at a cost of $30,000, has been opened by Sydney Goldstone of Toronto, the owner, with Sam Ulster, also of Toronto, as manager.

Edward C. Cahill, RCA service manager, has returned to the home office at Camden, N. J., after a visit to the West Coast.

Morris Seider of the Prudential circuit, operators of 25 theatres in Brooklyn and Long Island, and W. W. Jones, service executive for RCA in New York, have negotiated renewal of service contracts for Prudential theatres.

Edward H. Wolk of Chicago has taken over the motion picture replacement parts business of the Precision Machine Company of Milwaukee, Wisc.

Mrs. Bertha Barrett, operator of the Ritz at Madill, Okla., recently installed a National Sirocco blower in her theatre.

A. C. Karski, veteran motion picture exhibitor, has opened his new Laurel theatre at Oakland, Calif. Leroy Scott is manager.

Vance Smith has opened his new Orpheum in North English, Ia. The house has a capacity of 400.

W. H. Williams, operator of the Ray theatre in Tonkawa, Okla., recently installed two E-7 Simplex projectors.

Pacific Coast Theatres has taken a 15 year lease on the 750-seat theatre which is being built by George Page in Torance, Calif.

W. M. Harrison, formerly manager of the Paramount at Clarksdale, Miss., has been named manager of Saenger's Grand at Natchez, Miss. Melvin S.

Greenblatt succeeds Mr. Harrison as the Paramount manager and will be assisted by Ralph Bracken.

The Plaza theatre at Carrollton, Texas, owned by Mrs. A. W. Lowrey, has been remodeled at a cost of $5,000. New floors, seats, ceiling, decorations, stage and projection room have been installed, together with a new marquee and name sign.

John Atchison, who operates the Palace at Skiatook, Okla., has installed two Super-Simplex projectors and a Walker screen.

A. E. Meyer, general sales manager of International Projector Corporation, has been visiting the branches of the National Theatre Supply Company in the South and Southwest.

The Commonwealth Amusement Company, operators of the Rialto in Searcy, Ark., has installed new Heywood-Wakefield auditorium chairs.

More than $30,000 have been spent in improving the theatre and store property in Atlanta, Ga., housing the Sylvan theatre. Erected by George F. Longino, the Sylvan has been leased for operation to the East Point Amusement Company. The house seats 500.

C. S. Rose has purchased the Rex in Maysville, Okla., from William Jensen, who has moved to California.

Tommy Read, manager of the Paramount theatre in Atlanta, Ga., for the past several years, has been appointed manager of the Fox in the same city. Mr. Read succeeds Hudson Edwards, who becomes city manager of Lucas & Jenkins' theatres in Savannah, Ga.

T. H. Slowthower, operator of the State theatre in Wichita, Kan., recently reseated that house, installing Heywood-Wakefield chairs.

Some sort of a record was hung up by the Detroit branch of the National Theatre Supply in replacing fire-damaged and water-soaked equipment in the projection room of the Delray theatre in that city. Under the direction of W. J. Turnbull, branch manager, two representatives worked throughout the night and following morning installing new Simplex E-7 mechanisms, Simplex pedestals and magazines, Peerless lamphouses, National rectifiers and Simplex Four-star sound equipment, and all was ready at show time. Working with the National men were two Altec service representatives. The Delray is operated by Delray Theatre Corporation.

C. E. Esterley has been taken over the operation of the Roanoke in Kansas City, Mo., from Frank Amos. Mr. Esterley also operates the Bijou, State and Prospect in Kansas City.

Rodney Toups has celebrated the 20th anniversary of his joining the Loew organization in New Orleans, La. Mr. Toups started with the old Loew's Crescent in Crescent City, La., in 1919, becoming manager of that house and of the newer Loew's State a few years later.

Howard Wilson has bought the Majestic theatre in Jetmore, Kan., from Herman Lee.

Walter Bowe, advertising and sales promotion director of the Carrier Corporation, Syracuse, N. Y., has been elected to Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising fraternity.

Clarence A. MacDonald, Columbus, Ohio, has closed the Southland, neighborhood unit in his group of theatres there, for extensive remodeling. The floor plan will be altered to afford a better view of the screen.

The Marion, a Northio unit at Marion, Ohio, has reopened after a general renovation, representing an expenditure of $20,000. A new $2,500 front has been built at the Palace, a sister house in Marion.

INSPECTION RECORDS AS OPERATING GUIDES; TWO NOTES ON SEATING

DURING the past several months we have been seeking certain statistics on equipment and furnishings replacement. Our interest was such that the figures would have been forthcoming—if there were any records. But except in a very few instances, no itemized records had been kept of replacements.

Records consisting in regular inspection reports, with consequent expenditures summarized according to specific maintenance items, such as the repair of a projector mechanism, purchase of voltage regulators for the sound system, replacement of a screen or carpeting, and so on, together with recommendations that have been turned in, on the basis of individual observations, by projectionists, assistant managers, the janitor, an engineer, or others in contact with what makes the wheels go around—such records (to get to the end of this sentence as soon as possible) form a guide, period. They come in handy for inquiring editors, of course, but that isn't the point. The point is that they form a guide for future operation, a chart by which operating methods can be more efficiently organized—a map of potential chinks in the operating structure. And if we know anything about the so-called human being, they would tend to keep the personnel on its respective toes.

In the seating columns of this issue latex sponge for theatre seating cushions is described. In England there are several hundred theatres with auditorium chairs having cushions of this material, but only a few in the United States. One leading manufacturer—the United States Rubber Company—refers to its development of the material as the result of an accidental discovery. One of its laboratory men, while working on a footwear problem, whipped up some latex (milk of the rubber tree, and don't ask us how a tree gives milk) and put it in the oven. He found later that he had baked himself a round loaf of stuff that looked very interesting if only someone could suggest some use for it. Well, as we know now, someone did.

But this is probably more important: Suppose it was found that both back and seat cushions of latex sponge could be made relatively so thin that the entire design of the auditorium chair could be changed to effect a substantial saving in space requirements. More space might be provided for a person standing up to let another patron by, giving say, 33-inch spacing the value of perhaps 36. In extremely large auditoriums, of course, a few more rows could be got in.

That, however, is worrying about the future, whereas a press release is before us which merits some attention here and now. It is from Mr. H. J. Ross of L. C. Chase & Company, prominent manufacturers of fabrics. Mr. Ross observes:

"A mistaken idea is shared by many persons as to the performance of mohair velvet as an upholstery material during hot weather. Many believe that it is warmer than other fabrics. The reverse is true, as has been proved by actual tests. Mohair, being made up of the strong, resilient hairs of the Angora goat, does not flatten down as do some other pile fabrics, under the pressure of the body, but leaves space for sufficient air to circulate to actually lower body temperature . . ."

And that is actually the truth. White sheets on a thick mattress can be far more uncomfortable than a red mohair chair (moreover, it's difficult to manipulate a Tom Collins lying down). What Mr. Ross says is all very true. The only trouble is that you can't get the average person to believe it. People feel partly with their eyes and the psychological mechanism of association (which sounds pretty grand to us). We habitually call red a warm color, green a cool one, because fire is red, while water and ice tend to appear greenish. Redheads are supposed—but that's irrelevant. Our thesis here is that, while a fabric like mohair because it does not mash down, is definitely cooler than fabrics that do mash down, we wag a skeptical head over the possibility of getting the public to accept the fact. In place of such dubious educational efforts we suggest the provision of summer air conditions in the theatre that will permit patrons to enjoy the posterior comfort of mohair without the mental anguish.

COMFORT FACTORS IN LIGHTING

THE PROBLEM of so controlling the admittance lighting of the motion picture auditorium, that the patron is not temporarily blinded on entering, is one with which every exhibitor is familiar. Inquiries concerning it, however, indicate that exhibitors are not, as a rule wholly aware of the extensive investigations that have been carried out in connection with this and related aspects of theatre lighting.

A great deal more is now known about auditorium lighting than was the case even a few years ago. This is not to say that all problems have been solved and that the exhibitor need only apply a perfected formula. He can, however, guide himself by reference to a series of important facts which have been established.

The first point to be considered in connection with light levels in proceeding from the street to the darkened auditorium, must of necessity be the illumination level maintained in the auditorium, both as to intensity and gradation. This much being established, the extent of contrast between interior and exterior illumination becomes known, and proper approaches can be devised accordingly.

The results of one elaborate investigation into auditorium lighting were reported by F. M. Falge and W. D. Riddle at the meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers last fall in Detroit. As a result of definite tests these investigators reported that a totally dark auditorium is undesirable from the point of view of eye comfort in viewing motion pictures, leaving altogether out of question the matter of patron convenience in entering or leaving, the insecurity which nervous patrons might feel under such circumstances, and other related considerations that do not apply to actual viewing of the screen.

Glare and Auditorium Darkness

Two causes for dissatisfaction with excessive darkness were found to predominate. The first was glare. The eye, as is well known, automatically adjusts its sensitivity to the general level of surrounding illumination. In a very dark theatre, the process of watching the screen does not keep the eye from self-adjustment to the nature of its other surroundings: the screen itself, then, whenever large portions of it show white, becomes a source of relatively excessive illumination with all the painful effects of glaring light encountered under any circumstances.

A second unfavorable factor was also found in the completely darkened auditorium. With the screen as the only source of illumination, light was reflected from walls and ceiling. This reflected light flickered as screen illumination varied with changes of the picture, and constituted a source of serious distraction.

The experimental results obtained, combined with those of earlier investigators here and abroad, led to a conclusion that screen surroundings should be maintained at about 1/25th to 1/50th of the screen brightness, and that the screen should be immediately adjacent to its illuminated surroundings, not separated from them by the conventional black border.

Traffic Area Light Levels

The recommended graduations of auditorium lighting were from between 0.05-0.1 foot-candle in the vicinity of the screen, to 0.2-0.5 foot-candle at the rear of the auditorium. It was further found that at these light levels, obtained approximately one-half from directed downlighting and one-half from indirect lighting sources properly located, the aisles were adequately identified and aisle lights could be reduced in power below the distraction point.

With auditorium light levels thus approximately determined (exact levels may have to be varied according to individual judgment to suit interior decorative arrangements of different reflecting powers) it is possible to apply usefully the studies of the Research Department of Eastman Kodak Company to the problem of proper gradation of admittance lighting. A thorough investigation by Eastman's Dr. Jones resulted in the following table, which (it should be noted) is based on an illumination of .04 foot-candle in the center of the auditorium, and therefore is subject to proportionate modification where the brighter lighting of Falge and Riddle is employed. In addition, obvious modification is necessary in accordance with the layout of the theatre between the street and the auditorium.

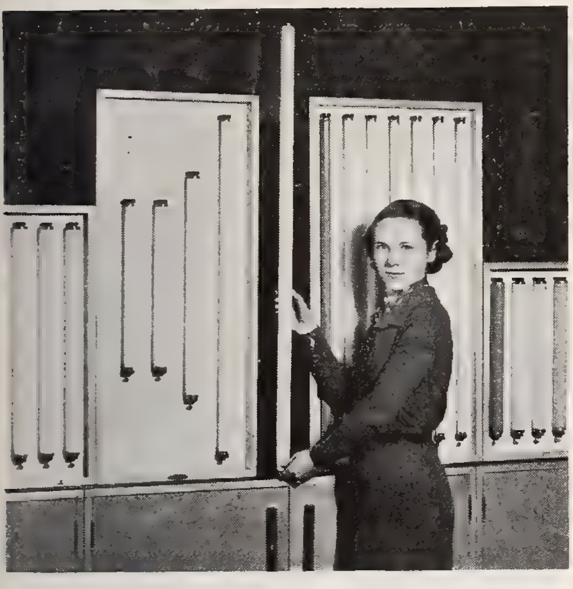
The reference to a 30-inch plane refers to the height of 30 inches above floor, at which the indicated light readings were made.

This table may be taken as a useful guide to the general nature of illumination gradient necessary to protect the eye against visual shock. It is not, of course, a universal prescription; the exact figures given are not suited to every theatre. They can profitably be used to plan a similar series of steps between the illumination level maintained in the auditorium and that of the daylight street. Thus, the reflecting power of wall and ceiling surfaces of foyer and lobby will naturally exercise an important influence on the selection of fixtures and lamps chosen to produce equivalent gradations of light along the admittance path; consequently in cases of new construction or remodeling the lighting engineer should not be called in until the architect has determined those details of his decorative scheme.



Adding a new size to the line of flourescent mazda lamps. The new length is 4 feet, 12 inches longer than the longest type previously available. The addition has just been announced by the Incandescent Lamp Department of the General Electric Company, Nela Park, Cleveland, and by Westinghouse. Despite its length, the new lamp has a diameter of only 1½ inches. It is produced in only two colors, "daylight" and "warm white." Wherever space permits or advises its use, a system of 4-foot lamps costs less to install and to operate than a similar system of shorter lamps. Such a system would require fewer auxiliaries and connections, and less wiring. The light output is 1,400 lumens, while its brightness is identical with that of the warm-white and daylight 20-watt, 24-inch lamps, of the 15-watt, 18-inch, 1½-inch-diameter lamps of similar tones. It may therefore be used in combination with the latter types.

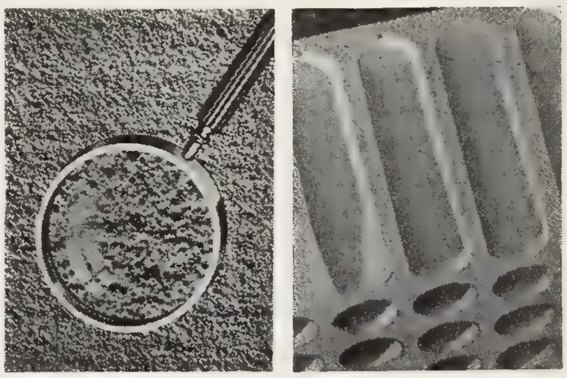
". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

HOW LATEX SPONGE IS ADAPTED TO AUDITORIUM CHAIR CUSHIONS

WHILE THEATRE operators and managers have been aware for some time of the adaptability of "rubber" cushion material to auditorium seating, few have yet had an occasion to examine it. This material is generally recognized, of course, as a development of definite interest to theatres because of certain advantages claimed for it over the established spring-and-padding cushion construction, one of which is derived from the durability of such cushions, as proved by its use in both local and transcontinental busses.

Naturally enough, this cushion material has been called rubber, thereby loosely identifying it with the material of which automobile tires and similar products are made. Actually, it is a distinctly new material, made from the milk of the rubber tree, and its designation (although trade names may vary from this) is foamed latex sponge. Its distinction from rubber, both in substance and form, is basic.

It is from its own specific characteristics, rather than from any similarity to rubber, that foamed latex sponge derives its adaptability to theatre seating. In manufacturing this material, the milk of the rubber tree is separated from the solid particles it normally contains by a centrifugal device working in somewhat the same fashion as a cream separator. This is done at the plantation. The product, known as latex, is then shipped in tankers and stored under temperature controlled conditions.



Foamed latex sponge in structure and moulded cushion formation. The left picture is an enlargement of the sponge itself, indicating its cellular characteristics; the other is of a cross-section of a cushion, showing the hollow "cores," which extend from apertures at the bottom of the cushion almost to the closed, but porous, annealed top surface.

In the manufacture of seat cushions and similar products, the latex is mixed with four accessory chemicals, suitable vulcanizing agents and accelerators, a foam-producing agent, and a gel-producing (loosely, solidifying) agent. The presence of the foaming agent, castor oil soap, permits the mixture to be whipped into a froth containing inumerable small air channels, which can be made to form a veritable "system" of air "ducts." This froth is then poured into a cold mould having a shape suited exactly to the chair in which the cushion is to be used. After about ten minutes, as a result of the presence of the gelling agent (a sodium silicofluoride dispersion) the air-foam froth sets to a permanent, rubber-like jelly which will hold its shape indefinitely.

As a chair seat or chair back, the cushion is an integral unit, which is mounted on the frame and covered directly by the upholstering fabric. The seat or back, in other words, is simply a chunk of latex with fabric stretched over it. There is no noise when the seat or back is compressed or released because the air channels extend throughout the cushion, instead of there being a large central air pocket communicating with the exterior through ventilation holes. The sponge composition is such that smoke can actually seep through its pores, indicating how the material can suck in and expel air.

The cushion can be washed with soap and water and treated with a borax rinse, which is recommended after soaping. It has no odor, and repels vermin and bacteria to the same degree that rubber does. Since its resilience does not depend on spring action, the thickness of a cushion can be reduced.

of which may remain present in soap-jelly form for many days or even weeks. A mixture of alcohol and water, while more expensive, is cheaper in the long run, for it is quite effective as a cleaning and polishing agent yet evaporates very promptly and does not harm the wires.

¶ FABRICS

Fabrics used in the theatre are of several kinds. The costlier types, used for wall hangings and other decorative purposes, should not be cleaned by porters. It is preferable to send them out to a professional cleaning establishment accustomed to handling such materials, and able and willing to accept responsibility for them. Where this is impracticable a thorough but gentle brushing is the best treatment. A brush of the broom type, with stiff bristles, should not be used. Soft bristles, as found, for example, on a paint brush, are the only safe type. A stain remover may be needed to take out exceptional spots. The one selected should always be first tested on some hidden part of the fabric, to make certain it is safe to use.

Carpets and seat upholstery are thoroughly vacuumed, and for exceptional stains may be cleaned with carbon tetrachloride. A somewhat cheaper cleaner is a mixture of equal parts of carbon tetrachloride and naptha. Soap and water shampoo should never be used on carpets or on seat upholstery in place. Drying will necessarily be very slow, with possible rotting of the cloth by bacterial action during its long exposure to moisture. Further, the soap will not all be flushed away. What remains will rapidly catch new dirt, will produce a crushed appearance in the fabric, may give rise to a rancid odor and may bring about color changes in the dyes. Soap-and-water shampoo is practicable only under professional cleaning conditions, when the fabric can be taken up and both sides exposed to air for thorough flushing out of soap and quick drying—the fabric at the same time being stretched while drying to avoid shrinkage. Carpets and upholstery that cannot be satisfactorily cleaned by thorough vacuuming, and application of volatile cleansers of the carbon tetrachloride class, are best sent to a properly equipped cleaning plant.

Modern theatres often have surfaces of special kinds, particularly those intended for sound absorption, which are too various for detailed description here. Some can be washed, some only vacuumed, some will withstand vigorous brushing and some need a soft-bristle brush, like a paint brush. Because of the wide variety of such surfaces, and the extreme delicacy of some of them under ordinary maintenance procedures, it is advisable in every case to consult the manufacturer for cleaning instructions.

Air System and Room Ozone Units

THE DEVELOPMENT of equipment for the generation and diffusion of ozone conveniently and inexpensively has provided the theatre with the most effective single means of eliminating obnoxious odors and giving the atmosphere of the auditorium, where people are seated close to each other for a considerable period of time, and of lounges and adjoining toilet rooms a fresh, clean smell. Accordingly, the use of such equipment has been increasing among theatres during the last few years, with a correspondingly less dependence on perfume sprays and urns, which merely introduce a pleasant odor without eradicating the source of unpleasant ones.

Various kinds of ozone generators have been discussed in BETTER THEATRES, as well as how ozone acts upon the immediate sources of disagreeable odors; for our purpose here it may be said that ozone is oxygen converted into a "higher" form of greater oxidizing power. All of the equipment brought out for theatres is of electrical type, converting the oxygen by discharge of electricity, and the resulting ozone oxidizes the odor-creating impurities in the air. The equipment must, of course, be of a design to do this efficiently and also to effect required dispersion of the ozone into the atmosphere. The amount of obnoxious odors likely to be present in a specific theatre varies according to seasons of the year and the performance periods of the day, hence the ozone generation equipment also must have convenient means of controlling ozone production.

A line of ozone generators which includes a variety of room units and also units for installation in connection with ventilating systems, is that of the Automatic Electrical Devices Company of Cincinnati. All of the models plug into any electric outlet. The ventilating system type (Figure 1) has the same generating characteristics as the room units, but is, of course, not decoratively encased, while dispersion is provided by the ventilating system fans.

The equipment consists in a transformer, generating units in number according to capacity, and control rheostat, with the room units having their own fans. The transformer is of high-voltage, high-reactance type, wax-impregnated against the action of moisture and of the ozone itself. This equipment does not use glass tubes, employing instead metal grids clamped between sheets of mica and assembled as a unit. All metal parts are electroplated to prevent corrosion. Each unit slips out for cleaning, which may be accomplished merely with a warm soap and water solution. Controls may be built in, as would commonly be the case with room models, or be provided in a separate unit in the wiring circuit as in the case of ventilating system installation.

The various models have capacities ranging from 100 to 4,800 milligrams of ozone per hour (100 milligrams, for example, would be sufficient for a toilet room having up to ten toilets, while the largest capacities would be suitable to auditoriums). Current consumption ranges from 8 watts for the smaller units, (Figure 3) to 80 watts.

HEATING FILTERING INSULATING

It Pays to Insulate—But Be Sure You Do It Properly

A READER recently inquired whether glass wool in the ceiling of a theatre pays. In the writer's opinion, it certainly does pay, and in big dividends. Let's first consider what it will do towards summer comfort. It is a well known fact that attic temperatures consistently average 130°. This is also true at night, for the amount of heat stored in the roof and roof supports—whether steel or wood—by the sun during the day, is tremendous. Taking a theatre having a ceiling area of, say, 40 feet by 130 feet, or a total of 5,200 square feet, if you are trying in keep the house at an 80° temperature, the difference between the attic space and the auditorium is 50°.

Now, we don't have to be experts to understand that heat flows from the warmer space to the cooler space, so the people in the theatre stand to get the benefit of the heat whether they like it or not. The amount of heat reaching your patron in the summer depends on one favorable characteristic of heat—namely, its rate of flow. This you can control if you own a cooling system.

How Heat Absorption Affects Costs

In the average or typical theatre, heat flows through each square foot of ceiling area at a rate of about 4/10ths of a BTU (a specific unit of heat) per hour per degree of temperature difference. Now in our example, we have 5,200 square feet of ceiling, and a temperature difference of 50° (the attic space being 130° minus the auditorium temperature of 80°), so we have 5,200 times 50 times 4/10, equals 104,000 units of heat per hour, the equivalent of the melting of about 700 pounds of ice in one hour—just to keep the heat from from coming through the ceiling!

If you own a refrigerating cooling system, to stop this heat costs about 75c an hour. Multiply this by the hours in your cooling season, and you find the cost is terrific, especially since you have to provide for this heat gain in the extra capacity of your cooling plant if you don't have insulation. Definitely, insulation is cheaper than cooling plant capacity.

Of course, a 50° difference doesn't hold true all over the country all the time. Such variables as North versus South, the angle of the sun's rays on the roof, the roof construction and the number of hours the sun shines, affect the above mentioned temperature difference.

Example of How Insulation Saves

You may say, "If I do insulate, what will I save?" Well, with 4 inches of glass wool in the ceiling (or any insulation having the same efficiency), the factor changes from 4/10ths of a heat-unit per hour per degree difference, to about 6/100ths. The equation then becomes 5200×50×.06, or 15,600 heat units per hour of heat gain. This requires only 110 pounds of ice to offset the heat gain, which to my mind is a big saving. Expressed in terms of operating cost of a refrigerating machine, this is about 12 cents an hour, as against 75 cents. In addition, a smaller machine will do your cooling and save in first cost.

Selection and Precautions

In selecting insulation, particularly for ceilings, weight per square foot of area is a very important item. Some theatre ceilings are poorly supported and in such cases weight means plenty. The danger and expense if the ceiling falls, hardly needs emphasis.

Insulation is sold by the ton. Sometimes a ton covers only several hundred square feet at a thickness sufficient to be of any insulating value. Glass wool is much lighter per square foot (at the same thickness) than rock wool. Bats of wool are only half as heavy as loose wool of the same thickness and insulating value.

mines the value of insulation because labor is quite an item in the total cost. Always insist, particularly in northern areas, that a vapor barrier, such as asphalt impregnated paper, be placed between the insulation and the warm side (the auditorium in the winter) to prevent the flow of vapor, otherwise the insulation is not much good in the cold season of the year.

Speaking of winter, it goes without saying that insulation greatly retards the flow of heat from inside to out. It can readily be demonstrated that much coal is saved.

Investigate insulation; it pays.—Carl F. Boester, air-conditioning engineer.

New Units Ranging From 3 to 30 Tons

NEW UNITS to provide true air-conditioning, in sizes ranging from three tons cooling capacity to 30 tons, have been brought out by the Carrier Corporation of Syracuse. The new units are self-contained and have 20% greater cooling capacity than Carrier units of similar size introduced last year; they also come in a greater variety of sizes and for a greater variety of uses. For instance, two or three of the five ton units hooked together with duct work will do an adequate air-conditioning job for a small theatre.

For theatres seating 1,000 and more, but not requiring fully developed central plants, there are Carrier packaged units up to 30 tons cooling capacity. These units above 10 tons can be obtained without cabinets, yet are in one piece form.

The self-contained line is equipped with thermostatic control designed to regulate temperature within 3°. These units can be hooked up to any type of motor.

The Contamination of Lubricants

• Water, impurities, acid readily get into oil. Here are ways of detecting their presence and avoiding their possible damaging effects

THE IMPORTANCE of lubrication to expensive and delicate machinery is sufficiently recognized, and few managers or projectionists are so short-sighted as to use dubious oils in projector mechanisms or generator bearings. The fact that the best of lubricants can become contaminated in the projection room itself is often overlooked, yet the resultant damage is no less serious. First-rate lubricants may acquire either physical or chemical impurities, in the container, in the oil can, or in actual use.

One of the impurities that does the most serious damage is plain water. This particular form of contamination, although it may occur anywhere, is especially dangerous in air-conditioned theatres, where the water is water of condensation.

How Water Gets In

When masses of warm and cold air meet, the result is rain. The warm air, being chilled, is no longer capable of retaining its previous quantity of moisture. The water precipitates out. Sudden reduction of the temperature of any room may cause minute or microscopic traces of dampness to appear on the walls and other interior objects. This will happen in an air-conditioned theatre when the conditioning system is brought into operation after a warm night. It is not noticed because the conditioned air has been dehumidified as well as chilled, and in that condition is capable of re-evaporating promptly the traces of moisture that condense when the first cold masses meet the warm standing air.

However, when an oil-can is chilled, the condensed moisture sinks to the bottom of the can. Oil is lighter than water, and will always be found on top. The water at the bottom of the oil can is not re-evaporated because it is no longer in contact with the air.

In the course of some days the oil can may accumulate a substantial underlying layer of water; when the can is tipped upside down and shaken in the course of using it, the water enters the bearings. There it not only impairs the lubrication, but produces positive rust. One manufacturer has found intermittent movements returned as unsatisfactory seriously rusted as a result of this condition.

Nevertheless, the projectionist, looking into his oil can (if he takes that trouble) sees nothing wrong. He sees the top layer of oil. The water is below, out of sight.

There is a very simple test the projectionist can apply. That is, before using the oil can, shake it, and squirt a few drops of oil on any convenient non-absorptive surface, such as metal or glass. If separate drops of liquid appear, and insist on separating again when forcibly mixed, there is certainly water in the oil. The oil can should be emptied, rubbed dry inside, and refilled.

The last traces of lubricant in any container should never be used, for the same reason. There may be a layer of water at the bottom. To avoid waste of lubricant, the container should always be kept tightly closed. In that way, the quantity of water that can condense in it in the course of time, is minimized. The remains of lubricant at the bottom of a nearly empty container can be tested in the way just indicated; through shaking, followed by squirting a few drops on a flat surface, and watching for separation.

Precaution Against Acid

The oil can itself sometimes contributes a second form of contamination. This is acid. A new oil can of the cheaper kind, carelessly soldered, may retain traces of the acid soldering flux. Very serious corrosion, particularly in projector mechanisms where the accuracy of dimensions is so important, will follow the introduction of acid lubricant. Cheap oil cans that have not been soldered may also be guilty, if they are copper-plated iron. The copper is often applied in the form of its sulphate, and traces of sulphuric acid result from the plating process. This acid does not evaporate, but will remain indefinitely to contaminate the lubricant. A practical precaution against acid is to rinse a new oil can with a little ammonia water, allowing the water to evaporate before oil is introduced.

Contamination of lubricants in actual use is generally physical, consisting of particles of metal worn away by friction and embedded in the oil—this mixture is an excellent abrasive. It must be flushed out periodically and replaced with clean oil, unless the mechanical arrangements make that process automatic. A double precaution is necessary in connection with this job; the removal of old oil should be thorough, but if a thinner is used, such as kerosene, the newly applied lubricant may be diluted and rendered inefficient. Choice of the best thinner, and best method of applying it, depends largely on the physical nature and arrangement of the surfaces to be lubricated.

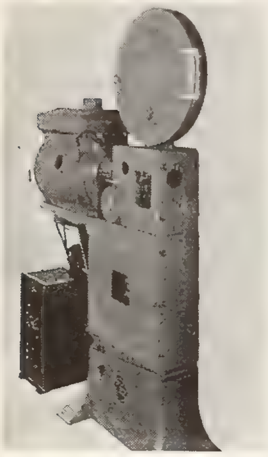
Sprockets Can Be Reversed in New Model Projector

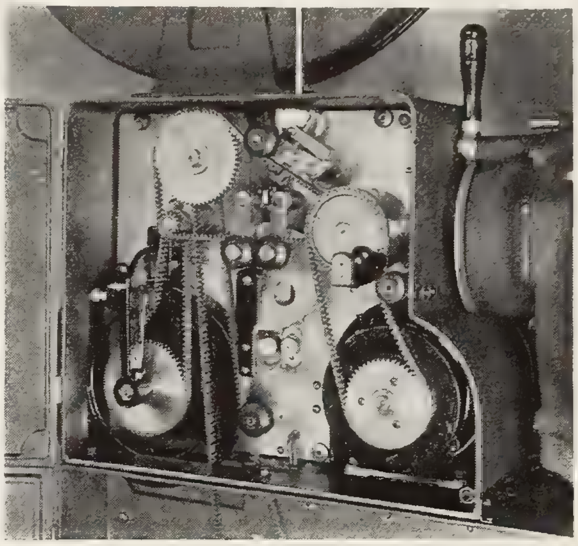
FILM GUIDE rails and sprockets that can be reversed to offset the effects of wear, thus increasing their useful life, are among the mechanical innovations of the new "Super" model theatre projector for heavy duty 35-mm. operation that has been brought out by Herman A. DeVry, Inc., of Chicago. Reversing those parts distributes the effect of wear more evenly over their surfaces, according to the designer, making it possible to retain them in use long after they would otherwise have to be replaced.



The DeVry "Super" type 35-mm. projector with soundhead, arc lamp, 2,000-foot magazine.

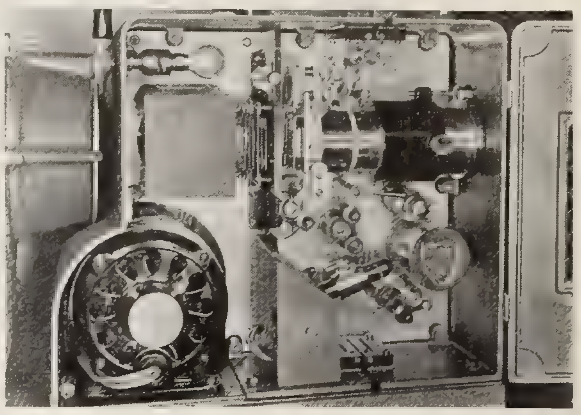
This feature is one of a number that have been added to the basic, chain-drive construction of the DeVry "Standard" model theatre projector to produce the new mechanism. The fundamental noiseless chain drive system, incorporating chain tension adjusters, has been made heavier. A new, heavier drive motor is used, having a 1/6-h.p. rating, as against the 1/10-h.p. motor of the "Standard" unit.

In the new projector, the film aperture plate is of one-piece construction and removable. The film gate release is of trigger type. Cooling baffles have been added for protection of the film. The new anti-side sway guides are automatic in action, as is the new sound adjustment roller by which the exciting light beam and sound track are kept in alignment.



Motor, stabilizer, and heavier chain drive system of the new DeVry 35-mm. projector for permanent installation.

Exciter lamps are of the heavy duty 9-volt 4-ampere type, normally supplied through a transformer, but with rectifier supply optional at additional cost. Sound lens system is Bausch and Lomb high fidelity, designed for sound tracks of all modern types.



Operating side of the DeVry mechanism showing the new film gate, which has been made removable.

Other new features include an adjustment screw provision for setting film shoe tension to suit the thickness of the film being used, external lens focusing control and 2,000-foot magazines.

The "Super" theatre projector is available with either high or low intensity lamp house, and with either copper oxide or tube type arc supply rectifier. It is modernly styled, and finished in attractive gray. Sound facilities are not included except in that projector mechanism and sound head constitute a single integrated unit, as in the DeVry "Standard" model, but complete DeVry sound systems, including multicellular horns, and adapted to theatres of every size, are available in models matched to the new "Super" projector.

New 30-Ampere Bulb Rectifier

A NEW 30-ampere projection arc supply rectifier has been added to the Rect-O-Lite line of the Baldor Electric Company of St. Louis. The new unit utilizes two 15-ampere rectifier bulbs and a single-phase transformer tapped for adaptation to minor differences in line voltage.

The new 30-ampere rectifier (right) compared with the Baldor 60M.

It is obtainable in both 110- and 220-volt models. A feature of the new rectifier is the small amount of floor space it requires, 10½ x 14 inches. A control knob provides for variation of the output current between the limits of 15 and 30 amperes at 50-55 volts d.c. The new unit is known as Rect-O-Lite Type 30S.

Precision Is Watchword in Music Hall Projection

"THE MANAGEMENT gives me anything in reason that I want," explained Charles Muller, "and they're not interested in excuses." It is Charles Muller's business to see that there is no reason for excuses concerning projection at Radio City Music Hall in New York. He is supervisor of projection. He conducted the writer in a "tour" of his projection plant, in which a few changes recently have been made.

Like everything else connected with this immense theatrical establishment, the projection facilities are characterized by "extras." For example, there are four sound channels. Two of these are the "regular" and "emergency" amplifiers common to many theatres, but if both should fail, it is possible to "patch over" instantly to the p.a. system located elsewhere in the theatre, which has double amplifying channels of its own. There are four projectors wired for sound.

The projection room itself is a place where one may almost literally "eat off the floor." It is immaculate. Projectors and lamphouses are kept like fire engines; their interiors look factory-new. The projection crew is uniformed because visitors are allowed to see what makes the wheels go round in the course of a guided tour through Radio City. In addition to the projection premises proper, the suite includes a spotlight room, rewind room, rheostat room, office, and locker room. The last-named is fitted with an individual locker for each member of the staff. The adjoining toilet boasts a shower.

The crew reports an hour before show time each morning, to test out, to clean, and to furbish every part of their equipment. There are three men to a shift, working six hours a day, four days a week. Rehearsals for a change of show begin at 6 a.m.

Prints are changed weekly, regardless of whether the show is held over or not. No print is run in the theatre until after Muller has personally watched every foot of it in an upstairs preview room. One scratch is sufficient cause for rejection of a print. A duplicate print, similarly inspected, is kept on hand.

Replacement parts are installed at the first signs of wear. There is no effort to "make things do" a little longer. Similarly, the Music Hall projection room is one place that never undergoes throes of "modernization." It is kept up to the minute by prompt adoption of every worthwhile improvement in the art. However, no new development is taken on trust. For example, Music Hall's first E-7 projector was installed and operated for six weeks under careful observation. After that, two other E-7's were installed.

The reason why the fourth pedestal still carries a Super-Simplex is also illuminating. That projector is equipped for Magnascope. However, just in case the wide screen curtains should ever fail to open properly, there is a turret lens arrangement by which the projectionist can swing over instantly to standard screen size, if occasion requires. Magnascope is available with the new E-7 projector, but the turret lens arrangement, as yet, is not; the fourth pedestal will be re-equipped when the turret provision is ready.

The projection room crew comprises Ray Hill, Irving Bloom, Anthony DeMott, Isidore R. Cohn, William Jackson, August Brower, Joseph Kleinman, John Tillman, Northrup Northington and Victor Savage. The preview projection room is manned by Arthur J. Smith, Walter Smith and Robert Hart. They also are under Charles Muller's supervision.

Sound reinforcement, as distinct from the screen sound, involves a separate department, headed by Harry Braun, with George Costello and Lew Hartman as assistants. The arc supply motor generators are under the supervision of the electrical department, headed by Gene Braun. —Aaron Nadell.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

AVOIDABLE WASTE DUE TO LACK OF KNOWLEDGE OR CARELESSNESS

BEFORE ME lies a communication asking about a matter that might incur at most a loss amounting to a few cents a week. This gives rise to the thought that it would serve good and useful purpose to set forth, for consideration by theatre managers and projectionists, some sources of waste present in greater or less degree in practically all theatres.

First of all, consider the light source and light collector, lens or mirror. If the latter, is the distance from crater floor to its surface precisely what it should be? If not, there will be loss in both light and effect at the screen. If it be a lens, then the loss of light will be considerable if there is excessive distance between crater floor and face of the collector lens. Has the projectionist thoroughly examined and analyzed all conditions from light source to the screen and made such adjustments as may be required for maximum utilization of the current pulled?

There is the spot at the cooling plate. How accurately is the spot diameter reduced to the minimum compatible with maximum results at the screen? There are many possibilities for waste in light by excessive diameter. A spot of light on the cooling plate 2.77 inches in diameter (not uncommon) wastes 87% of the available light—that is to say, the aperture area is equal only to 13% of the spot area.

The center of the spot is, of course, much brighter than its edges, but that is deceiving. Many a projectionist is led to use an excessive spot because it requires less attention in getting a clear image. But this can easily be overdone, and often is—then you have unnecessary waste.

There is the motor-generator set, among other things. I have known lack of care and expert adjustments to result in a waste of as much as 15% of the input power.

And when it comes to screens, losses are often tolerated that make one wonder! Exhibitors frequently keep screens in use long, long after their period of efficient service has passed; in fact, in some cases they keep them when the loss in reflection reaches more than 50% of the original reflection factor. The period of efficiency in screen surfaces varies widely in different locations. In isolated mountain regions, where the air is very clean and pure, it may be many months, though rarely one full year; while in large manufacturing localities the dirt in the air take their toll noticeably in just a few months. And don't imagine that reduction in screen reflection value is not an expense. Not only does it waste electric power, but it is an insidious enemy of the box office.

Such losses are of the "hidden" variety. They may be detected by careful tests and the application of competent knowledge. On the other hand, managers may readily check up on comparatively trivial wastes—carbons, for example. Such managers will raise the devil over some relatively small waste that is obvious to them, but amounts to only a few cents a day or week, yet wholly disregard wastes totaling many, many times that amount in other things which are revealed only by intelligent search and competent understanding of the equipment.

GOOD DEFINITIONS OF PITCH AND INTENSITY

J. L. CROOSLEY of San Francisco, inquires: "The terms pitch and intensity as applied to sound are often used. Can you explain what, if any, difference there is between the two?"

A well-worded answer to this is found in the official bulletin of the Acoustical Materials Association (March, 1938, issue). I quote:

"Sound originates at any body that is in a state of vibration and travels in compressional waves in the air at about 1,120 feet per second. The pitch of a sound depends upon the frequency of vibration of the sounding body. The frequency range of audible sounds is from 20 to 20,000 vibrations per second, although the range of ordinary sounds is much smaller. Doubling the frequency of a musical sound raises the pitch by one octave.

"The above are frequencies of the fundamental tones of instruments and voices. It should be remembered that much of the energy of sounds of both musical instruments and voices is in overtones, which have much higher frequencies than those of the fundamental.

"Intensity: The physical intensity of a sound is the vibrational energy transmitted per second through a unit cross section of the sound wave. The ear records differences of frequency as differences in pitch. It registers differences in intensity as differences in loudness. The range of intensities to which the ear responds is enormous. A painfully loud sound at about 1,000 cycles has some 2,500,000,000,000 (two and one-half trillions) [times] the physical intensity [loudness] of a barely audible sound of the same pitch."

AMOUNT OF BRUSH PRESSURE; TESTING IT

J. L. MANDRAKE of Ft. Worth, Texas, asks: "Will you please advise what pressure a brush should have on the commutator of a dynamo, and how one may determine that pressure exactly?"

Brushes should exert between 1.25 and 1.50 pounds per square inch of surface.

The most simple, reliable method of determining the pressure is to obtain a small postal scale, have it tested for accuracy by weighing some object upon it and upon some other scale of known accuracy, attach to its "pan" a loop of coarse thread, and to that loop a suitable hook of fine but stiff wire, then hook the wire under the brush holder and pull out on a line with the brush until the brush just loses contact with the commutator.

Next, carefully compute the area of contact of both brushes (I assume the brush holder contains two brushes), and make such adjustments as will cause the proper pressure, per the formula given above, to be exerted.

If you have a sixth edition of the Bluebook of Projection, turn to page 312 for ways to measure brush pressure by use of a rubber band.

THE SLANTING OF GLASS PORT COVERS

FROM ALABAMA comes this letter, with the request that I do not divulge either the name or the location of the writer:

"Not long ago I fell heir to the joys, griefs and troubles of the projection room of a new theatre opened here. Coloring the walls, equipment location and lighting of the room was left to my discretion. The front wall is black, side and rear walls green, floor dark and ceiling white—the latter for indirect lighting.

"However, a dispute has arisen. Our service man, an old hand at servicing, insists that the bottom of the observation port cover glass be set inward instead of outward. He would not listen to my proposal that it be set so that the glass would slant outward, therefore I am asking your opinion on this matter."

With observation port cover glasses set in such manner as the sound man insists upon, the projection room lighting would be reflected into the projectionist's eyes, thus compelling him almost to rub his nose on the glass to obtain a good view of the screen image, whereas if angled the other way, the light would be reflected downward to the floor. It need not be angled much, possibly not at all, depending on the local conditions.

The best method is to leave cover glass installation until the very last thing, then obtain a pane of ordinary window glass to fit the port opening loosely. Make two wooden wedges and locate the glass in one of the ports by means of the wedges, light the projection room and theatre as for projection and change the angle of the glass until the best effect is achieved. Mark the angle on the port walls and repeat for the second port, since the effect there may be somewhat different. Then install the cover glasses.

PROPER TREATMENT OF SOUND TRACK SPLICES

FROM Allen Johnson, general manager of B. T. Theatres, Inc., Grand Rapids, Mich., comes a letter saying, "Please examine inclosed samples of film splices, particularly as regards the thin paper patches affixed to the sound track. We have been using them in our theatres. Can you see anything fundamentally wrong with the idea? They are less expensive than the black lacquer."

The patch consists of a triangular bit of very thin paper attached over the sound track by an adhesive. It is of the same form as the black lacquer coating would be and serves exactly the same purpose; moreover, it seems to serve it just as well, although of the three samples submitted, one was loose at one end. Maybe that is the answer.

While lacquer may be a bit more expensive than such patches, it is dependable. It "Stays put," whereas paper patches do not always do so. And the patch that comes off in all probability is not missed until its absence works harm to the sound in some other theatre.

HOW TO DETECT HIGH FREQUENCY LOSS

G. R. HESS of St. Paul, Minn., asks, "I believe we are not getting good response insofar as concerns the high frequencies. Will you tell us how we may test this matter in some practical manner and without special, costly equipment? The sound seems just a little 'dead.' I think high-frequency loss is the answer."

There is a very practical way in which high-frequency loss may be readily detected. During normal projection, have the ushers (if any) or some two or three others having normal hearing, listen carefully for "s," "sh," "f" and "ch" sounds. If these sounds come through clear and distinct, the high frequencies are all right. If they are weak or wholly missing, high-frequency response is deficient.

AN UNBEATABLE PROJECTION COMBINATION

When you want the finest image quality available, choose the Super-Cinephor lens and condenser combination.

The Super-Cinephor anastigmatic lens with its reserve covering power, superb color correction, and maximum definition, and the Super-Cinephor condensers which effect more than 50 per cent greater illumination will give your pictures the image quality your patrons like to see.

Only one more patron a day will pay for a Super-Cinephor in a year. For complete details on these lenses, condensers and reflectors, write to Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 679 St. Paul St., Rochester, N. Y.

THE WELL PLANNED STAGE

1. GENERAL PLAN OF STAGE AREA

● Minimum mechanical lighting and set provisions for occasional stage shows were discussed in a series of articles in Better Theatres last year. This is the first article in a series dealing comprehensively with the efficient planning, safe construction, modern rigging, draping, etc., of the motion picture theatre stage for all program purposes

By C. E. TOMPKINS

REALISM—the object most sought in theatrical productions—has through the development of practical stage equipment, been made attainable with convenience not so long ago regarded as impossible. Today we possess the special requirements adequate and adapted to all recognized demands of stage performances in motion picture theatres, yet the stage provisions even in motion picture theatres regularly using them (and the number of such theatres is increasing) are often planned in a careless and ill-advised manner that fails to assure the necessary ease of operation, flexibility and safety, and the smoothness and quietness required to give really theatrical effect and punch to the performance.

Contemplation of a new theatre, be it large or small, should suggest consideration of the needs for a stage, immediately or in future, for regular or occasional reinforcement of the screen program. To provide a practical stage, one must plan it carefully and early in the designing of the theatre. This is especially necessary where economy is an important factor, for by careful and proper planning, an efficient, modern stage can be produced within the limits of any reasonable budget. By this method it is also possible to equip a stage partially in a manner to permit its immediate use and add the remaining equipment from time to time as necessity requires and finances permit.

Since most theatres are built in business districts and are surrounded by other buildings, it is obvious that the stage, and in fact the entire theatre, must be designed to fit into the available space—not always an easy thing to do. Triangular and irregularly shaped building lots, lack of accessibility, and many other things serve to present perplexing problems to architects (it is really amazing how cleverly they get around these problems), and the stage must always be designed in relation to the rest of the theatre.

It must be accessible from the rear or side to permit the loading and unloading of scenery, be provided with suitable entrances and exits, and comply with the Board of Underwriters' and local fire and safety regulations. Since it may be called upon at any time to support heavy loads, the question of foundation is of great importance, and like the numerous other features of construction, should be entrusted to a competent architect.

Proscenium Opening

Probably few things have a greater bearing on proper design for stage performances than the relationship of the proscenium opening to both the stage and the auditorium, and in determining the width and height of the opening due consideration must be given to both.

There is always a tendency to allot more width to the opening than the stage can well stand, with the result that the stage is short of wing space, making it inconvenient and many times impossible to handle scenery and carry on the usual backstage activities, and wherever at all possible wing space not less than 15 feet wide would be provided in both wings—greater width if convenient.

This is especially desirable on the rigging or prompt side, in order that the switchboard may be panelled into the proscenium wall, and still leave sufficient space for the asbestos curtain hoist and smoke pocket, both of which must be fastened to the proscenium wall close to the arch.

The height of the proscenium opening is naturally governed by the height of the balconies or galleries and the angle of projection where pictures are to be shown. After a suitable valance, or draperies, has been hung, giving the arch the desired effect, the opening should be high enough to permit projection on the screen placed not less than five nor more than eight feet backstage from the proscenium opening.

The Stage Floor

The floor of most stages projects forward through the proscenium opening to permit extreme front stage appearances and to house the footlights. This space, extending from the footlights back to the line of the tormentors 5 or 6 feet, is known as the apron, and since the apron is generally used for dancing, the floor should be of maple or other hardwood flooring with the boards laid up and downstage.

The floor upstage or back of the apron and extending to the rear wall may be made of soft wood, although hardwood makes a much better floor. This flooring should be laid across stage.

The floor in the wings should be of soft wood, since it is often necessary to use stage screws or floor pegs which can be put into the soft wood easily and without splitting the floor, which is not possible with a hardwood floor.

Wall Provisions

The back, or stage side, of the proscenium wall should be square-faced and free from all projections to permit proper installation of the asbestos curtain rigging and smoke pockets. In many cities the underwriters demand that the asbestos curtain rigging, head block and loft blocks be fastened to the proscenium wall independently of the gridiron. This can be accomplished economically if, when building the wall, short pieces of channel irons are laid into the wall to receive the blocks. If the wall has to be drilled for brackets after completion, the cost of installation will be increased many times.

The loft blocks for the valance may also be placed on these supports, but the valance head block may, if desired, be placed on the regular lead block grid. The rigging or prompt side wall should, if possible, be free from doors or windows to permit the installation of counterweight rigging, and the head block grid, or "I" beams, should be placed so that the counterweight carriages will hang plumb and clear the side wall by not less than 2 inches or more than 3 inches—in other words, the rigging should hang as near as possible to the side wall to conserve space.

glass covering a box containing red, white and blue lights controlled by dimmers. The aisles or promenades along the walls are lighted by small fixtures under the balustrade.

The ceiling is of blue cloth bearing the signs of the Zodiac, reproduced in exact position as they are in the heavens. These signs are reproduced by a cut-out 3-16-inch thick and are painted with fluorescent paint; Stroblite ultra-violet light sources are trained on them, giving them glowing visibility in the semi-darkness of the auditorium.

The stage is 100 feet wide and 30 feet deep. On one side are five dressing rooms, eight more on a second level. Directly under this part are the heating units for the entire building. There also is a large dressing room for a chorus. The proscenium opening is 36 by 24 feet. The grand drapery is in blue velour with gold trim. The inner drop is coral, the picture drop old rose, and another drop is in light blue. Clancy rigging and mechanical equipment is complete for full-sized stage productions.

Continuing up the balustrade and beyond paintings of cypress trees, one sees a mural representing Eros and Psyche under a two-column grape arbor. Above this is a painting of Apollo riding his chariot in the clouds. Beyond more cypress trees is a replica of the Thesion, one of the three most perfect surviving temples of Athens, with its six columns and figures under the cornice authentically shown. Next comes a mural of Bacchus and the nymphs, and a chariot teamed with leopards, while beyond this a small ornamental monument.

Looking toward stage right, but along the left wall from the auditorium proper, one sees at the left just above the start of the stairway a replica of the Temple of the Winds. Up twelve steps from the stage and 20 feet along and to 14 more rises of stairs, there is a painting of Latona with the infants Diana and Apollo sitting on a couch under a two-columned grape arbor. Above is another mural of Psyche Approaching Zeus. Beyond more cypress trees, which form the background and intersperse the scenes, is a replica of the Parthenon with its bronze doors and famous frieze. Beyond this is a mural of Bellerophon.

Although the building will contain, when completed, many apartments, a fine restaurant, and a dine-and-dance establishment, the outstanding feature of the development is the Latchis Memorial theatre, which offers the finest available motion picture entertainment amid sincere renditions of Classic art.—Henry Davis Nadig, staff reporter, Keene (N. H.) Evening Sentinel.

Theatre PLAN & FORM

IN THIS COLUMN in the March issue the desirability of first row vision was discussed. In the construction of the motion picture theatre there is no additional cost involved in obtaining first row vision rather than second row vision; however, greater care in the design of the seating arrangements and floor slopes is necessary.

Heretofore, theatre designers have arrived at sightlines on the basis of the degree and characteristic of the floor slope only, whereas scientific sightline planning now takes into consideration, additionally, the relative vertical position of the screen in reference to all seating levels, the position of each seat on the floor in relation to the position of the heads immediately in front of the viewer, and the vertical position of the screen. In other words, instead of one factor coming into play, we now have three factors to be taken into consideration.

The result of obtaining clearances by being able to adjust the seat positions, and the vertical screen position, is that less slope of floor becomes necessary.

By now you have heard of the stagger system, and the "reverse" floor slope system, and of course you know about the old conventional floor slope with the non-stagger seating, and I should imagine that any person at this time who is building a theatre might easily be confused as to what sightline system or combination of systems he would resort to. To make a proper selection, you must realize, first, that floor slopes can be considered a necessary evil, because they increase cubic construction cost, create hazardous aisle slopes, create steppings and sharp ramps from aisle to seat levels, cause abnormal foot rest positions on sharply downward sloped floors, and among other disadvantages, cause balcony seating to occur at too high a level and to be pitched at what is very nearly an impracticably steep slope.

It is therefore obvious that, theoretically, a flat floor is desirable. Actually a flat floor is sometimes a practical possibility where the seating depth of rows is controlled. If a flat floor is not possible, as is the case in most instances, it is desirable then to develop a floor which is as close to a flat floor as possible. Both the reverse floor and the stagger system make the floors which approach the advantages of the flat floor.

In later columns I will try to show which systems are advisable in specific instances.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Simple Ways of Doing A Good Job Better

ONE of the questions received recently which may be of general interest was accompanied by a sketch of the proposed theatre having general constructional specifications which may be outlined as follows:

> The dimensions of the auditorium proper will be: length, 84 feet, width, 25 feet; average height, 24 feet. A total of 670 seats will be provided on the main floor, and 216 on an upper level. Each floor will have two aisles, with fifteen seats in the center bank and six on each side, measuring 36 inches between centers of seats. The first floor is to have twenty-five rows and the upper level eight rows. All chairs will be upholstered with leatherette-covered seats and cloth-covered padded backs. It is proposed to finish the wall surfaces with a 1½-inch fibre board, and the ceiling with a ¾-inch fibre board.

The basic proportions and seating arrangements proposed are generally satisfactory, both visually and acoustically. Several conditions come to our attention, however, which are in need of correction. One is the slope of the orchestra floor, and the height of the risers of the seating platforms within the upper level of seating, which do not provide for first-row vision. This presents an undesirable condition which has been discussed in these columns. The sketch also shows that the rate of slope for the main floor changes approximately every five rows, whereas for proper sightline clearances giving the benefit of front-row vision the rate of slope should change for every row.

From an acoustical standpoint the form of the main rear wall is undesirable in that it presents a curved surface. The curvature should be corrected, as has been pointed out in these columns. In consideration of the fact that the basic proportions are desirable, and that the relationship of the cubic foot volume to seating is favorable, the interior form could be further developed to improve acoustical conditions. However, on the basis of the proposed plan for the interior, a moderate absorbent in the form of a ½-inch acoustical wood fibre board would be required for the side walls, and a more efficient material, such as acoustical tile, for the rear walls. Since the ceiling should be non-absorptive, the Celotex board, if used for this surface, should be oil painted.—B. S. and C.C.P.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

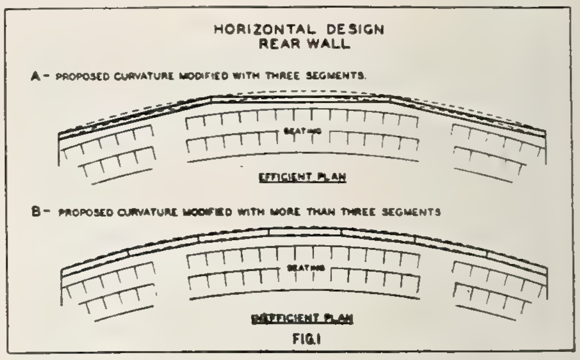
by
C. C. POTWIN

Consultant in Acoustics

IN NEW THEATRES where curved seating banks are to be used, any one of several methods of acoustical design may be employed to eliminate or at least modify a possible curvature in the horizontal form of the rear wall.

One very favorable and yet comparatively simple approach is to divide the rear wall into three planes or segments as shown in Figure 1A. It is possible, within certain limits to vary the width dimensions of these three segments, although it is usually desirable architecturally to keep them as nearly uniform as practicable in order to avoid too wide a variation in form with respect to the auditorium seating plan.



HORIZONTAL DESIGN

B – PROPOSED CURVATURE MODIFIED WITH MORE THAN THREE SEGMENTS

FIG.1

Assuming for the average case that the overall width of the rear wall will be at least equal to, or greater than, 30 feet, each one of the three plane segments will be of sufficient width to eliminate the effect of the sound concentration which would normally be encountered if the true curvature indicated by the broken line were used. This segmental arrangement presents one of the most practical basic designs for those particular cases where simplicity of surface form is desired.

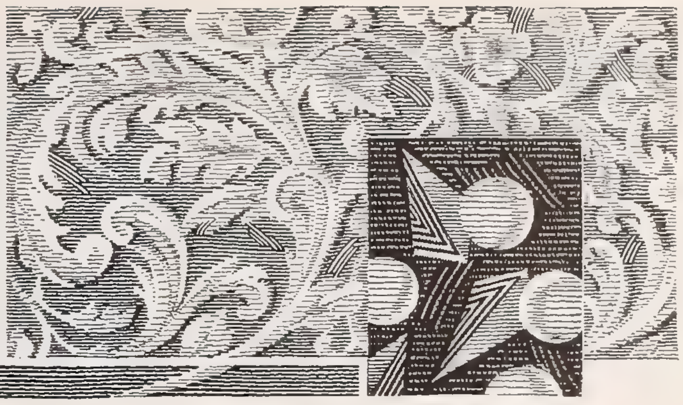
Now an obvious question arises: Why is it not possible to modify a probable curved rear wall by increasing the number of segments as shown in Figure 1B so as more nearly to simulate a curve without actually producing a curve?

The reason this cannot be done successfully is that as the number of segments is increased and the corresponding width of each segment is decreased, the sound reflected from each one of the smaller planes tends to come together to a greater extent toward the front center portion of the auditorium.

The result is usually one of producing a focusing effect somewhat lower in intensity and less highly concentrated than the one produced by the true curve, although one which may be audible over a larger portion of the forward seating area.

CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.



Going About Choosing a Pattern

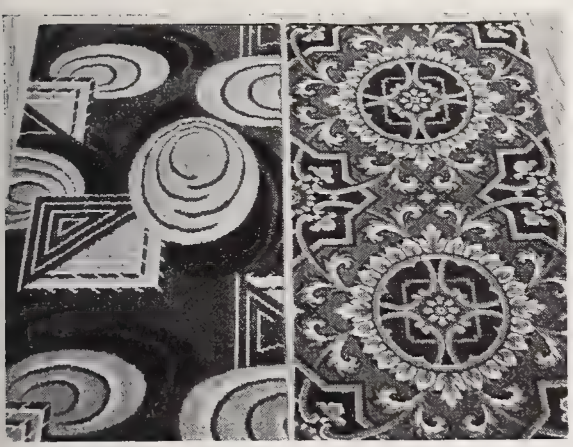
• Examining various practical approaches to the problem of pattern selection according to interior treatment and local tastes

By NORMAN PATTERSON

THERE ARE any number of methods by which a carpet pattern can be selected for the theatre. Different approaches will sometimes result in the acceptance of the same design but the greater the knowledge of the individual factors that must be taken into consideration, the greater the possibility that you will arrive at a result that is most suitable for your requirements.

You will note that the writer uses the word suitable advisedly, rather than ideal for fear that this word will be construed as meaning ideal in the aesthetic sense. The reason for this is that there are basically two methods of approach. The first method as used by modern interior decorators, holds that the item under consideration, in this instance carpeting, be selected strictly with an eye to the rest of the interior of the theatre. The floor covering serves as a background and therefore receives a secondary consideration to the elements of design on the walls and ceiling, and is therefore subservient to the indications of form and color of these surfaces, and other factors, such as decorative furniture.

In serving as this background, in the so-called secondary capacity, the carpet can and should also be a thing of beauty in itself. This principle of selection is applied in the latest moderne, or modernistic, type of theatre as well as those 30 years old that are achitecturally and artistically correct in the treatment of their interiors. Contrary to popular belief, this principle, in competent hands, is simple because every line of moulding, every bit of figuring, and every piece of furniture serve as positive reference as to what the design and colors of the carpeting shall be.



The left hand reproduction is of a modern abstract design, vigorous, possessed of "movement," well adapted to spacious foyers. The right hand pattern is of traditional style, but not definitely enough to be unadapted to the more conservative modern interiors. Both patterns by Alexander Smith.

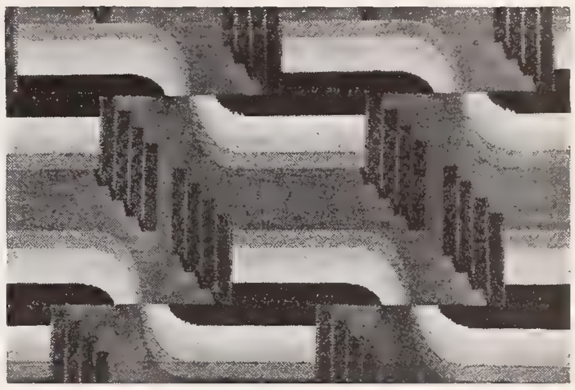
Carpeting as a Major Element of Decoration

The second basic method of selection consists of having the carpet appear not merely as a background, but as a major decoration in itself without being totally dependent on the walls and ceiling of the house. This procedure is applied to the type of theatre in which the original interior decoration has been destroyed through constant remodelings and repaintings and there is no longer any basis for guidance in design. Inasmuch as a majority of houses in use today fall into this classification we will confine ourselves to this second basis.

In all instances, the carpet, under the above conditions, should be given primary consideration, but this should not exclude possibility of the carpet serving its theoretically true purpose as a background.



The pattern is representative of recent trends in modern interpretive abstract design—well suited to lend a modern effect to an existing theatre not being generally restyled. Below is a traditional pattern worked out in arabesques—a source of elegance that combines well with conservative modern as well as traditional interior treatments. Both patterns by Mohawk.

Selection According to Community Tastes

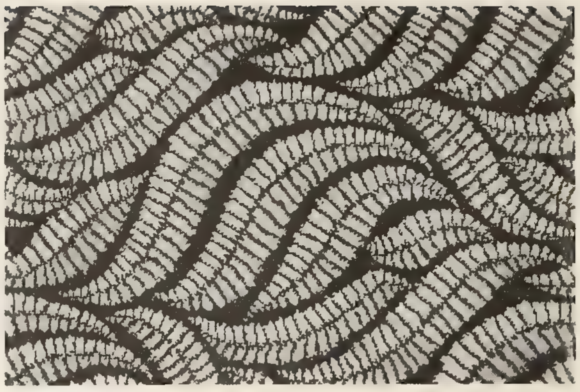
Good showmanship implies maximum pleasing effect and not extremes in the use of vivid colors or startling configurations in the design. The pleasing effect should, in a large measure, be determined by those whom we are aiming to please and not by the theatre owner. Good booking judgment does not imply a flair for decorating in accordance with the aggregate taste of the community or neighborhood in which the house is located. The supplier of carpeting must, however, rely on the personal judgment of the theatre operator, for after all there is really no one as conversant with the actual situation as he is. Respecting his right to make his own selections, the owner would be wise to seek advice in determining the proper choice. He should consult public taste, directly where possible, and at any rate in the choices the public makes in its own decoration interests. Constant competition from new or remodeled houses, and the all too true fact that the theatre-going public's taste may have progressed to a point far out of proportion to the modest income and cultural levels that may apparently characterize the district in which the theatre is located, force a selection on a level that is seemingly much higher than that indicated by the community.

The women in the neighborhood quickly recognize both the latest modes and good taste and the reaction at the box office is in no small sense determined by your consideration of these fundamentals. The carpet manufacturers have spent millions of dollars in catering to Mrs. America's tastes and they will be glad to pass on to you many helpful hints and suggestions that will enable you to cash in on the groundwork they have laid.

Shrewd judgment in selection will overcome many problems that you will have to face when you decide to spruce up your lobby, lounge, foyer or promenade. There will be less trouble in effecting a harmonious whole and even after a few years of use your carpet will at least be in good taste and therefore contemporary whereas an outmoded novelty design or indiscriminately chosen pattern will not, under most circumstances prove adaptable to renovations in a style that will be in the mode or acceptable at that time in the future.

The Case of the Lighter Colors

The theatre field has shown a preference for carpets with dark backgrounds and light top colors to bring out the design. This is primarily due to dirt from heavy traffic conditions and the need to combat this with a dark color base. The light colors lend the life, warmth and attractiveness necessary under the peculiar lighting arrangements of the motion picture theatre. The light and dark colors together tend to break up the effect caused by dirt tracks and pile crushing through heavy traffic. However, if a light background carpeting or a solid color broadloom is what you need to really dress up your theatre, please remember that you are in the show business first and the greater resultant decorative effect will more than offset, at the box office, the increase in wear depreciation occasioned by the more frequent cleanings and subsequent additional maintenance costs.



Above, a leaf pattern of modern feeling adaptable to any modern or classic-modern interior treatment. Below is a classical design which has a directional effect—particularly effective in intimate theatres and the narrower passages. Both patterns by Bigelow-Sanford.

Color selection is most effective under lighting conditions that approximate the interior of your theatre. A choice made away from the actual scene of installation, especially in daylight, has often resulted in an appearance so different from that which was originally intended that the exhibitor has often expressed doubt that the particular carpet furnished was the selection he originally made.

It is not good practice to try and overcome the effect of overpatterning on the walls and ceiling by choosing a design that will be so strong that attention will be called to the flooring fabric. A violent design will only intensify the clash and the net result will be still more confusion. Minimize the carpet pattern to such a degree that by virtue of its quietness and smplicity the eyes find the carpeted floor a relief and escape from the jarring appearance of the other surfaces.

Effect of the Size Of Pattern Figures

Small figures are best in small areas or where the effect of roominess is desired. Low ceilings on mezzanines are heightened in effect by the use of smaller patterns and intimacy is achieved in the lounge areas and the furniture stands out to better advantage.

Large patterns are only relatively large. In an enormous foyer, the barnlike effect is minimized by the use of bigger figures. A large area with little wall and ceiling decoration is effectively broken up by the use of bold patterns that are not sweeping in arrangement. These problems can only be properly determined by examination of the actual premises and your carpet supplier or architect with his fresh point of view to the surroundings can often offer suggestions that will renew the present satisfactory style of decoration or add a note that is so stimulating and different that the house presents a new appearance in a style and tone which belie the fact that only the flooring surface was altered.

[The author has had considerable experience in the floor covering problems of theatres and similar buildings. He will contribute further articles to this series on carpeting.]

THE 10 BEST PICTURES OF 1939!

A Prediction by Leo of M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents ROBERT DONAT in "GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS" with GREER GARSON. A Sam Wood production. Screen Play by R. C. Sherriff, Claudine West, Eric Maschwitz. From the book by James Hilton. Produced by Victor Saville.

I saw "GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS".

I saw a picture which is assured of a top spot among this year's Ten Best.

I saw Robert Donat's performance as "Mr. Chips", destined to be a leading contender for this year's Academy Award.

I saw a new star born to the box-offices of the world, Miss Greer Garson, whose beauty shines from the screen with tenderness and truth, stirring hearts that seek your theatre for emotional thrill.

I saw an entertainment that will take its place among the immortal works of the screen, a picture for humanity's masses, to be beloved by people in every walk of life, to be played with sensational success now and to be revived in years to come.

I am proud of "GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS" for it is typical of the attractions which have made M-G-M a symbol to picture-goers of the finest in films.

Picked for 1939's new female star sensation, Miss Greer Garson as Katherine in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Picked for 1939's Best Male Performance Award, Robert Donat as "Mr. Chips."

Vol. 135, No. 1 April 8, 1939

ACTION

TIMES and conditions being what they are on the national scene and the world scene, it is inevitable that there should come now reaction, and action, most especially action, from the highly sensitized motion picture. Hollywood has gone to work for this season with evidences of a consciousness of the big world of elsewhere without precedent in its career.

The loss of Central Europe has been accompanied not only by the discovery of South America but also of the United States. The fall of the "Quiz Campaign" and of devices bribing the customers to buy brings conviction that maybe it is pictures they want . . . even pictures of the glamours and glories and lives of their own land.

So for action we see a new order of effort in product and promotion with "Dodge City," demonstrated on the plains of Kansas, "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," materialized with fervor on San Francisco's Treasure Island and in Washington, and coming presentation pyrotechnics for "Union Pacific" at Omaha, out where the west begins.

These manifestations are but a few among the many of the period, with aggressiveness of a new order manifest among all the makers and purveyors of pictures.

In appreciative survey of the atmosphere and its intensities, one recalls an epitaph, also from the great American West, concerning Alkali Ike, "He done his damndest. Angels could do no more."

TOM-TOM "THINKING"

AMONG the minor curses is the delight in repetition. Private speech and public prints are invaded by infections of phrase that pass for thought. It is the heritage of the imitative ape. It is tom-tom reaction.

So long as this manifestation results only in the mania for a piece of slang, or the fancy for a song and tune soon to be worn out, discarded, the influence is trivial, the consequences zero. But now and again the trait carries over into regions of more material importance.

Just now the phrase which invades every columnist's essay, every editorial on the screen, and even official documents is a cliche of opprobrium, "boy-meets-girl." It is intended as an evaluation of the attainments of the antecedent motion picture, a deprecation of its audience, and a damnation of the state of the art and industry of the screen today.

THE boy-meets-girl coinage is proving as unhappily handy as the lay and critical adoption of the trade nomenclature of "A" and "B" picture classifications. When "A" and "B" escaped from the picture salesman's worksheets into the movie columns one more step was taken to determine the fate of the picture before it could be submitted to the customers. The phrase pickers did it.

But "boy-meets-girl," as a variant of "escapist," will make no important impress, owing to natural forces completely beyond the contenders for a screen of "social consciousness" and greater ideas.

The love story will continue dominant on the screen, just as it has for the uncounted and uncountable centuries dominated song and story.

Despite the disapproval of the exponents of a new era of import and pictures with message, you will find that boy will continue to meet girl. When he quits that not only the screen but the race will be in trouble.

ART IN EDUCATION

OUR art of the cinema is heading itself somewhat in the direction of a difficult issue. "They say," you know, that "the movies are very educational." They are too.

But one gets a pause from certain notions that seem to be thrusting themselves into many minds. So for example a writer for the friendly Pittburgh Press remarked the other day: "I can understand a certain amount of poetic latitude is necessary to create a dramatic screen story out of an historic episode. . . . One thing is true, though—I would be willing to bet two dollars that you could go out among an average crowd of young people in their early 20s and find a considerable percentage who think New Orleans was saved by Lafitte's pirates, that the Suez canal was built by Tyrone Power in connection with a liaison with Eugenie, and that the James boys were somehow heroic in repulsing the marauding advance of the railroads."

This was presented to a motion picture executive, more erudite and studious than most. "Yes," he said, "it is a problem. I find in fact that my own knowledge of English history is considerably distorted by a producer named Shakespeare."

It has been going on a long time.

THE aftermath of the "movie quiz" of the "Greatest Year" campaign includes considerable acrimony in the daily press, and not a little correspondence across this editor's desk. Among those who suffered acute annoyance seems to be Mr. F. E. Williams, a St. Louis attorney, who remarks: "Merit in 50-word essays is like beauty in women—difficult to define and subject to differences of opinion . . . consequently and for a number of other reasons . . . selection in the vast majority of cases was a matter of chance."

PLAIN JEALOUSY

"THE real purpose of a World's Fair is not to exhibit fan dancers, but to put to everyday use the secret scientific developments of the laboratory years before they would ordinarily be adopted," says Westinghouse Editorial Service from East Pittsburgh, release A-68397. That is no way for a great big corporation to be belittling the achievements of an accomplished young woman who rose to a certain indisputable eminence at the Chicago Fair by her skill in the exploitation of natural resources, and with a rare economy in plant investment. What can the applied science of industry do with a handful of feathers?

This Week

Talent

One of the prime factors this coming season, as in seasons past, in the evaluation of product to come will be the personalities who will be most intimately concerned in the making of that product. Star talent has been and remains one of the essentials of showmanship. The present roster of the studios show few eliminations or major changes among writers, directors, actors. Whatever trend is noticeable is toward single picture contracts by talent in the higher brackets in order to benefit by the diversity of effort and presentation of different studios.

The reservoirs from which the productions of the three companies which have held their conventions will be drawn are rehearsed on page 16.

Testimony

The Department of Justice will use the testimony of about 75 independent upstate New York exhibitors, in its forthcoming New York anti-trust action against the majors, it was revealed this week, as Seymour Krieger, assistant to the United States attorney general, submitted to the Department the reports of an upstate tour. Accompanied by E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of New York Allied, Mr. Siegel took depositions at meetings of Allied units in Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester, and Albany. Mr. Krieger said that "much information" had been gathered, and that it will supplement the government's bill of particulars, which a successful court action by the majors' defense has compelled it to submit.

A meeting on Monday, in the Ten Eyck hotel, Albany, of New York Allied's upstate unit, was concerned with Mr. Kelly's report of the trip with Mr. Krieger, and with the reported lack of prints at Albany exchanges. Mr. Kelly told MOTION PICTURE HERALD that "late bookings" has been responsible for a 30 to 40 per cent increase in this year's Lenten slump, compared to last year's.

Pictorial

The news of the week having lent itself admirably to photography, highlights of the grist are presented on pages 10 to 15. Included are scenes from Dodge City where Warner Brothers entertained executives, stars and the press from both coasts at the premiere of its picture which is based on the history of the Kansas city; random angles on a session of the Senate committee which is holding public hearings on the Neely anti-block bill; three pages of personalities and events in the news, and pictures of the dual preview held by Twentieth Century-Fox for "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" at the Golden Gate Exposition in San Francisco and in Washington, D. C.

Divorcement Bills Die

Proposals to divorce production from exhibition interests by state law succumbed in two states this week, Kansas where the legislature adjourned having taken no action on the bill, and Missouri where the measure was one of more than 200 eliminated from consideration at this session. Pending also in Kansas was a censorship bill which would have banned block booking.

Other state legislation covering various tax proposals and measures affecting the motion picture industry otherwise are reported on page 66.

English Competition

The opening of the World's Fair in New York not only will herald the public unveiling of television as an entertainment medium but will mark the start of a competive race between American and British interests, in the home market, for public favor in the field. Present plans of the Baird Television Company, controlled by Gaumont British and the Ostrer brothers, are for the shipment of apparatus to New York, possibly for installation in several Broadway theatres. Broadcasting services of American companies would be employed.

Details and other developments are on page 68.

Atmosphere of Truce

Possibilities for at least temporary peace appeared on the labor horizon during the week. In spite of the fact that Local 306 of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees continued its home office and exchange strike in New York the limits of the walkout were not extended to theatres and meetings with distributors under the supervision of the New York State Board of Mediation were reported tending toward amity. The Department of Justice maintained its interest in the strike.

Monogram Convention

Monogram's seventh international sales convention will be held at the Drake hotel in Chicago on May 4, 5, 6, W. Ray Johnston, president, has announced. In addition to representaives from the United States and Canada the following will represent foreign distribution outlets: William Gell, managing director of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., of London; Arthur Levy, English representative; Norman Rydge, chairman of the board of Greater Union Theatres, and of British Empire Films, distributors of Monogram product in Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania, and Ernest Wettstein, Paris representative. George W. Weeks, general sales manager, will present the sales policy. The largest schedule ever undertaken by the company, 32 features and 24 westerns, will be outlined at the convention.

Final Draft

Presented as their final draft, the committee of distributors charged with preparation of a code of fair trade practices has published a revision, in legal language and with some changes and additions, of the code proposed early in December. Copies of the proposals, which distributors agreed to put into effect immediately, were sent to exhibitor organizations and to the Department of Justice. Allied attacked the draft.

A commentary on the code and subsequent developments appears on page 43, followed by the full text. Also in these pages is a summary of each point compared with the draft submitted by Allied States, with the MPTOA ten point program and with the original proposals.

Exposition

Major supply and equipment companies and film companies will be represented at the "World's Fair" exposition, part of the first annual convention of the Allied Theatre Owners of New York from May 23rd to 25th at the Hotel Astor, New York City, according to E. Thornton Kelly, executive secretary of the organization. The exposition will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the hotel.

Neely Bill Aired

The Neely bill to prohibit block booking in the motion picture industry, a perennial entry in Congressional legislative lists was thrown open to a public committee hearing this week and representatives of the industry, both for and against, as well as lay representative of various interested civic groups trouped to Washington to argue the merits or evils of the bill. Prominent in the attack on the measure were distributors' representatives, William R. Rodgers, A. Montague and Charles C. Pettijohn. Concerned in explaining reasons for its passage were leaders of Allied States Association, long a proponent of the legislation, among them Abram Myers, Col. H. A. Cole, Martin Smith and Nathan Yamins.

The hearings are reported on page 31, the text of the bill is also on that page, and a page of pictures taken at the hearing appears in the pictorial section.

Fight Films

Repeal of the law prohibiting interstate shipment of prize fight films was asked in Congress this week by Senator Warren Barbour (Rep., N. J.). The Senator said the law, enacted in 1912, was the result of racial feeling against Jack Johnson, then the world's heavyweight champion. Mr. Barbour, a former amateur heavyweight champion, said that "without question it was meritorious legislation and should have been enacted. The conditions that brought about the enactment of the legislation clearly no longer exist. The present conditions that accompanied the ascension of Jack Johnson to the title did not accompany the ascension of Joe Louis."

French Ban Reported

A cable to the New York Times from Paris said Thursday that visas on all Warner Brothers product had been suspended for two months. Relations between the company and the French Government had been strained since Warners released "Devils Island," though Warners subsequently withdrew the film.

Stock Distribution

The remaining 50 per cent of the stock of the recently created Pathe Laboratories, Inc., was ordered distributed in the ratio of one share for each 100 shares of Pathe Film Corporation held by stockholders, at a directors' meeting Tuesday. A similar distribution was made on March 29th. The stock will be distributed on April 28th to stockholders of record on April 14th.

French Film Bill

The new French film bill, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies last week by Jean Zay, Minister of National Education, is lacking the provision which had been most objectionable to American companies, that limiting the length of the theatre programs to 10,000 feet, which would cut film programs in France to one feature bill.

However, the provision for a dubbing tax on American films has been retained, and the measure apparently provides for virtual dictatorship by the Minister of National Education over American films in France, if France can have the Franco-American trade treaty changed.

The New Season

A program of 26 features, 24 westerns and four serials will be announced by Republic this weekend at the first of the company's four regional sales conventions in Houston, Tex. United Artists announced that a total of 11 producers would contribute to the program which will be announced at a meeting in Hollywood on May 8th. Universal will hold the first of three regional sessions in Cincinnati April 15th. Thus the product news of the week.

A report on Republic's Houston meeting with titles of the budgetarily expanded program is on page 57 and a summary of convention news together with a chronicling of the concluding sessions of the Twentieth Century-Fox meeting in Chicago last week is on page 55.

Turkish Treaty

The United States this week signed a trade treaty with Turkey, its first reciprocal trade pact with a Near Eastern country. The trade between the two nations last year totaled $31,500,000. State Department officials in Washington accorded the signing of the treaty a symbolical significance far in excess of the importance of Turkish-American trade. The treaty, it was said, brought the Turkish republic into the orbit of nations trading on a free-exchange basis and cut directly across the path of economic expansion and domination projected by the Nazi government. The treaty, which is the 21st to be signed by the United States, goes into effect provisionally on May 5th and, unless terminated by either government on two months' notice, will continue in effect until the end of 1941. There are 120 theatres in Turkey, all wired for sound. According to the 1938-'39 Motion Picture Almanac, 142 films were shown there in the first 10 months of 1937 of which 56 were American, 27 French and 22 German. Local production consisted of two features.

Growth in Mexico

Returned from a lengthy tour of South and Central America, Miles A. Goldrick, assistant general foreign manager for Electrical Research Products, Inc., said this week that business conditions on the southern continent generally are unsettled but that he had observed an unusual growth in theatre business in Mexico over the last two years. Local estimates there place the increase as high as 70 per cent, he said. He attributed it to the increase in the number of films recorded in the native language which are popular in the rural sections.

On South America, Mr. Goldrick said, "Despite unfavorable business conditions in many quarters of Latin America, our introductory sales have been highly gratifying. A pronounced feeling of sympathy for American-made products has developed during the recent past which, if properly cultivated will assure our manufacturers of a healthy and continuously expanding foreign market."

No Quota Increase

The Films Advisory Council of Great Britain has recommended that no alteration in the exhibitors' quota be made for the year beginning next October, it was reported in the House of Commons on Tuesday by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade. The Council will report later on the distributor quota schedules for the following year and subsequently.

Aubrey Flanagan discusses previous quota news and other developments in Britain from London on page 75.

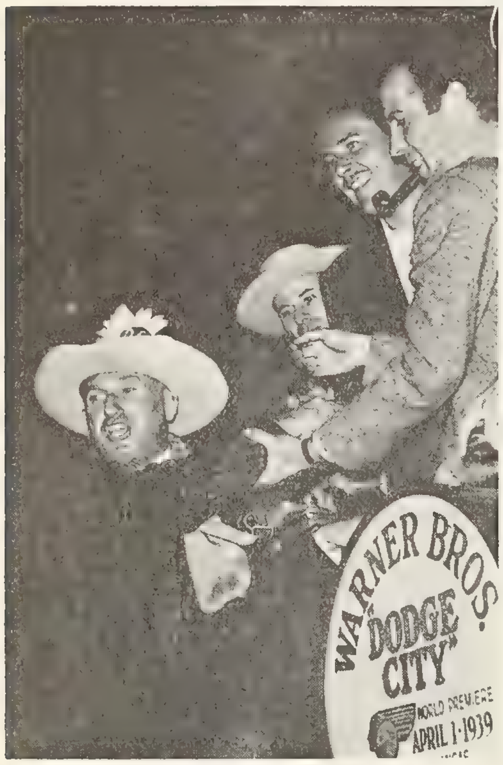
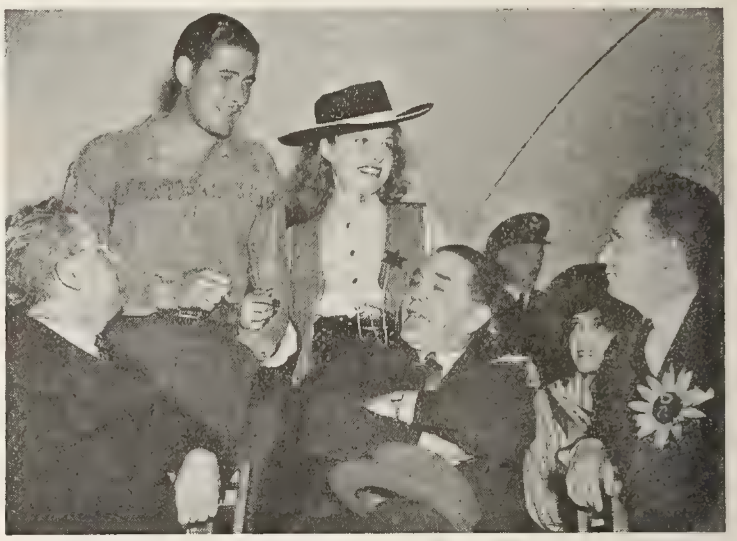
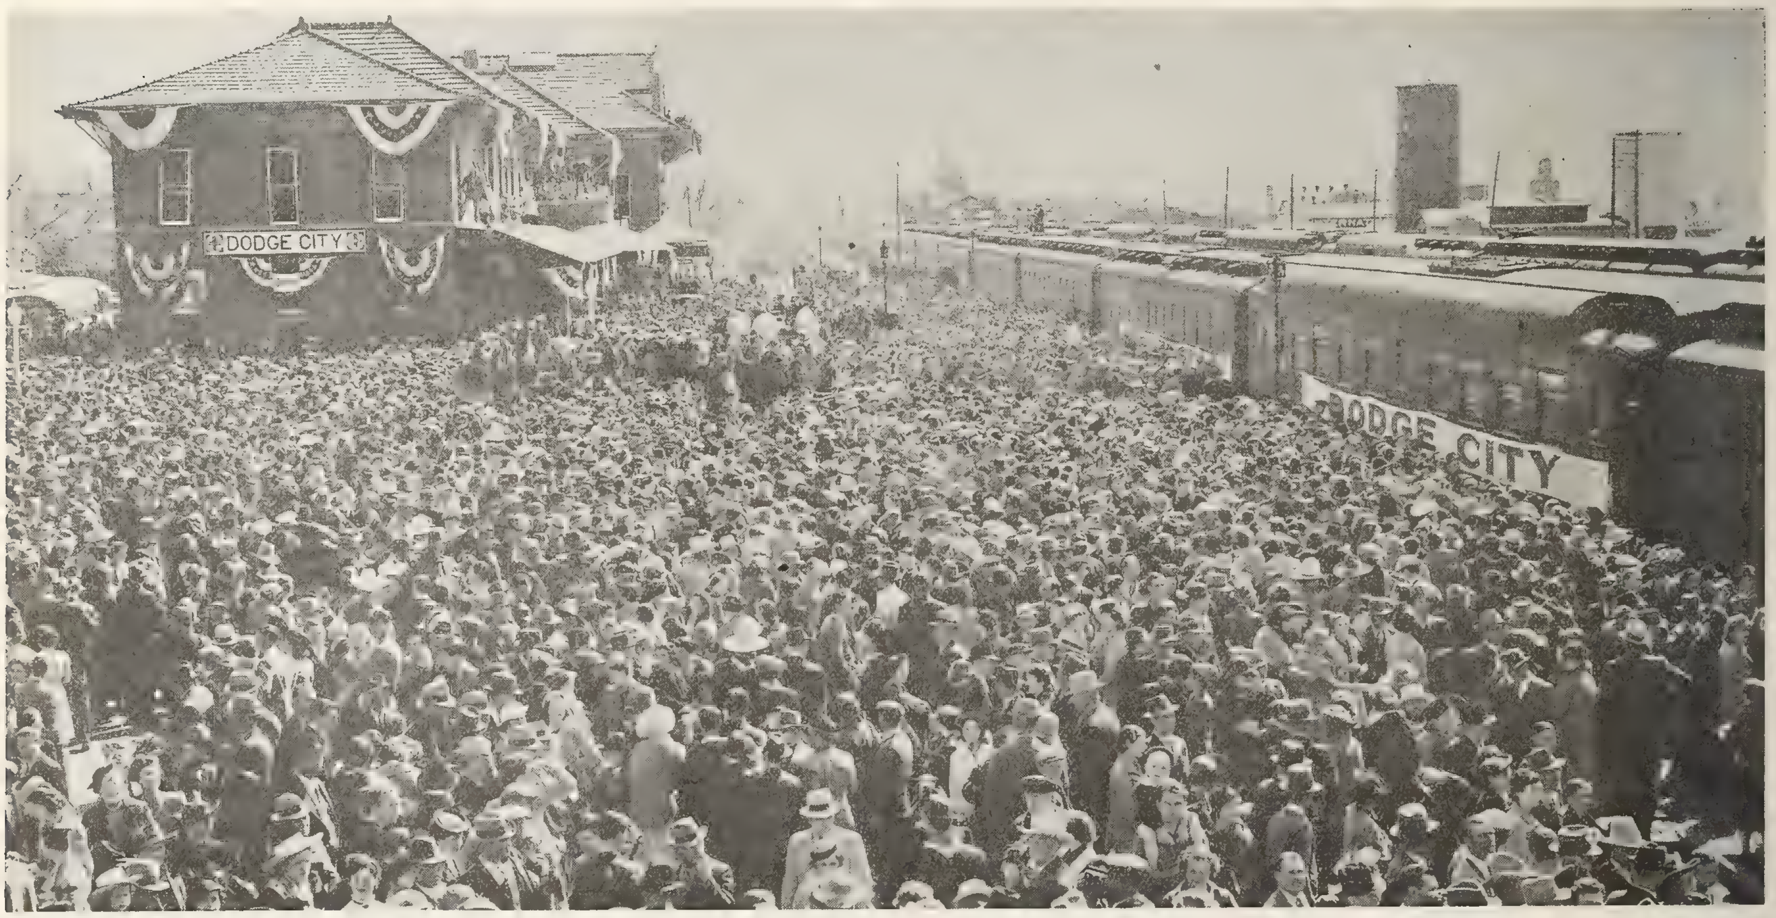
ACTION EVENT PROCLAIMS PICTURE, PROMOTES SCREEN



Warners took Hollywood to Dodge City, Kansas, last Saturday for the opening of "Dodge City," attended by parades, a rodeo and other festivities. Hollywood stars appeared in cow country regalia (photo above) in the "Gay Lady" saloon replica on the special train. Jack L. Warner, studio chief, boarded the special with the assistance of Errol Flynn and Humphrey Bogart (photo on left). On the right, Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan are seen chatting with Governors Carr, Colorado; Miles, New Mexico, and Ratner, Kansas. Story on page 36; review on page 60.





Fifty thousand natives turned out as one to meet Warners' Hollywood Special as it arrived at Dodge City, and greet the 30 stars aboard.

Neely Bill Hearing

REPRESENTATIVES of the industry, of factions within the industry, and of those fringing groups which hold that film business is everybody's business gathered in Washington this week to argue before a Senate committee that a bill to prohibit block booking should or should not be passed. Random angles on one day's session are presented herewith.

HOLLYWOOD TALENT MAP SHOWS "FARMING OUT" SYSTEM SPREADING

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER in Hollywood

While executives of both studio and home office huddle these weeks behind locked doors in preparation of product announcements with which to inspire the selling steam of their sales staffs in annual convention, to woo exhibitors in buying temper and to fascinate, ultimately, the ultimate customers who so often shop for their favorite stars, a measure of foreknowledge as to auspices and personnel of the new season's wares is presented herewith, from the ultimate source, the studios.

Subject to some changes, of course, between now and delivery of product, this foreknowledge, acquired firsthand at the studios in Hollywood, whence will come the finished 1939-40 films of 1939-40, shows the new talent signed, old talent signed anew. It is intended basically to give to the buying exhibitors an early idea of the personalities of the studios with which they are about to do business, through the salesmen of the distributing divisions.

Trend Toward "Farming Out"

While there have been no few eliminations from virtually all of the studios' talent rosters, the majority will continue in harness, in acting, writing, directing. The trend is however, toward more "farming out," with many established stars and writers, preferring single picture contracts in order to get the opportunities of diversity of effort and presentation by different studios. The less known players, of course, prefer the security of longer term contracts.

Complete rosters of players, writers and directors to date, for 1939-40 programs embrace the three companies whose conventions already have been held—Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Warner Headliners

At Warners we find 1939-40 features headlining such acting personalities as Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland, Paul Muni, Bette Davis, George Brent, Miriam Hopkins, Humphrey Bogart, Edward G. Robinson, the four Lane sisters, John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, the "Dead End Kids," Bonita Granville and Frankie Thomas, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan, Jeffrey Lynn, Zorina, (borrowed from Samuel Goldwyn), James Stewart, Claude Rains, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh, James Cagney, Wayne Morris, Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Payne, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Johnnie (Scat) Davis, Gloria Dickson, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Tom Kennedy, Margaret Lindsay, John Litel, Lya Lys, Barton MacLane, Henry O'Neill, Maxie Rosenbloom, James Stephenson, Rosella Towne, Marie Wilson and Maris Wrixon.

Directors who will make the Warners' 1939-40 films include Lloyd Bacon, William Clemens, Michael Curtiz, William Bieterle, Ray Enright, Edmund Goulding, William Keighley, Anatole Litvak, Terry Morse, William McGann, Lewis Seiler and Noel Smith.

MONEY MAKERS LEAD ROSTERS OF STARS

The ten best money making stars as determined in the Motion Picture Herald and Fame poll for 1938 retain their leading contract status with the same companies in whose productions they climbed to fame last year, and in most cases, preceding years. Shirley Temple, leader for the fourth successive year, remains with Twentieth Century-Fox. It was announced last week at the convention that her pictures for 1939-40 would be of even greater budgetary importance than in previous years. Clark Gable, Number Two in the poll, will continue as one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's top stars. The status of others remains unchanged, Sonja Henie remains with Twentieth Century-Fox, Mickey Rooney with MGM, Spencer Tracy with MGM, Robert Taylor with MGM, Myrna Loy with MGM, and Jane Withers, Alice Faye and Tyrone Power with Twentieth Century-Fox.

The production staff under J. L. Warner is headed by Hal B. Wallis, associate executive in charge of production.

MGM's Roster

The next roster to be completed was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's. Among those scheduled for starring roles in MGM's new schedule are Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Greta Garbo, Spencer Tracy, Joan Crawford, Myrna Loy, Nelson Eddy, William Powell, Jeanette MacDonald, Margaret Sullavan, the Marx Brothers, Hedy Lamarr, Robert Donat, Eddie Cantor, Mickey Rooney, Robert Montgomery, Judy Garland, Wallace Beery, Lew Ayres, Rosalind Russell, Eleanor Powell, Lionel Barrymore and Freddie Bartholomew.

The list of featured players includes: Anthony Allan, Robert Benchley, Marie Blake, Ray Bolger, Truman Bradley, Rand Brooks, Virginia Bruce, Billie Burke, Jack Carlton, Lynne Carver, Don Castle, Janice Chambers, Ina Claire, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day, Melvyn Douglas, Greer Garson, Virginia Grey, Sara Haden, Fay Holden, Mary Howard, Mary Beth Hughes, Henry Hull, Dorothy Sonia Humel, Ian Hunter, Ruth Hussey, Betty Jaynes, Rita Johnson, Guy Kibbee, Terry Kilburn, Edward Kilroy, Miliza Korjus, Leni Lynn, Ilona Massey, Douglas McPhail, Frank Morgan, Ann Morriss, George Murphy, Tom Neal, Dennis O'Keefe, Maureen O'Sullivan, Reginald Owen, Cecilia Parker, Nat Pendleton, Walter Pidgeon, June Preisser, Eugene Reynolds, Florence Rice, Lionel Royce, Gilbert Russell, Ann Rutherford, Jo Ann Sayers, Robert Spindola, James Stewart, Lewis Stone, Mary Taylor, Philip Terry, Lana Turner, Virginia Weidler, Johnny Weismuller, Cristina Welles and Robert Young.

Twentieth Century-Fox Lineup

Twentieth Century-Fox followed with their talent lineup. Associate producers functioning on the Twentieth Century-Fox staff for the coming year were announced as: Harry Joe Brown, Raymond Griffith, David Hempstead, Nunnally Johnson, Edward Kaufman, Kenneth Macgowan, Gene Markey and John Stone.

Stars and featured players under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox include: Shirley Temple, Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Nancy Kelly, Richard Greene, Cesar Romero, Annabella, Warner Baxter, Binnie Barnes, Peter Lorre, Sidney Toler, Jane Withers, Lionel Atwill, Henry Fonda, Joan Davis, the Ritz Brothers, John Carradine, Lynn Bari, Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Eddie Collins, Douglas Fowley, Russell Gleason, Kane Richmond, Joseph Schildkraut, George Sanders, Slim Summerville, Wally Vernon, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Florence Roberts, Amanda Duff, Pauline Moore and Joan Valerie.

Directors under contract include: Otto Brower, Irving Cummings, Roy Del Ruth, Allan Dwan, John Ford, Eugene J. Ford, Norman Foster, Herbert I. Leeds, Henry King, Walter Lang, Sidney Lanfield, George Marshall, Gregory Ratoff, William A. Seiter, Malcolm St. Clair and Alfred Werker.

Contract writers under contract include: Jack Andrews, Arthur Arthur, John Balderston, Edwin Blum, Lou Breslow, Walter Bullock, William A. Drake, S. G. Duncan, Philip Dunne, Kenneth Earle, Walter D. Edmonds, Robert Ellis, Don Ettlinger, Robert Harrari, Sam Hellman, Anne Herendeen, Ethel Hill, Joseph Hoffman, Leonard Hoffman, Betty Hopkins, Frances Hyland, Boris Ingster, Frank L. James, Rian James, Jack Jungmeyer, Curtis Kenyon, Jr., Fidel La Barba, John Larkin, Henry Lehrman, Sonya Levien, Helen Logan, Walter Morosco, Morris M. Musselman, Samuel Ornitz, Ernest Pascal, William Rankin, Eleanore Griffin, Gregory Ratoff, Albert Ray, Allen Rivkin, Sid Silvers, Richard Sherman, Edith Skouras, Milton Sperling, Barry Trivers, Lamar Trotti, Harry Tugend, Karl Tunberg, Jack Vernon, Darrell Ware, Commander Frank Wead.

New contracts for 1939-40 activity signed in recent weeks are numerous. At RKO, they were made with Max Gordon and Harry M. Goetz producer, also Walter Futter, and at United Artists, with Ernst Lubitsch, Sol Lesser and David Loew. Universal has given a producer-director contract to Richard Wallace; Selznick has signed Leslie Howard to star; Fox has given new contracts to the four Jones Family series players: June Carlson, Ken Howell, George Ernest and Billy Mahan.

NEW CROP OF PLAYERS IS SOWN

Columbia started off discovering the new crop of "unknowns," by signing William Holden, 21, who begins in "Golden Boy."

E. B. Derr did not renew his producing arrangement with Monogram. Universal signed Albert Ray to produce seven features with Johnny Mack Brown.

MGM, always in the numerical lead with new contracts, has given those documents to Norman McLeod, director; Irving S. Brecher, writer, and Sam Messenheimer, to work in the music department. William Powell has re-signed at Metro, where contracts have also been given to Milton Bren, producer; George Tobias, formerly a stage actor; and H. C. Potter, director.

Fifteen Contracts by Five Studios

Fifteen new contracts or extensions were given in a single week by five studios, Warners and Paramount each signing five pacts with talent.

Paramount signed Edward H. Griffith, director, to a straight two-year term; Ellen Drew, actress, and Marian Spitzer, writer. Charles R. Rogers, producing for Paramount release, signed Fay Bainter and 13-year-old Linda Ware.

Warners signed to new pacts, or extended old ones: Julie Stevens, 20-year-old Little Theatre actress; Maris Wrixon, actress; Wolfgang Reinhardt, assistant to Henry Blanke; Max Steiner, composer, and Frankie Thomas, actor.

M-G-M hired two more writers, Harry Ruskin and Robert Thoeren.

RKO extended the contract of Garson Kanin, director.

Martin Spellman, 12-year-old player, has been given a five-year contract calling for four pictures a year by Monogram.

Others signed include George Yohalem, associate producer, Universal; Cliff Reid, producer, RKO; Wilson Collison, writer, Sam Goldwyn; Edward Ellis, signed to appear in three RKO pictures; Edgar Kennedy and Ray Whitley, at RKO; Lya Lys, Warners.

At Republic exhibitors will find continuing Roy Rogers and Gene Autry, among others.

Talent Realignments

Last fall's all-studio-purging of player contract lists has produced some startling realignments. The situation at 20th Century-Fox is illustrative. Loretta Young is off the roster. So is Gloria Stuart, Michael Whelan, Jean Hersholt, J. Edward Bromberg, Brian Donlevy, Charles Farrell, Arthur Treacher, George Sanders and a score of lesser lights. Henry Fonda, Sidney Toler, Lionel Atwill and Douglas Fowley are the most notable additions. Sen Yung has become Key Luke's successor in the "Chan" series.

A year ago Warners had Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Kay Francis, Hugh Herbert, Leslie Howard and Anita Louise on the star role. They will work elsewhere during the coming season. George Raft, who it seems, got tired squabbling with Paramount, John Garfield, John Payne, Jeffrey Lynn and Ann Sheridan will succeed the absent members.

RKO-Radio's star list suggests some equally important changes. Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are still there, as are Lucille Ball, Cary Grant and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. But, headed by Katherine Hepburn, many people are gone.

The New Universal has Deanna Durbin as its drum major star name and a lot of promising younger players to whom opportunities are being given. It will forget Hope Hampton and Danielle Darrieux and go after other big name potentialities like Cowan-Fields-Bergen and Crosby to strengthen its future program.

ONTARIO ACCEPTS "DAUGHTER" AS WAS

The Ontario board of censors has rejected the censored version of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and has accepted the original version. O. J. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario board, said that the picture has quite a moral theme so long as it is told carefully and in detail but that, in the cutting, essential facts had been removed which "left much to the imagination, suggesting immoral implications."

Marlene Dietrich, player, Paramount decided it could get along without. George Raft, Burns and Allen, Randolph Scott, Frances Dee and the Yacht Club Boys, among others, are not being considered in Paramount's new season plans. Madeleine Carroll continues and Susan Hayward is a new Paramount star.

MGM, which made a great to-do about Hedy Lamarr and said she was a star at the start, shelved her first picture, "I Take This Woman," whereupon Hedy married and remarked "I was not understood." Nevertheless, she is on the star list of the company which boasts "more stars than there are in heaven," and, of course, Mickey Rooney is the lot's fair haired boy.

Feature and Support Players

A problem in astronomical mathematics would be as easy to solve as the condition that exists in the lists of feature and support players of all studios. Sufficient to say that purgees from one company's contract list are recruits on others and vice versa.

When the directors take the field for 1939-40, the lineup will look pretty much like a collegiate football squad that has been playing together for years. The same coaches will be telling the same teams (with substitutions, of course, and a sensational new discovery here and there) how to pull the same plays with skill and finesse and how to uncork newly devised tricks with precision and dexterity. Without exception, studios will continue to rely upon the old timers who have proved themselves. Still, such promising newcomers to director ranks as Garson Kanin, Harold Bucquet, Reinhold Schunzel, Leslie Fenton, A. Sylvan Simon, William Thiele, Gustav Machaty, Leslie Goodwins, Jack Hively, John Brahm, Gordon Douglas, Henry Koster, Anatole Litvak and Fritz Lang will be entrusted with more important work. David O. Selznick will have English Alfred Hitchcock available.

Columbia's Plans

A fairly comprehensive picture of the rapidly shifting scene, as it pertains to all personnel departments may be visioned if attention is turned to Columbia's plans to date for the new season. Gary Cooper will be seen in Paramount's "Beau Geste." He is under contract now to Sam Goldwyn, will figure impressively in that producer's new season production plans, yet he has been tentatively pencilled in as the star of Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," along with Jean Arthur, at Columbia. Rouben Mamoulian is looking around for established names for "Golden Boy." Alexander Hall has engaged MGM's Melvyn Douglas and the now free-lancing Joan Blondell to appear in "Good Girls Go to Paris."

Resuming the study of picture making manpower as it concerns writers, it is found that in all major studios the writer lists have been shaved, although few ace writers have been eliminated. The Warner writer contract list no longer has such notables as Mark Hellinger and Bess Meredith. But Hellinger is now a producer and Miss Meredith is usually in demand. Repeating the process in other studios produces similar results. Most of the top liners are still the job. Many writers now prefer to be employed on a single film engagement, which permits them to move about freely.

Cameramen Stay Put

New names, naturally, will appear in every phase and department of picture making, with only that very exclusive organization which is made up of the cameramen remaining inoculated against change. The major shiftings in this branch will be merely a matter of borrowing and loaning.

No research need be devoted to the song writers because, with only an exception or two, there are no tunesmiths' organizations, such as existed up until last year. Boris Morros has departed Paramount as head of the music department, but all the others are as was.

Columbia, for instance, has served notice that it intends to strengthen and advance its position in the industry by signing Frank Lloyd and Wesley Ruggles to producer contracts. Mr. Lloyd will make "Tree of Liberty;" and Ruggles will do "Arizona" in the upper cost films.

More Producers for MGM

MGM, already rich in producer strength, has recruited a veritable platoon of new product experts. Since last spring, Mervyn LeRoy, Winfield R. Sheehan, Milton Bren, from the Hal Roach lot where he made the "Toppers," Robert Z. Leonard, promoted from a director's berth, Ed Chodorov, Frank Davis, one of the late Irving Thalberg's aides, Sidney Franklin, Lucien Hubbard, William Anthony McGuire, J. Walter Rueben, Frederick Stephani and Carey Wilson have joined the permanent-fixture producer list which includes Hunt Stromberg, Joe Cohen, et al.

The 20th Century-Fox producer unit will remain in a practical statu quo. A couple of producers have been lopped off the list of Darryl F. Zanuck and Sol Wurtzel assistants and Harry Joe Brown has been added.

The Warner Brothers ranks of producers and associates will continue as is.

At RKO-Radio, where Pandro S. Berman has been elevated to vice president in charge of production, Edward Kaufman, Lou Lusty and Jesse Lasky are among the missing and P. J. Wolfson and George Haight are new names on the producer list. Harold Lloyd is a late addition to RKO-Radio prospects.

No changes are contemplated in the New Universal regime. Here, however, there may be a furtherance of the Lester Cowan-W. C. Fields-Edgar Bergen semi-independent subsidiary producer plan with other producers, writers, directors and actors forming cooperative combines to operate on a similar basis.

The departure of Frank Lloyd and Wesley Ruggles from Paramount will necessitate the employment of new executives to work with the regular production staff, C. B. DeMille, Charles R. Rogers and Harry Sherman.

James Roosevelt, hired by Sam Goldwyn, is the most important recruit to the United Artists group forces, and Frank Ross has succeeded Milton Bren at Hal Roach.

A new Government film, depicting the story of unemployment as "The Plow That Broke the Plains" treated erosion and "The River" dealt with flood control, is in preparation by Pare Lorentz, director of the United States Film Service, and is planned for distribution toward the end of the year.

This will be the first Government picture to be produced since the filming of "The River" and will be followed, probably, by a film dealing with the question of public health.

Produced Under NEC

The four pictures produced and planned for future production by Pare Lorentz in themselves summarize the aim of the United States Film Service, set up under the National Emergency Council last August, to deal with Governmental activities on a broad plane, in sharp contrast to the film philosophy of most of the Federal agencies that motion pictures are a medium for the advertising of their particular policies.

In setting up a film agency under the NEC, President Roosevelt married that organization to an heiress, for Mr. Lorentz brought with him the tidy sum of $250,000 which had been contributed from PWA, WPA and Agriculture Department funds. This will carry it through to the end of the current fiscal year on June 30, by which time officials hope that additional funds for the coming year will have been provided under a budget which is now being figured out.

Establishment of the film service is an outgrowth of Lorentz' "River" picture, universally admitted to be the finest motion picture ever put out by a Government agency. That film has played between 4800 and 4900 theatres under a commercial distribution contract, and is said to be still in demand.

Admitting that "River" was one of those hits often aimed at but seldom attained, officials of the service have set as their goal the duplication of that success in such other pictures as they produce, and because of that are proceeding slowly and painstakingly with new production.

Bureau to be Clearing House

The United States Film Service was set up to be a clearing house for Government pictures. It has not attempted to centralize Government production in itself, nor does it make any effort to secure distribution for films put out by any Federal agency, with one exception, "Good Neighbors," a two-reel picture produced for the Maritime Commission.

The only pictures it is distributing directly are "Good Neighbors," "Plow" and "River." When it was first released last year "The River" was distributed by Paramount but now prints of this and others will be released to exhibitors through the New York office of the Film Service, 347 Madison Ave. Requests for pictures of other Government agencies are referred to the producing agency.

While the service operates a distribution plan, it is not going beyond anything that has been done in the past—that is, it makes its pictures available to organizations which request them but is not seeking to push exhibition. Officials declared they have no desire to enter into competition with the commercial industry nor do they, it was indicated, approve wholeheartedly of the efforts to secure distribution through the theatres of propaganda films which have been put out by various agencies, notably the Federal Housing Administration, the WPA and the Social Security Board, all of which had series of shorts exploiting their activities.

Head of the service is Pare Lorentz as director, with Arch Mercy as assistant director in charge of the Washington office and George Gercke in charge of distribution. Aside from a few clerical aids in Washington and in the New York office the three are the whole show, with no investment in equipment and no staff of talent. Equipment and talent are hired by the day or period, as needed, to keep down the overhead.

Educational Distribution Stressed

Distribution efforts of the service for its three pictures are largely devoted to educational exhibition, in which it has enlisted the assistance of several of the film libraries which serve educational institutions. These libraries are leased pictures for a three-year period at a nominal figure—around $50—but do not make money on them since they are prohibited from charging any rentals for showings.

While thus acting as a producing and distributing agency for Federal films, the service also is prepared to aid the commercial producers desiring to make pictures of Government activities, serving as a liaison agency between the producers and the Government.

As its activities expand, the service hopes to produce films for other Government agencies—at the latter's expense, and while it may be the first step toward concentration of Federal film activities as a means of eliminating duplication of capital investment and reduction of expense, there is at present no attempt to take over the picture work of any department or commission. In fact, it was said, most of the agencies would fight against giving up their own motion picture activities, knowing that under centralization a heavy hand would be laid upon pictures designed to advertise Government agencies or Government officials rather than to depict instructively and entertainingly the worth-while activities of the national Government.

National Decency Legion Classifies 10 Pictures

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, five were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Challenge," "My Wife's Relatives," "Navy Secrets," "Texan Wildcats." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Forged Passports," "Society Lawyer," "Strange Faces," "They Made Her a Spy," "Undercover Agent." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Bizarre, Bizarre" (French).

WPA JOKE COSTS STAGE TEAM $10

The vaudeville team of Bonnie Boice and Tommy Ladd was fined $10 this week in Hollywood for cracking a joke about the WPA by an agent of the American Federation of Actors which ruled last month the WPA no longer was a joking matter.

The Joke:—Ladd danced slow-motion across the stage, saying he was going to work. Boice asked where he worked, and Ladd replied:—"On the WPA."

An Actors Federation official said it was the first fine since the ban went into effect.

Weisman Files Fox Theatres Accounting

Milton C. Weisman, attorney, on Tuesday filed a final accounting of his trusteeship for Fox Theatres Corporation. That corporation's assets were listed as $119,415 in cash, $37,614 in closed banks, stock in five wholly owned subsidiary companies, a 50 per cent interest in the Fanchon and Marco Corporation, a $4,000,000 bond and mortgage on Philadelphia properties, and miscellaneous fixtures and equipment.

The report states that all assets of the company, except $7,500 to Mr. Weisman for future expenses, were transferred to him and to Kenneth P. Steinrich, who were appointed on February 6 of this year as trustees for a final liquidation.

A claim of William Fox against the corporation for $7,186,627 is still in dispute.

The corporation went into receivership on June 22, 1932.

Cooper Again Heads Canadian Distributors

Colonel John Cooper, who has been associated with the Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association for 18 years, was reelected president at the annual meeting in Toronto this week. E. H. Wells was named secretary. Directors elected were Henry Nathanson, Maurice Milligan, James P. O'Loghlin, Haskell Masters, Leo Devaney and Claire Hague.

ARGUMENTS GO ON AND ON AT NEELY BLOCK SALES BILL HEARING

Atkinson Scolds, Pettijohn Defends, Neely Argues and Montgomery Smiles Amid Verbal Passages at Arms

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With the organized industry and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America leading the opposition, and the Motion Picture Research Council and Allied States Association heading up the other side, a four-man subcommittee of the U. S. Senate Interstate Commerce Committee this week listened to a long line of witnesses appearing from within and outside the industry to testify for or against passage of the pending bill to eliminate block and blind selling of motion pictures, as sponsored by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely.

Incidents Brighten Hearing

Aside from the usual trade arguments presented to the staid Senators in their hearing room in the white marbled Senate Office Building, which arguments were mostly repetitions of those heard during public hearings on similiar bills appearing variously in Congress since 1926, the hearings this week were enlivened by incidents. These stated when the industry put up as its first witness Mr. Robert Montgomery, of Hollywood, and enough flash bulbs were shot off by newspaper photographers to picture a Presidential inauguration.

The actor had concluded his testimony in opposition when Senator Ellison Durant (Cotton Ed) Smith, now 74, with four children and two grandchildren, turned to the actor and rather plaintively remarked, "Mr. Montgomery, you should bring some of your pretty actresses to testify. Even though we are old, we still like to look."

Would Do It Anyway

Henry R. Atkinson, of Boston, a leader in the Motion Picture Research Council, was asked by Senator Alben W. Barkley how the Council proposed to provide for community selection through the Neely bill. He admitted that this is not in the bill, but the bill would do it anyway.

"Which is worse, block selling or blind selling?" the Senator asked.

"They are inseparable," Mr. Atkinson urged.

"I think it would be very fortunate to be blind in motion pictures, according to what I have seen," Senator Smith interjected.

At the end of the first two days, starting on Monday, reporters agreed it was a toss-up who got picturized most, the expansively gesturing Charles Clyde Pettijohn, appearing for the distributors, or the ever-smiling Actor Montgomery. Even the Wall Street Journal "covered" the opening. And with Montgomery appearing both ready and willing to sign autographs, three Capitol "cops" were needed to keep the civic women witnesses in line.

Before midweek, Mr. Atkinson, who lectured the committee; Mr. Pettijohn, who pleaded with it; Mr. Neely, who argued, and Mr. Montgomery, who smiled, were about even on points. One of the Neely arguments was over his indulgence in motion picture stock, disclosing that he had bought some at $100, but complained that now it is worth only $5.

On the more serious side, proponents of the bill, led by the Research Council and Allied, rejected the industry's arguments that the new trade practice program as enacted last Thursday night (see page 44) would satisfy the demands of those desiring passage of the Neely bill.

SAYS FILMS HELP EASE DEPRESSION

At a luncheon before Philadelphia distributors this week, the newly appointed Pennsylvania State Censor chairman, Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, described the film industry as one of the dominant factors in helping the United States through the depression.

Outlining her plans before the distributors, Mrs. Carroll declared that she would bend every effort to maintain the high standards of the industry. "Censorship never has been popular," she said, "but there is no doubt that censorship is necessary. You and I both are working for the same thing. Remember, only one-half of the pictures submitted need to have anything done to them. And rest assured that I shall apply common sense and practical application to my duties."

Mrs. Carroll said she was a "movie" fan and goes to the films for relaxation and pleasure. "I realize that men and women are seeking surcease from their workaday life when they view motion pictures—looking for something fine and romantic," she said. "I'm sure that we will all get along together nicely," Mrs. Carroll concluded.

Refers to Production Code

Adoption of the bill would ruin the industry's Production Code, bring chaos in both domestic and foreign markets and improve nobody's situation, members of the subcommittee were told by Mr. Pettijohn, appearing as general counsel of the Hays organization.

Mr. Pettijohn's testimony was interrupted by an effort of Senator Neely to restrict the hearings to a presentation by the industry of any new conditions that may have been brought about since 1936, when hearings were last held on block booking.

"We did not feel it was necessary to ask the committee this year to hold hearings, but I understand that the opponents of the bill have requested these hearings, Senator Neely said. "The burden of proof that some change has taken place in the situation is upon the opponents."

Senator Barkley pointed out, however, that since the committee last acted on the subject there have been many changes in both committee and Senate membership "and we all know how impossible it is for members to go back and read hearings of past sessions. In order that the present membership could get fresh informaiton, I was one of those who felt there should be hearings."

"A matter of such importance as this ought to be considered fully," Chairman Smith agreed.

"Our objective is to get freedom of the selection of pictures," Mr. Atkinson of the Research Council put in.

"This is not like a lawsuit where it is necessary for everyone to make a case," Senator Barkley insisted.

"It is not a question of proof; it is a question of the committee getting the facts and reaching a conclusion," Chairman Smith declared.

"I hope that my friends in favor of the legislation be not too enamored of the suggestion that we conduct interminable hearings on this bill," Senator Neely urged. "If they do we will not have a chance to pass it this session. I hope the proponents will take a chance on the Senate knowing what it is all about and not drag out the hearing for days and days to accommodate the opponents of this bill."

The argument over the direction the hearings should take was resumed later when Senator Neely resumed his suggestion that the opponents lay their cards on the table and give the proponents the last word.

"In my judgment the proponents of this measure need not attempt to make out a case for this bill. It would consume too much time. And if some members of the committee have changed their views since the last time the matter was under consideration, they are not going to be convinced by anything that now can be written into the record.

"Taking It On the Chin"

"Whenever we have been given a hearing, we have been able to lick it except once—and then only when the hearing was before a single Senator," Mr. Pettijohn said, pointing out that last year no hearings were given, although they had been requested, and declaring that the industry is "tired of taking it on the chin" from everybody who wants to run the business.

"I frankly admit that this is the first time that I have been put in a position where I have seen the issues involved," chairman Smith said.

"I have not read any of the testimony. I may have voted, as a great many of us do vote very often, just like they complain you sell these pictures—blindly. I want to hear both sides. I want to know whether or not this bill is going to help the motion picture industry and whether or not it will be a benefit to the public."

"I know that in voting as I did last year, I got Hail Columbia from the state of Maine," Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., commented, referring to his stand against passage of the bill.

Eleven Years Before Legislature

Starting out with the flat assertion that "none of the people most active in the writing of this bill have ever made a picture or sold a picture," Mr. Pettijohn pointed out that for the last 11 years legislation to regulate the industry has been constantly before Congress.

"I know of no business in the country that so many people want to run and they think can run," he commented.

Mr. Pettijohn's comparison of the Mae West pictures with "Disraeli" and "Abraham Lincoln," the West films creating a record in contract completions and return dates while the others made records for cancellations, elicited from Senator Barkley an inquiry as to what had happened to the many-curved star.

"The public's taste is changing," the witness replied.

Outlining the history of the Production Code at the request of Senator Barkley, Mr. Pettijohn declared that the Legion of Decency boycott made it possible to secure adherence to that code by the whole industry. "The Legion of Decency did a fine job," he asserted, adding that last year it condemned only six pictures. Three of these were foreign, he said, while the other three were made by companies not regularly engaged in the business, and all were distributed under the individual-sale plan advocated in the Neely bill.

"CULTURAL MONOPOLY" IS CHARGED

Halving of the industry's production and serious unemployment among the 282,000 persons employed were seen by the Screen Actors Guild in passage of the bill, it was testified by Robert Montgomery, former president of the organization.

Mr. Montgomery confined himself largely to a discussion of the provision giving the industry 12 months in which to revamp after passage of the bill, declaring it could not recover in 12 years.

Cites New Trade Practice Plan

Proponents of the bill began their presentation Tuesday, the only break in the parade of witnesses coming when Mr. Pettijohn told Senator Neely, who was presiding at the time, that the hearings could be shortened and the civic groups given all they want through the new practice agreement.

"If these people will put on the table the names of the exhibitors they represent and say which theatres in the country want to buy their pictures and arrange for their bookings, I think we can get through a trade practice agreement right now in Washington and lay it on the table," he declared.

"If the exhibitor will call in a responsible group of these ladies and allow them to indicate the kind of pictures they do not want played in that community we will agree to withdraw from any film offer those pictures, and if they indicate the pictures they want we will go on record that they will be offered at fair prices."

"Will you also say for the Big Eight that they will supplement the agreement by absolving the local exhibitor from compliance with the present block booking system?" Senator Neely asked.

"Except for this, that when the salesman goes out to sell he sells all the pictures that he can, but we will withdraw from any offer what a responsible group from his own community thinks they do not want," Mr. Pettijohn replied.

Myers Raises Opposition

Opposition of Allied was started by Abram F. Myers, who declared the offer would not improve the exhibitor's situation since "there cannot be any exercise of the intelligent right of selection by anyone unless the goods are labeled."

"Our organization has not simply insisted on this bill all these years," he declared. "It has made proposals for the identification of pictures but we are simply told that they will not grant that.

The interruption came as Mr. Atkinson was engaged in an exposition of the cultural effect of films and the necessity for protecting children from undesirable influences, reading from the frequently-read Payne reports which have featured block booking hearings for years.

In a bitter attack on the industry, he said it has a "cultural monopoly."

The witness referred to the distributors' offer of an agreement for selectivity, saying, "I look with considerable suspicion on any attempt to settle the matter by voluntary negotiations. A later witness will give you 13 broken promises of the industry."

The present plan of voluntary censorship, he said, is kept alive only by the constant pressure of the Legion of Decency and other organizations and would be almost immediately abandoned if that pressure was relieved.

Parade of Civic Groups

The usual array of national organizations favoring the bill was paraded before the committee, most of the representatives emphasizing the moral effect of present day films.

Led by Miss Catherine Lyford of Boston, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Civic League, who said there is a "surfeit of mediocre pictures," the group included Miss Helen W. Atwater, of the American Home Economics Association; Mrs. Harriet Houdelette, of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. E. E. Danley, of the YMCA, and Miss Izora Scott of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, all of Washington. A letter from Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur of Leland Stanford University, president of the National Motion Picture Research Council, attacking "inferior" pictures, was read into the record.

The presentation of the Motion Picture Research Council's viewpoint was concluded by Mrs. Robert T. Bushnell of the Newton (Mass.) League of Women Voters, Miss Mary T. Lynch, of the National Council of Catholic Women, and Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of the National Motion Picture Research Council and National Congress of Parent-Teachers Association.

Miss Bannerman presented resolutions and letters from a number of women's organizations.

Cole Cites U. S. Charges

With many leading figures of Allied lined up to argue for the bill, Colonel H. A. Cole, of Dallas, president of the organization, led off with the charge that block booking and blind selling are only two of the "monopolistic and oppressive practices resorted to by the "Big

Text of Senator Neely's Bill To Outlaw Block Booking

Following is the complete text of Senate Bill 280, the Neely anti-block selling and blind selling bill, on which public hearings are being held before a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. It follows in the main the measure that has been pending for some years.

A bill to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as "compulsory block-booking" and "blind selling" in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the methods of distribution of motion-picture films in commerce whereby (a) exhibitors are required to lease all or a specified number of an offered group of films in order to obtain any individual desired film or films in the group, a trade practice sometimes known as "compulsory block-booking," and (b) films are leased before they are produced and without opportunity for the exhibitor to ascertain the content of such films, a trade practice sometimes known as "blind selling," are hereby declared to be contrary to public policy in that such practices interfere with the free and informed selection of films on the part of exhibitors and prevent the people of the several States and the local communities thereof from influencing such selection in the best interests of the public, and tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films. The Congress finds and declares that such methods and practices adversely affect and constitute a burden upon commerce, and it is the purpose of this Act to prohibit and to prevent such methods and practices in commerce.

Sec. 2. For the purposes of this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

(1) The term "motion-picture film" or "film" means all motion-picture films (whether copyrighted or uncopyrighted), including positive and negative prints, and copies or reproductions of such prints, which films contain photoplays or other subjects and are produced for public exhibition: Provided, That the term shall not include films commonly known as "news reels" or other films containing picturizations of news events, or short subjects of two thousand feet or less in length.

(2) The term "to lease" includes the making of a license agreement, contract, or any type of agreement whereby a film, the distribution of which is controlled by one of the parties, is to be supplied to and exhibited in a theatre owned, controlled, or operated by the other party.

(3) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, association, joint-stock company, trust, or corporaiton.

(4) The term "distributor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the distribution of motion picture films.

(5) The term "exhibitor" includes any person who engages or contracts to engage in the exhibition of motion picture films.

(6) The term "commerce" means commerce between any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; or between points within the same State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or within any Territory or the District of Columbia.

For the purposes of this Act (but in no wise limiting the definition of commerce) a transaction in respect of any film shall be considered to be in commerce if the film is part of that current of commerce usual in the motion-picture industry whereby films are produced in one State, leased for exhibition in other States, and distributed to them through local exchanges in the several States, the films circulating from the exchanges and between the various exhibitors. Films normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this Act. For the purpose of this paragraph, the word "State" includes Territory, the District of Columbia, and foreign country.

Sec. 3. (1) It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group only and to require the exhibitor to Eight.'" He read at length from the charges of the government in the New York suit.

They are the "twin evils," he said, predicting that elimination of the requirement for providing a synopsis will be demanded by the distributors, who probably would not object seriously to the rest of the bill if that was taken out, but warned that "elimination of that section would emasculate the bill."

Block booking is exercised "both horizontally and vertically," Mr. Cole asserted, explaining the situation in which he said subsequent run independents in Texas found themselves as a result of the restrictions imposed by the Interstate Circuit, which recently were outlawed by the Supreme Court.

"That situation has been changed now," he said. "The Government asked that and only recently the Supreme Court upheld a District Court ruling which said it was illegal, but nevertheless in the three years between the initiation of the practice and its outlawing 23 theatres sold out to the chains."

Mr. Cole discussed the distributors' new proposals for cancellation at length, declaring that it was not a flat 20 per cent of all pictures but was graduated according to the average price of films. He asserted that the trade announcement provision was meaningless and ambiguous, and said that the clause covering specific demands for pictures was so framed that exhibitors could make no use of it.

Evasion Move Charged

"In view of the past experience of Allied and the independent exhibitors it represents we feel that it (the proposed agreement) does not in any way take care of the evils of compulsory block booking," he said, predicting that the distributors would evade the cancellation clause, as, he charged, they have in the past. That they were already doing so, he said, was evidenced by a letter he received from an exhibitor who had been approached by a salesman for one of the companies which are putting the new cancellations into their contracts, in which the showman said he had been offered the pictures at a price, with a much lower figure quoted if he would eliminate the cancellation.

Further, Mr. Cole said, the proposed code would be effective only two years, with no guarantee of its continuance "even if it should mean very much."

Mr. Cole was followed by Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, Mass., who charged that the MPTOA, at a meeting in Toronto, "sold out body and soul to the producers." That block booking can be eliminated was declared by Mr. Yamins to have been demonstrated by the fact that England had banned it and that United Artists sold singly.

Mr. Yamins asserted that cancellation privileges meant little, explaining that if a picture in the highest price block was eliminated, a film was moved up from the lower blocks so that he eliminated only the lowest priced film.

Insistence of Mr. Yamins in crediting the Legion of Decency with improvement of pictures irritated Senator Neely, who insisted that the threat of legislation and the hearings that have been held have been an important influence.

Asked by Senator White what proportion of pictures are unsuitable, Mr. Yamins said only one of two per cent were harmful for adults, but possibly 25 per cent were undesirable for young folk.

However, Yamins added, there is a big percentage of films which are not harmful, but "are a waste of time" and would be rejected under selective buying.

Mr. Yamins declared that if the bill was passed and the majors didn't produce good pictures, the independents would, and read a telegram from Phil Goldstone, of Monogram, complaining that independents do not have a fair opportunity to market their product.

Asked by Senator White how the independents sold, Mr. Yamins admitted that they used block booking, leading the Senator to ask if they were not just as bad as the "trust," to which Mr. Yamins agreed.

Kent Challenges Claims

If a majority of theatre owners were permitted to vote on this bill they would reject it, the subcommittee was told by Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, first witness for the distributors. He contended no list has ever been presented of exhibitors reported to have been driven out of business by block booking or blind selling.

"It seems to me unfair that year after year men get up and claim, not under oath, that block booking and blind buying is putting them and others out of business and yet they are here year after year not only with the same theatres, but in some instances, with more theatres," he said.

"Since when has the right to buy as you want and what you want, become more sacred under the Constitution than the right to choose your own customer and decide whether you will keep your product or just not let a man pick what he wants at his own price?" he asked.

Mr. Kent pointed out that it would be impossible to comply with the requirements for a synopsis under the present methods of production without serious danger of violating the law. Proponents of the bill account for less than ten per cent of the revenues of major companies, he charged.

Enactment of the bill would seriously increase the cost of films to exhibitors, Mr. Kent said.

Loew's Dividend

Loew's Wednesday declared $1.62½ quarter dividend on the $6.50 cumulative preferred stock payable May 15th to stockholders of record April 28th.

Text of Senator Neely's Measure

lease all such films or permit him to lease none; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in a block or group of two or more at a designated lump-sum price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which total or lump-sum price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation (a) as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exhibition, or (b) as tends to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any number of numbers thereof, or (c) that the effect of the lease or offer to lease of such films may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films; or to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition films in any other manner or by any other means the effect of which would be to defeat the purpose of this Act.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly to transport or cause to be transported in commerce any motion-picture film which is leased, or intended to be leased, in violation of subdivision (1) of this section.

Sec. 4. It shall be unlawful for any distributor of motion-picture films in commerce to lease or offer to lease for public exhibition any motion-picture film over two thousand feet in length unless such distributor shall furnish the exhibitor at or before the time of making such lease or offer to lease a complete and true synopsis of the contents of such film. Such synopsis shall be made a part of the lease and shall include (a) an outline of the story, incidents, and scenes depicted or to be depicted, and (b) a statement describing the manner of treatment of dialogs concerning any scenes depicting vice, crime, or suggestion of sexual passion. It is the purpose of this section to make available to the exhibitor sufficient information concerning the contents of the film and the manner of treatment to enable him to determine whether he desires to select the film for exhibition and later to determine whether the film is fairly described by the synopsis.

Sec. 5. (1) Every person who violates section 3, or who fails to furnish the synopsis required by section 4, or knowingly makes any false statement in such synopsis, shall be deemed guilty of a misdeameanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

(2) The several district courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this Act, and it shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney General, to institute proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations. Such proceedings may be by way of petition setting forth the case and praying that such violation shall be enjoined or otherwise prohibited. When the parties complained of shall have been duly notified of such petition, the court shall proceed, as soon as may be, to the hearing and determination of the case; and pending such petition, and before final decree, the court may at any time make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises. Whenever it shall appear to the court before which any such proceeding may be pending that the ends of justice require that other parties should be brought before the court, the court may cause them to be summoned whether they reside in the district in which the court is held or not, and subpoenas to that end may be served in any district by the marshal thereof.

Sec. 6. If any provision of this Act is declared unconstitutional or the applicability thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and the applicability of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 7. This Act shall become effective twelve months after its enactment.

WARNERS TELL WORLD FROM DODGE CITY

Hoopla Conclave Extraordinary Sells the Motion Picture as Entertainment for the Many

by JAMES CUNNINGHAM
at Dodge City

Here on the plains of Kansas showmanship and history have made spectacular rendezvous, specifically for that Warner Brothers' ambitious "Dodge City," but also broadly for the stimulation of the cause of the motion picture as America's dominant entertainment.

America has been hearing, from this little city on the sunkissed prairie, as never before it has heard about a motion picture. The rootin', tootin', shootin' picaresque of the 1870 has been the pretext for giving the customers a treatment of hell-roaring, open-throttle salesmanship for the motion picture as entertainment.

Telling About "A" Picture

As the tumult and the shouting subsides, the reflection comes that the indications are that more can be done for our industry by telling the customers about "a" motion picture than has been done by institutional campaigns about "the" motion picture as "your best entertainment."

In a Pullman stateroom on the next track is S. Charles Einfeld, who went through that campaign last year and has, it appears, decided that the general issue calls for concrete answer of the only kind that the consumers can understand—which is to say something actually taking place and involving people, names, not abstractions.

The round-up has included receptions official and unofficial for the stars, including Errol Flynn, Olivia DeHavilland, Victor Jory, Guinn Williams, Frank McHugh, Jane Wyman, Gloria Dickson, Rosemary Lane, Pricilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jean Parker, Claire Windsor, Anita Louise, Eddie Foy, Lya Lys, John Payne, Marie Wilson, Alan Hale, Ann Sheridan, Allan Jones, Mary Brian, Mary Carlisle, John Garfield and Humphrey Bogart.

Parades and Rodeo

There have been luncheons, parades, a rodeo, a street dance, parties everywhere and of course the simultaneous world premiere of the picture "Dodge City" at three theatres with personal appearances of the stars at all three.

Additional contribution to both sight and sound came with the concurrent Kansas Music Festival with forty-five bands from all parts of the state participating. It seemed an appropriate time for the dedication of Dodge City's new municipal stadium, which was done.

When the trains pull out and the customers go home things are going to seem a bit quiet hereabouts for the survivors and residents.

Pegs and Pegs

Nothing seems to make news so effectively as an event.

Dodge City this week-end of 1930 is an event. Press agents talk about "news pegs" on which to hang copy. In that category of metaphor this has been a picket fence. Here we have names, stars galore, three governors and something going on or coming off every few minutes. There has been unparalleled coverage by 193 radio stations and by an unprecedented assemblage of correspondents of the public, trade and fan press.

By demonstration before, and participation by, Governor Ratner of Kansas, Governor Carr of Colorado and Governor Miles of New Mexico, official and political eyes of the Southwest have been made aware that the motion picture is something of considerably more American significance than a tape of pictures that come in a can from elsewhere. The milling of thousands of the thrilled assemblage of the prairie people were evidence enough to the politically acute that the motion picture is something rather more than a lightsome fancy with its public.

Paramount Officials Leave for Coast

Paramount home office executives left this week for Hollywood for final studio conferences preceding the formulation of the product program for 1939-40. Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution, and Robert M. Gillham, director of advertising and publicity, left New York by train Wednesday for Chicago where Mr. Agnew will confer with Chicago exchange men and Mr. Gillham will discuss final details of the Omaha premiere of "Union Pacific" on April 28th with Cliff Lewis, studio advertising director. Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Edwin Weisl, Russell Holman and Leon Netter will leave Friday and will join Mr. Agnew and Mr. Gillham in Chicago for the remainder of the trip to Hollywood. The conferences with Y. Frank Freeman and studio officials are expected to last three weeks.

Colony Announces Six

Colony Pictures, which is headed by Max and Arthur Alexander, has announced a program of six features, all for states rights release, as are, in addition, their six westerns starring Ken Maynard. The films are: "Emergency Landing," "Extra Edition," "Dead Men's Island," "Golden Glove Kid," "Military School" and "Road King."

Columbia Exchange Changes

Wayne C. Hall has been promoted to branch manager for Columbia in Los Angeles, from Denver. Bob Hill of Salt Lake City is taking over the Denver territory. George Becker has resigned as Columbia salesman in Cleveland and has been succeeded by Oscar Bloom. Jack Share has joined the Cleveland staff.

NEW YORK STRIKE SETTLEMENT SEEN AS MEDIATION GOES AHEAD

Berkeley Henderson of Anti-Trust Division of Department of Justice Takes Over the Inquiry; Other Union Fronts

Confinement of the "Local 306 strike" to New York home office projection rooms and exchanges, and even a settlement, appeared probabilities at mid-week, as, in an atmossphere of truce, representatives of the union, the large companies, and their circuits and the independent circuit holders of Local 306 contracts had met with the New York State Mediation Board at 250 West 57th Street, New York City, and were awaiting possible action by the Department of Justice.

Strike Static

The strike, which had threatened to cripple the entire industry from studios to the theatres, was static at mid-week. The union was not attempting to picket home offices, or to ask aid from technicians, stagehands, and home office units of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees and American Federation of Labor, and, especially, not calling out its members in the more than 1,000 New York theatres. The majors witheld their week-old injunction papers, pending possible settlement of the dispute. The Department of Justice anti-trust division was investigating the strike, for possible action on anti-trust grounds, the majors having claimed that to accede to the Local 306 demands that they stop film delivery to theatres not employing 306 members, would make them partners in a violation of the anti-trust laws. On Monday of this week Berkeley W. Henderson, of the anti-trust division, arrived from Washington and took over the investigation from Joseph E. Brill and William McGovern of the United States district attorney's office.

On Wednesday Mr. Hnderson was awaiting instructions from Washington, after submitting a report on the situation. The meetings at the mediation board were held up, pending the Washington action.

The strike, which began last Monday, was called by the New York projectionists' local after the major companies, meeting with union lawyers and officials and then again on March 26, at the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America defied the union demands that film deliveries be refused the circuits and theatres employing members of the Empire State union, the only New York rival of the Local 306. The majors based their refusal on the grounds that agreement to the union's demands would render them liable to lawsuits for breach of contracts by the theatres suffering non-delivery of films; would make the majors, in effect, organizers for the union; would cause the majors to suffer losses of revenue; would make the majors partners in a conspiracy to injure the business of theatres in competition with theatres owned by distributor affiliates; would, in effect, make them partners in a conspiracy with the union to destroy the business of theatre owners with whom the Local 306 had disputes; would, in this connection, render the majors liable to conviction in the pending anti-trust suits in New York, by the Department of Justice.

Solutions Proposed

Union circles this week had advanced a number of possible solutions, without further strike action: one was the declaration by an official agency, such as the mediation board, that the contracts between Empire State and its theatre employers are illegal. The mediation board denied that it had such power. Another solution would be absorption of Empire State by the Local 306, if the theatre contract partners would allow. Up to mid-week, the two circuits, Century and Cocalis, employing Empire State, declared the contracts held with Empire were "satisfactory."

ARSONIST FOILED BY SAFETY FILM

The police in Red Bank, N. J., are seeking a would-be arsonist who overlooked one important thing when he spread hundreds of feet of motion picture film through the rectory of St. Anthony's Church there and tossed in a lighted match to complete his handiwork.

He didn't notice that on the margin of the film was printed:—"Safety film, non-inflammable."

Local 306 officers have termed the Empire State union "a company union" and have declared that its members would "like to join Local 306. Contracts of the Empire with its theatre employers are believed to have a two week cancellation clause—by the theatre employer only.

The major companies, last week, asked the advice of Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, this was done through the request of Colonel William Donovan, for the Irving Trust Company, receivers for RKO, now undergoing reorganization "for advice" on how to handle the threatened strike. The other company attorneys were present at the hearing as "interested parties." Judge Bondy's "advice" was to deliver film to theatre accounts, "to all practical limits"; and to seek legal action (i.e., an injunction). Injunction papers were drawn up late last week, but were being held this week, pending settlement of the strike, and in appreciation of the union's promise not to extend the strike to all New York theatres.

Jurisdiction of Department

The question to be determined, apart from the justification for the strike, was the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice. Mr. Henderson, and the other attorneys, had, by this week, questioned all of the leading participants, except those members of the union who were reported "out of town." Department of Justice findings that the dispute involved only a request by the union that the majors enter into conspiracy with them to cripple the business of the independent Empire-State-serviced unions was expected to result in anti-trust action. The finding that the dispute basically involved wage and hours, on the other hand, was expected to bring the dispute under the provisions of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, in which a Federal department would be unable to interfere.

Only if the dispute involved interstate commerce could the Labor Department's Conciliation service and the National Labor Relations Board become interested. Grounds on which it might be claimed that the dispute is interstate are that the exchange employees are working in offices which distribute film to New Jersey, and possibly, Connecticut. On the other hand, the Local 306 demand upon the majors, and the cause of the whole dispute—employment by certain New York theatres of Empire State members, not Local 306 members—is palpably local.

Union Moves Elsewhere

Other union fronts this week appear as follows:

In Hollywood, the possibility appeared nearer of compromise on the charges against the producers and the IATSE officers, by Jeffe Kibre, minority leader of Local 37, technicians. Dr. Towne Nylander, lately re-instated regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, said that certain compromises had been made and other differences would possibly be adjusted at the conference Wednesday, between Mr. Kibre, IATSE officers, and himself.

In Hollywood, also, the dispute between deposed officers of Local 37 and the international IATSE officers and representatives took a revealing turn over the weekend, when the local sheriff deprived of their badges the bodyguard for A. Brigham Rose, attorney for Local 37, and Harold Smith, an IATSE representative. The badges give their wearers permission to carry firearms.

International officers on Tuesday won the first round of the fight for control of Local 37 when Superior Judge Emmet H. Wilson dismissed the application of deposed local officers for a permanent injunction restraining the IATSE from interference. Union members attended a mass meeting Sunday which officers of the International said was an attempt by CIO to gain a foothold in Hollywood.

Also in Hollywood, the Screen Directors Guild negotiating committee, headed by Frank Capra, expected to have under consideration this week, the final draft of a proposed agreement with the producers; and the agreements between the producers and the Screen Writers' Guild are still pending, after the latter last week had rejected producer proposals. The writers have charged the producers, before the NLRB, of unfairness, and the agreements are to be reached under the implication by the NLRE that it will resume hearings on the charges, unless the producers make every effort to meet demands.

IATSE Meets in Akron June 4th

The national IATSE will meet at the Portage Hotel, Akron, Ohio, on June 4-5, the annual summer convention. About 250 delegates and guests are expected.

In New York, the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union has signed a two year contract with the Big U Film Exchange and the Universal home office management. The agreement provides for wage increases, regulates hours, and settles the closed shop question by stipulating that present non-union employees may remain outside the union, but that all future workers must join the union. The union is organizing the workers in other home offices and exchanges.

In New York also, the Negro Youth Association of Corona, has won the right, from Queens County Supreme Court Justice Stoddard, to picket the Palace Theatre, Corona, because that theatre reportedly does not employ Negroes.

In Massachusetts, the state labor Relations Commission has ruled that theatre managers and publicity men are not "employers" as defined by the State Labor Relations Law.

In Vancouver, British Columbia, the Vancouver, New Westminster and District Trades and Labor Council, and the Projectionists Union Local 348 are appearing a judgment for damages and an injunction restraining them from picketing the Hollywood Theatre.

The American Federation of Actors will hold elections for council on May 9. Renominated were Rudy Vallee, Sally Rand, Jed Dooley, and Walter J. Diggs. Nominated were Joe Smith, Avis Andrews, Lou Taylor, and Andy Alyn.

The Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers' union, also attempting to include major company home office publicity staffs, is beginning a nation-wide drive. The union claims to have completely organized the legitimate field, and the new drive is on motion picture theatres and home offices.

Hotels Threatened

In New York, hotels were threatened with a strike of talent in the many benefits and performances which they run and stage, as the result of the protest by Actor's Equity against the rise in hotel rates, announced last week by the Hotel Association of New York City, in anticipation of the New York World's Fair. The hotel men, in announcing the rise in rates, claimed it would "clean out" the hotels in the Times Square area, to the benefit of the hotels involved, and help the hotels generally, inasmuch as it was claimed hotel rates were always "too low"; and that, the business which the Fair would bring to New York hotels, would be vitiated in effect by low rates and by the tenure of the many actor tenants in the Times Square area, who have been paying low monthly and weekly rates. The actor's organization protested to the city officials, and to the hotel officers, pointing out that many actors were almost indigent, that they regarded the Times Square hotels as their "homes"; and that, driven to other parts of the city, they would be among people "who do not understand, nor like them."

A compromise was being reached this week.

The Trade and Commerce Bar Association this week, through the report of its committee on industrial relations, revealed its belief that the warfare between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization was hampering the National Labor Relations Board. The committee found that the board, as a consequence, had not a "fair test"; that the unions had "hurt their cause with the public"; and that employers, as a consequence, were "less favorably disposed" towards unionism.

St. Louis Union Court Trial Ends

The trial of the suit of 19 members of Motion Picture Operators Local 143 of St. Louis to oust John P. (Big) Nick, "boss" of the union, Clyde Weston, business agent, and George W. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, from control of the business and finances of their union ended abruptly in circuit court there last Thursday when stipulations were filed stating that additional testimony would be repetitious. Judge Ernest F. Oakley took the case under advisement.

The stipulation provides that all vouchers, canceled checks and stubs issued by the union since 1937 and an audit made since that time will become evidence.

For three days prior to the termination of the trial Robert Tomsen, former business agent of Local 143, described the ways and by-ways of a labor czar.

In 1936, Tomsen testified, Nick instructed operators not to do any repair work on sound equipment when it went out of order. Someone asked "Can't we even replace a blown fuse," and Nick replied "If theatre owners want to keep going let them sign a contract with the Co-Operative Sound Service Co." This company formerly was owned by Weston, who says he got rid of it before becoming business agent of the local. All of its employees are members of Nick's union.

Browne, the witness related, talked to the members of the union and said Nick was in complete charge and that his word was law and final, adding, "I would not hesitate to suspend a member or revoke the charter of a local that failed to comply with the mandate of the international office."

On the first day of the hearing Clarence Kaimman, theatre owner, testified that he and Louis Landau, another owner, and both members of a "defense committee" of picture theatre proprietors, had turned over to Edward M. Brady, a member of the State Legislature and designated as a henchman of Nick's, $10,000 at the Jefferson-Gravois Bank in 1936 during a time when negotiations for a wage increase for operators was in progress. The raises were not made after the fund was paid, he said.

Nick, Brady and Weston are under indictment on charges of extortion in connection with the payment in 1936 and another in 1937.

Kaimman testified that he and Landau went to the bank from a meeting of the exhibitors' negotiating committee and that he signed a check for $10,000, which was cashed.

Bondy Confirms Plan for RKO; Officers Named

In a 13-word decision, Federal Judge William Bondy filed his confirmation of the reorganization plan of RKO on Monday, thus virtually ending the company's six years spent in the courts. The actual consummation of the plan, involving technical legal steps, is expected to follow in short order.

The brief text of Judge Bondy's decision said: "The plan of reorganization approved by the court is hereby confirmed. Settle order." Formal execution of the order, actually bringing the corporation out of 77-B, is expected this week. Attorneys now have to submit a detailed formal order, file a new certificate of incorporation for the proposed new company which will be incorporated in Delaware, and exchange new securities for old. Under the plan stockholders will receive one share of new common for six shares of the old, and debenture holders will get their money in full.

The order carried approval of the proposed officers and directors. George J. Schaefer will be president, Ned Depinet vice-president and William Mallard secretary and treasurer. Floyd B. Odlum, president of the Atlas Corporation, which sponsored the plan, will be chairman of the board. The directors will be Mr. Schaefer, Mr. Depinet, Thomas P. Durell, Raymond Bill, Frederick L. Ehrman, N. Peter Rathon, W. G. Van Schmus and Lunsford P. Yandell.

Appeals from the plan are being taken by Ernest W. Stirn of Milwaukee, Fabian Realty Corporation, Copia Realty Company, and H. Cassel and Company, stock brokers.

Roosevelt Pleads for Exiles At Yeshiva College Dinner

At a dinner given last Sunday night to raise funds for Yeshiva College, sponsored by the Motion Picture Industries Committee, of which W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, was chairman, James Roosevelt, guest speaker, said that "We can not go forward in the world of entertainment unless we aid the liberal arts and sciences."

Other speakers included Louis Nizer, George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, who also spoke for Mr. Van Schmus, prevented from attending by illness, M. H. Aylesworth, publisher of the World Telegram, Dr. Nelson Mead, president of the College of the City of New York, Bernard Revel, president of Yeshiva College, and Professor Moritz Werner. The speeches were broadcast over WMCA from 11:15 to 11:45.

Entertainment was provided by Jan Pearce and Viola Philo of the Music Hall, Leonard Warren of the Metropolitan Opera, and the Music Hall Glee Club.

Gus Schaefer, formerly Continental European manager for Paramount for many years, has been given a special assignment by the RKO foreign department covering Latin American markets. He sailed Saturday for Central and South America and is expected back in New York about June 1st.

Film Daily says "this is one of the greatest emotional heart dramas ever produced and a sure Academy Award winner. The outstanding performance of motion picture's No. One Artist—Bette Davis. We are ready to stake our reputation that Dark Victory ranks as one of the Really Great motion pictures." Hollywood Reporter wrote, "this is a magnificent boxoffice smash; a picture which rises head and shoulders above any screen achievement of contemporary life; it will hold audiences breathless during its entire length." Boxoffice stated, "Dark Victory will rock boxoffices with returns." Jay Emanuel Publications said "this is a top grosser. If Warner Bros. had deliberately made a picture just to capitalize on Davis' winning the Academy Award they could not have made a better vehicle." Motion Picture Herald heralded this as a "made-to-marquee-measure attraction!" Showmen's Trade Review said "Bette Davis tops all her previous roles" Independent Exhibitors' Film Bulletin said, "one of the season's best boxoffice bets." Wrote Film Curb: "Bette's best!"

MAJORS COMPLETE TRADE PACT; OWNERS STUDY IT; ALLIED REJECTS

Program, Dealing Basically with 16 Subjects, Would Apply for Two Years Starting with 1939-40 Season Contracts

The large distributors last Thursday night finally presented to exhibitors a trade practice program for effecting self-regulation in distribution-exhibition and with the hope of establishing more harmonious relations between the buyers and sellers of motion pictures.

Applying for two years to all contracts made after Jan. 1, 1939, and starting with the 1939-40 season, the program comes after eight months of actual formulation, three years of sporadic negotiation and ten years of attempted action, which began on December 10, 1929, when leaders gathered at the Union League Club in New York.

Basically, the completed document deals with 16 subjects:

1. Cancellation privileges of 20 per cent where rentals average $100; 15 per cent on $100 to $250 averages, and ten per cent on averages over $250.
2. Distributors agree to list productions planned and in work for each season.
3. Distributors having a feature for which there is "great public demand" shall offer exhibitors not taking a full program because of previous commitments a lesser number of pictures including the feature for which there is demand.
4. Preferred playing time on flat rentals or on guarantees against percentage shall not be required.
5. Separate score charges shall be eliminated beginning with 1939-40 contracts.
6. Theatres shall be able to obtain some run of a distributors' product, provided the theatre is not obsolete and the exhibitor is reputable.
7. To relieve against "selling away to a chain," distributors shall not license product away from existing customers to new or other customers for the sole reason that the new licensee is a customer or prospective customer in other situations.

"Forcing" Shorts Barred

8. Forcing of short subject, newsreel, trailer and western feature sales is eliminated.
9. Distributor on giving notice of availability of each picture shall notify exhibitor of the price allocation thereof, except that such notice shall be given not later than 14 days after the national release date to first run exhibitors in key cities.

Simplifying Agreement

10. Distributors will attempt to simplify the form of existing license agreement.
11. On selective license agreements exhibitors must exercise such right within 21 days after notice of availability is mailed.
12. Distributors will not prohibit exhibitor's delivery of a picture if a prior picture on release has not been delivered through the distributor's failure under agreements where accounts are required to play pictures in the order of release.
13. No distributor shall coerce an exhibitor into signing a contract or threat to build or otherwise acquire a theatre for operation in competition to him.
14. Subjects to be handled by arbitration shall, beside most of the aforementioned, also include license performances, over-buying, unreasonable clearance, but barring license fees and other terms and conditions.
15. Effective date: Agreement to apply to all contracts made after January 1, 1939 for 1939-40 product and for all subsequent years.

The complete text of the revised program of trade practices presented by the distributors to the MPTOA, to Allied States Association, and to unaffiliated exhibitor organizations, appears in this issue, starting on page 44, together with a brief comparison of the provisions with the requests in the MPTOA's 10-point program, the Allied revision of the first draft, and a comparison of the original and revised drafts.

Copy to Justice Department

On Thursday evening, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, acting as chairman of the distributors' trade program committee, mailed copies of the draft to Allied States Association, to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to state exhibitors not affiliated either with Allied or the MPTOA, and to the Deparment of Justice, which has pending several anti-trust suits against the distributors. The Department in its New York suit seeks to eliminate circuit operation by distributors and change trade practices generally.

The Department is expected to make no official expression concerning the document. Broadway has heard that in certain distribution quarters the hope is nurtured that the program could be used in some way as the basis of a consent decree in the Government's suit.

Allied Rejects Proposals

Insofar as national MPTOA and most of the state exhibitor units are concerned, little or no objection to the draft is expected. But the situation differs with Allied, which on Monday flatly rejected the proposals and threw its full support behind the Neely bill to bar block booking. (Senate subcommittee hearings on the Neely bill are reported on page 31).

The position of Allied was disclosed in a formal statement by the executive committee following a meeting Sunday in Washington, at which it was voted to give no consideration to the draft and to call no special meeting. The committee said the latest draft contains a re-wording of certain of the substantive proposales "but offers no change whatever in the skeleton outline of arbitration contained in the second draft."

"The trade practice proposals submitted by the distributors not only are incomplete, but they do not pretend to abolish compulsory block booking and blind selling, and do not touch the subject of theatre divorcement. The proposals do not provide relief at all commensurate with that asked by the Government in its suit."

Distributors Go Ahead

The distributors nevertheless are prepared to go ahead with enactment of the program for any and all exhibitors desiring it, and in the form which they have presented. "So far as the concessions are concerned this is as far as the companies can go," said Mr. Rodgers.

State exhibitor organizations started this week to study the document.

C. E. Williams, president of the Nebraska and Western Iowa MPTO, approved the program Wednesday and said he would call an organization meeting.

In Denver, the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain States met Tuesday and convene again next week. Some members, it was said, favor industry arbitration as against Government interference.

The directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California met in Los Angeles Thursday.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York postponed a meeting until its attorneys have had more time.

Leo F. Wolcott, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, calling a meeting at Des Moines, remarked, "These proposals apparently bear close relationship to the former proposals rejected as inadequate."

MPTOA's national officers were sending copies to their state affiliates.

The MPTO of Virginia, unaffiliated, was to meet this week.

Each exhibitor organization received with the draft a letter written by Mr. Rodgers, who disclosed that United Artists would not participate in the program. Later in the week Murray Silverstone, executive of UA, explained that "because of the setup of United Artists, we never were and could not be a part of the trade pact. We have 11 producers, each being separate and individual entities entirely independent. . . .

". . . many of the points . . . actually have been in operation since the inception of the company twenty years ago. . . ."

In his letter (see page 48) Mr. Rodgers advised that a joint conference of the distributors' and exhibitors' representatives will be sought with the Department of Justice at an early date in an effort to obtain its approval of the program and to consider methods of putting it into effect.

Appeal Ban on "Birth"; Censor Exemptions Sought in Ohio

State Education Department officials have received the record of preliminary court proceedings on "The Birth of a Baby," indicating the formal motion for an appeal to the Appellate Division, Third Department, in Albany.

Supreme Court Judge Pierce Russell of Troy denied the motion made on behalf of the American Committee for Maternal Welfare, which has fought for the public exhibition of "The Birth of a Baby" for the past 18 months.

H. E. Orazio Orazi Is Italian Film Head

H. E. Orazio Orazi is the new motion picture chief of Italy. His official title is director general of the motion picture department of the Ministry of Popular Culture. He is 32 years old and was formerly the federal secretary of the Fascist Party in Rome. He succeeds Luigi Freddi, who has been appointed vice-president of the official studios.

COMPLETE TEXT OF TRADE PRACTICE CODE AS REVISED BY DISTRIBUTORS

PREAMBLE

The signatories hereto, being distributors, exhibitors and organized groups of exhibitors of motions pictures, hereby severally adopt the following as a code of fair practice, hereby severally binding themselves to the observance of the principles, policies and practices set forth herein in the licensing, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in continental United States.

I. Exclusion Privilege

(1) Exclusion as a matter of right. Whenever an exhibitor shall have entered into a license agreement for all of the feature motion pictures ("features") offered[1] at any one time by a distributor for a run in any situation[2], such exhibitor shall have the right to exclude therefrom, without payment of the license fee therefor, not to exceed twenty per cent. of the total number of features contracted for, if the average of the license fees for all features contracted for shall not exceed $100.00 per picture; fifteen per cent., if such average is in excess of $100.00 and not in excess of $250.00; and ten per cent., if such average is in excess of $250.00.

In determining the number of features that may be excluded, fractions of one-half or more shall be counted as one and fractions of less than one-half shall not be counted.

In computing the average of the license fees for all features contracted for the license fees of features based in whole or in part on a percentage of the gross receipts of exhibition shall be included in the average of the license fees of all the distributor's features of the preceding motion picture season which were exhibited upon a percentage basis for the same run in such situation. If none of the distributor's features was so exhibited during the preceding season, then such average of license fees shall be agreed upon by the distributor and the exhibitor and included in the license agreement.

For the purpose of determining the rights of exclusion of an exhibitor hereunder, so-called "Westerns" (as such term is understood in the motion picture industry),[3] re-issues and foreigns (except such as may have been produced outside of the United States in the English language by an American producer or distributor or subsidiary therof) shall not be included in the number of features offered or contracted for as above provided, but shall be deemed to have been offered in separate groups and, if contracted for, the features in each group shall be subject to exclusion on the basis set forth above and, if included with other features in the same license agreement, shall be separately listed.

The right of an exhibitor to exercise his exclusion privilege herein provided for shall be subject to the following terms and conditions:

(a) a first run exhibitor shall give the distributor written notice with respect to each feature he elects to exclude within fourteen days after the mailing by distributor of the first notice of availability thereof; any other exhibitor shall give such notice within fourteen days after the close of the first exhibition of such feature in the city or town in which his theatre is located or the mailing of the notice of availability thereof, whichever is later, provided that if such feature is not exhibited on a prior run in such city or town and notice of availability shall have been previously mailed to such exhibitor, the distributor shall mail to such exhibitor a new notice of availability thereof and notice of exhibitor's election to

[1] An exhibitor for a portion of distributor's feature shall be deemed to have contracted for "all of the feature motion pictures offered" if the distributor shall have offered only such portion to exhibitor.

[2] An exhibitor shall be deemed to have contracted "for a run in any situation" if he contracts for the right to exhibit each feature for a particular run either at a specified theatre or upon an "or" basis, i.e., at one of two or more specified theatres.

[3] Only "Westerns" which are not of the usual character and type of, and are inexpensively produced as compared with, the distributor's general line of features for the particular season in question.

New Trade Practice Agreement Draft Compared with Exhibitors' Proposals

TRANSLATED into legal verbiage and with slight additions and changes, the new draft of the distributors' proposals for a trade practice agreement, published last week, is substantially the same as that decided upon early in December. The most notable addition is the section outlining a plan for the establishment of arbitration boards, their personnel and rules of procedure. Also, the paragraphs covering non-theatrical competition and condemning the falsification of box office receipts have been eliminated.

In the table below, the summary of each paragraph of the new draft is followed by a comparison with the corresponding points as covered in the Allied proposals published in Motion Picture Herald February 18th, the ten-point program of the MPTOA, which has been their basis for negotiation for last three years, and the original draft of the distributors' proposals as published in Motion Picture Herald December 10th.

I. Exclusion Privilege: Allowing cancellation of 20 per cent where rentals average $100; 15 per cent where rentals average from $100 to $250, and ten per cent where average is over $250.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Same except for minor word changes.	Covered in Point 1 of 10-point program.	Same except for minor word changes.

II. Trade Announcement: Providing that distributors shall list productions planned and in work for each season, such announcement to be subject to uncertainties of the business.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Elimination asked.	Not mentioned.	Same as original.

III. Public Demand for Exceptional Feature: Distributors having a feature for which there is great public demand shall offer exhibitors not taking full program because of previous commitments a lesser number of pictures including the feature for which there is demand. The question of pictures in demand and the number to be offered are subject to arbitration.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Asked concession without "public demand" limitation.	Covered in Point 6 of 10-point program. (Relief on overbuying.)	"Public demand" limitation is new; other terms are the same.

IV. Preferred Playing Time: Providing that preferred playing time shall not be designated when film is sold on flat rental or on percentage when a guarantee is included, but when on straight percentage designation shall be by mutual agreement. Arbitration provided.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Notification time increased from five to seven days as asked. Otherwise unchanged.	Covered in Point 5 of 10-point program. (Relief on designated dates.)	Terms unchanged except for increase of notification time.

exclude such feature shall be given within fourteen days after the mailing of such new notice;

(b) the exhibitor shall not, at the time of giving such written notice, be in material default under the license agreement[4];

(c) exclusions shall be made proportionately among the several price brackets provided for in the license agreement[5]; but any number of exclusions to which an exhibitor is entitled may be made from the lowest price bracket;

(d) if any exhibitor, having the right to do so, fails to exclude one or more features from higher brackets, he shall, for each such feature, have the right to exclude one feature from the lowest bracket; provided, however, that if at the time there are no unplayed available features in the lowest bracket, he may exclude a feature from the next lowest bracket.

Upon the exclusion of any feature under this Section (1), the license therefor shall terminate and all rights thereto shall revert to the distributor and such exclusion shall be charged against the number of exclusions to which the exhibitor may be entitled, whether or not a new license agreement for the exhibition of such feature is subsequently entered into by such exhibitor.

All disputes growing out of the excercise or attempted exercise by an exhibitor of the exclusion privilege provided for in this Section (1) shall be subject to arbitration.

(2) Exclusion for cause. An exhibitor shall have the right, in addition to the exclusion privilege provided for in Section (1) above, to exclude from any license agreement any feature which may be locally offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds, provided he shall give the distributor written notice, not later than fourteen days after the conclusion of its first exhibition in the exchange territory in which the exhibitor is served, of his desire to exclude such feature, specifying the reasons therefor. Upon the exclusion of any feature under this provision, the license therefor shall terminate and all rights thereto shall revert to the distributor. Any dispute as to whether or not a feature is in fact so locally offensive shall be subject to arbitration. The arbitrators shall not, in deciding such question, take into consideration the decision of any arbitrators with respect to the same feature except only that they may do so if such decision concerns the same feature in the same local area in which exhibitor's theatre is located.

II. Trade Announcement

Each distributor shall make a general trade announcement at or prior to the beginning of each of its seasons, containing such information as it may be practicable to give of all features completed or actually in production then intended for release during such season, it being understood that the completion of such features actually in production and the making of such other features which it is intended to produce are subject to the hazards and uncertainties of the business and they may not be completed or produced, as planned.

If in any town or in any city, or section of a metropolitan city, an exhibitor shall request of a distributor the license for a run in any situation[6] of a feature, having such an exceptional and outstanding appeal as to create a natural and spontaneous national public demand and for which there is a spontaneous and natural public demand in the town, city or section of the metropolitan city in which his theatre (s) is located, and which would not be shown in such town, city or section unless licensed for exhibition to exhibitor, and the distributor offers to exhibitor a greater number of features than exhibitor because his playing

Same as Paragraph V, Section 1, of Allied proposals.	Included in Points 7 and 9 of 10-point program.	Same as Paragraph V, Section A, of original.

VI. Regular Customer: To relieve against "selling away to a chain," distributors shall not license product away from existing customers to new or other customers for the sole reason that the new licensee is a customer or prospective customer in other situations. Arbitration provided.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Substantially same as Paragraph V, Section 2, of Allied draft.	Included in Points 7 and 9 of 10-point program.	Same, except for wording, as Paragraph V, Section B, of original.

VII. Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.: No exhibitor shall be required to buy short subjects, newsreels, trailers or westerns as a condition of receiving features. Arbitration rules and limitations provided.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Westerns included as recommended.	Asked in Point 4 of 10-point program.	Same, except for inclusion of westerns.

VIII. Score Charges: These charges, if any, shall be added to and consolidated with flat rental fees on 1938-39 product, but commencing with the 1939-40 season there shall be no separate score charge for features licensed on either a flat rental or a percentage basis.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Same as Paragraph VII in Allied draft.	Point 3 of 10-point program.	Same, except for wording, as Paragraph VII of original.

IX. Allocation of Features: Distributor on giving notice of availability of each picture shall notify exhibitor of the price allocation thereof, except that such notice shall be given not later than 14 days after the national release date to first run exhibitors in key cities.

[4] Without limiting the generality of the term "material default," an exhibitor shall in any event be deemed so to be in material default if, at the time of giving notice of exclusion, he has failed to pay the lecense fee due for any feature theretofore exhibited by him or if, at such time, he has failed reasonably to perform the license agreement with respect to the playing of features theretofore made available to him thereunder.

[5] Example: If the agreement licenses forty-eight features, of which eight are in the highest bracket, twelve are in the next to highest bracket, sixteen in the next to lowest bracket, and the remaining twelve in the lowest bracket, and, if the exhibitor has the right to exclude ten per cent. (five features), then not more than one feature may be eliminated from the highest bracket, not more than one from the next to highest bracket, not more than two from the next to lowest bracket, and the remaining one feature from the lowest bracket; or all five or any lesser number may be eliminated from the lowest bracket.

[6] "For a run in any situation" as defined in Section (1) of Article I, footnote 2.

EXHIBITOR SUGGESTIONS FOLLOWED

time will be so absorbed by previous commitments for features can be without altering his operating policy reasonably exhibit in such situation, the distributor will then offer to such exhibitor such lesser number of features, including such requested feature, as may be agreed upon or, lacking such agreement, such number as may be determined by arbitration to be the maximum number of features which can be reasonably be exhibited by exhibitor in such situation; provided that the distributor shall have the right at any time before the arbitrators shall have made their award to offer or license all or any of its features to any other exhibitor.

An exhibitor who has been a customer of a distributor and who has refused to contract for such distributor's features for the situation involved shall have no right to attempt to use this Article to compel such distributor to license to him from time to time its outstanding features.

Any dispute as to whether such requested feature is an "Exceptional Feature" as above described or as to the number of features which can reasonably be exhibited by exhibitor in such situation or as to whether exhibitor is so attempting to use this Article, shall be submitted to arbitration by exhibitor within fourteen days after the refusal by distributor to license to exhibitor the number of features requested by the exhibitor.

IV. Preferred Playing Time

(1) Flat rentals and guarantees. A distributor will not exercise the right to designate features for preferred playing time which it may have under a license agreement with respect to any features, the license fee for which is either a fixed sum or is computed in whole or in part upon a percentage of the gross receipts of exhibition with a fixed minimum sum guaranteed.

(2) Features Unsuitable for Preferred Playing Time. If a distributor shall exercise the right to designate features for preferred playing time which it may have under a license agreement with respect to any feature licensed solely on a percentage basis, which is claimed by exhibitor to be unsuitable for such playing time and if exhibitor shall give distributor written notice of his objections thereto and the reasons therefor within seven days after the mailing of notice of such designation in case of a first run in a city in which an exchange is located or in any other case within seven days after the close of its first exhibition in the exchange city from which exhibitor is served or the mailing of the notice of designation, whichever is later, the question of such suitability shall be determined by agreement between distributor and exhibitor or, lacking such agreement, by arbitration. Unless distributor rejects the claim of exhibitor by mailing notice to exhibitor within seven days after the mailing by exhibitor of such notice of objections as above provided, distributor shall be deemed to have withdrawn such designation. Should distributor, however, reject such claim, exhibitor shall commence arbitration proceedings to determine the dispute within seven days after the mailing of such notice of rejection.

If the feature is determined, by agreement or arbitration, to be unsuitable for the designated preferred playing time, or the designation thereof be deemed withdrawn as above provided, distributor may, at its option, either (a) designate the feature to be exhibited upon the same license terms on other days of the week or (b) then or thereafter substitute another feature to be exhibited on preferred playing time upon the terms designated for the feature objected to; in the latter case the license fee for the feature originally designated shall be such as may be designated by the distributor within its right under the license agreement.

How the Practice Plans Compare

XII. Playing Features in the Order of Release: Distributors will not prohibit exhibitor's delivery of a picture if a prior picture on release has not been delivered through the distributor's failure under agreements where accounts are required to play pictures in the order of release. Arbitration provided.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Arbitration asked.	Not mentioned.	Arbitration not mentioned.

XIII. Coercing Contracts: No distributor shall coerce an exhibitor into signing a contract on threat to build or otherwise acquire a theatre for operation in competition to him. Arbitration provided.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Arbitration and provision that exhibitor may employ other remedies asked.	Not mentioned.	Arbitration not mentioned.

XIV. Other Subjects of Arbitration: Defining controversies which shall be subject to arbitration, including license performance, over-buying, unreasonable clearance, but barring license fees and other terms and conditions.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Same.	Point 2 of 10-point program.	Left open for further discussion.

XV. Effective Date: Agreement to apply to all contracts made after January 1, 1939, for 1939-40 product and for all subsequent years.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Same.	Same.	Same.

XVI. Term: Providing for two year trial term for agreement.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Not mentioned.	Not mentioned.	Not mentioned.

Appendix: Aribtration rules, establishment and personnel of boards and procedure.

Allied	MPTOA	Original Draft
Substantially as asked.	No details given.	No details given.

N.B.—Paragraphs IX and XIV of the distributors' first draft, covering non-theatrical competition and condemning the falsification of box office receipts, are eliminated in the present draft. The section on box office statements was strongly protested by all exhibitor groups and the section on non-theatrical competition was objected to as too vague by Allied.

Nothing in this Section (2) shall decrease or increase the number of features in each bracket as set forth in the license agreement.

V. Some Run Available

To meet objections of certain exhibitors to so-called "exclusive selling," an exhibitor shall be able to obtain from a distributor a run of its features in any situation, the run to be designated by the distributor, provided (a) distributor and exhibitor can mutually agree upon the number of features to be licensed and other terms and conditions; (b) the exhibitor's theatre (s) (i) is not of an obsolete character, (ii) is in good condition and (iii) is operated under a policy that is not destructive and (iv) is operated under a policy which will not substantially reduce the distributor's revenue from any other run[7]; and (c) exhibitor is of good reputation as a theatre operator and customer or, if he has not been an exhibitor theretofore, is of good reputation and financially responsible. Any dispute arising under provisos (b) or (c) hereof shall be subject to arbitration. No dispute under proviso (a) hereof shall be subject to arbitration; but each distributor states that it will be its policy not to request unreasonable license fees or other terms or conditions from an exhibitor for the purpose of defeating this Article V.

VI. Regular Customer

To meet objections of certain exhibitors to so-called "selling away to a circuit," a distributor will not refuse to license its features to its regular customer who is not a "circuit customer,"[8] in order to license them, for the same

[7] A policy shall not be deemd destructive or one which will substantially reduce such revenue if it is a policy established under methods of competition normal and fair in such situation.

[8] A "circuit customer," as that term is used in Article VI, is a customer who is, or is a part of, a circuit, a buying combine, a booking combine or a cooperative.

PROPOSALS WORDED IN LEGAL FORM

run in the same competitive area, to another exhibitor for the sole reason that such other exhibitor is a circuit customer, provided such regular customer (a) has substantially performed his previous license agreements with the distributor, (b) maintains and operates his theatre in a modern manner, and (c) is financially responsible. Any dispute as to whether a distributor has so refused to license its features to such regular customer shall be subject to arbitration. Should distributor elect to license its features to an exhibitor (other than its then current customer) who is a circuit customer, distributor shall, if its then current customer is not a circuit customer, give him notice by telegraph of its election so to do. Should such current customer fail to commence arbitration proceedings within five days after the sending of such notice, he shall be deemed to have waived all claims, if any, in connection with such features under this Article VI.

VII. Short Subjects, Newsreels, etc.

No exhibitor shall be required to license short subjects, newsreels, trailers, serials, reissues, "Westerns" or foreigns,[9] (hereinafter collectively referred to in this Article as "Shorts"), as a condition of licensing other features.

An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any claim that the licensing of such features was so conditioned unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at its Home Office notice in writing of such claim and the grounds therefor within forty-eight hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application for such "Shorts." Any dispute as to whether the licensing of such features was so conditioned shall be subject to arbitration. The powers of arbitrators in any such dispute shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the licensing of such features was so conditioned; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, then,

(b) an award cancelling the license agreement or agreements for (or to the extent that they relate to) such "Shorts."

VIII. Score Charges

Score charges, if any, for flat rental features for the 1938-1939 exhibition season shall be added to and consolidated with the license fees therefor. Commencing with the 1939-1940 exhibition season there shall be no separate score charge for features licensed on either a flat rental or a percentage basis.

IX. Allocation of Features

Under license agreements authorizing a distributor to allocate features to particular price brackets, distributor, on giving notice of the availability of each feature, shall notify exhibitor of the price allocation thereof, except that such notice of price allocation shall be given not later than fourteen days after the national release date thereof to first-run exhibitors in those cities which the distributor may designate as "Key Cities."

X. Form of License Agreement

Each distributor will use its best efforts to simplify its form of license agreement.

XI. Selective License Agreements

Whenever an exhibitor shall have the right under a license agreement to select a number of features out of a larger number, he shall exercise such right by written notice of selection or rejection of each feature to which he may be entitled under such agreement within twenty-one days after the mailing of the notice of availability thereof. Failure of exhibitor to give such written notice with respect to any feature within such period shall constitute a selection thereof by exhibitor.

NEW CLEARANCE FOR CINCINNATI

Announcement is being made in Cincinnati this week of a new clearance schedule worked out in a conference there last week among H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, Ike Libson, managing director, and Arthur M. Frudenfeld, division manager, representing RKO Midwest, and Harold Bernstein, president; F. Wesley Huss, Jr., and Charles Mervis, for the Greater Independent Exhibitors Association.

Under the new setup, clearances will be reduced by 13 days, based on the sixth Sunday after the first runs for the 30 cent houses, and the seventh Sunday for those maintaining a 25 cent scale, with other houses in proportion. Heretofore, clearances have been 57 to 70 days, respectively, with only a 12 cent differential on the evening scale.

XII. Playing Features in the Order of Release

If under any license agreement an exhibitor is obligated to play features in the order of their release, the distributor will not withhold features from exhibitor because features previously released have not been exhibited by him if his failure to exhibit them was due to the failure of distributor to make them available. Any dispute hereunder shall be subject to arbitration.

XIII. Coercing Contracts

No distributor shall coerce or intimidate an exhibitor to enter into any license agreement by threatening to build or otherwise aquire, or by falsely representing that any other person will build or acquire, a motion picture theatre for operation in competition with such exhibitor.

An exhibitor shall have no right to assert any claim that he has been so coerced or intimidated unless he shall have mailed to the distributor at his Home Office notice in writing of such claim and the grounds therefor within forty-eight hours after delivery by exhibitor of his signed application for such license agreement.

Any dispute as to whether exhibitor was so coerced or intimated shall be subject to arbitration. The powers of arbitrators in any such dispute shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the exhibitor was so coerced or intimidated; and, if the finding be in the affirmative, then,

(b) an award cancelling such license agreement.

XIV. Other Subjects of Arbitration

(1) Performance of License Agreements. Any claim by either party to a license agreement that the other party has breached any provision thereof shall be subject to arbitration.

The arbitrators shall have power to make the following awards only:

(a) to find that the provision involved has been breached;

(b) to direct specific performance of the provision involved;

(c) to award actual damages with respect to each feature involved, which award shall not exceed the liquidated damages provided therefor in the license agreement.

(2) Clearance. The parties hereto recognize: that clearance, reasonable as to time and area, is essential in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures; that an exhibitor has the right without restriction to license for any theatre any run for which he is able to negotiate with any distributor; and that, subject to Article VI hereof, a distributor has the right without restriction to license for any theatre any run for which it is able to negotiate with any exhibitor.

Any dispute as to whether or not the existing clearance, under the conditions involved in the particular instance, is unreasonable shall be subject to arbitration.

The powers of arbitrators in any dispute relating to clearance shall be limited to:

(a) a finding as to whether or not the theatre or theatres whose clearance is complained of, or any of them, is entitled to clearance; and, if so, then,

(b) an award of the reasonable maximum clearance to which such theatre or theatres is entitled.

(3) Over-buying. Any complaint by an exhibitor that another exhibitor has contracted for the license for exhibition of a greater number of features than the latter reasonably requires for exhibition in his theatre or theatres, with the intend and effect of depriving the complaining exhibitor of sufficient features to operate his theatre or theatres, shall be subject to arbitration.

In considering such a complaint, the arbitrators shall, among other things, make due allowance for a sufficient number of features reasonably to protect the responding exhibitor against non-delivery of features and failure to make features available and give due regard to the type and operating policy of the theatre or theatres operated by the responding exhibitor. In no event shall an exhibitor be deemed to be "over-bought" if his minimum commitments do not exceed by more than fifteen (15%) per cent his maximum requirements. If the arbitrators shall find that over-buying exists as herein provided, they shall specifically find by what number, if any, the responding exhibitor shall have over-bought and the responding exhibitor shall then be permitted a period of fourteen days from the date of the arbitrators' decision to obtain the release of such excess number, if any, from his license agreement(s); if the exhibitor does not obtain such release, in whole or in part, then the arbitrators shall make an award apportioning among the distributors, with which responding exhibitor has entered into license agreements, the number of features to be released by them, respectively (being in the aggregate the number of features "over-bought" less such number, if any, the release of which the responding exhibitor shall have obtained) to the complaining exhibitor[10], provided that no such award shall be made unless adequate assurance shall be given to each distributor that it will receive from the complaining exhibitor, in respect of its features to be so released, no less in license fees and no less favorable other terms than were provided for in

[9] "Westerns" and foreigns as defined in Article I, Section (1).

[10] The rights of exclusion, if any, under Article I, Section (1) hereof, of a responding exhibitor found by the arbitrators to have over-bought, shall be determined and computed on the basis of his license agreement(s) as modified in consequence of such finding.

PROCEDURE FOR BOARDS OUTLINED

its license agreement with the responding exhibitor.

(4) License Fees, Other Terms and Conditions. Neither license fees, nor (except in the respects and to the extent specifically provided in this code) other terms or conditions upon which motion pictures may be licensed by a distributor to an exhibitor, shall be the subject of arbitration for any purpose under any Article hereof, each of the parties hereto recognizing that such matters are to be determined only by mutual agreement between distributor and exhibitor.

XV. Effective Date

The provisions of this code shall apply to all contracts made after January 1, 1939 for 1939-1940 product and the product of subsequent years so long as this agreement shall be in effect.

XVI. Term

The term of this code shall be for two exhibition seasons[11], commencing with the season 1939-1940, and thereafter indefinitely.

Any signatory hereto may withdraw herefrom at the end of the second exhibition season or at the end of any subsequent exhibition season by giving written notice of such withdrawal to the other signatories at least six moiths prior to the end of such exhibition season.

[Provision should be made giving the signatories the right of withdrawal in the event of substantial withdrawals by other signatories and in the event of legislation or judicial decisions declaring any part of the code invalid or illegal, requiring a material change in the method under which distributors or exhibitors do business or making the code impracticable because of added burdens. While this has been discussed with representatives of exhibitors no definitive language has yet been worked out but will be supplied shortly.]

[Provision should also be made enabling other distributors and exhibitors to become parties to the code.]

Arbitration Machinery

1. Location of Board. An Arbitration Board shall be established in each exchange territory.

2. Method of selection of arbitrators. There shall be created in each exchange territory a general panel and a neutral panel. The general panel shall consist of about 20 members of whom the distributors will appoint 10 and the exhibitor association functioning in that particular exchange territory the other 10. Where there are 2 or more exhibitor associations each association may appoint a panel of 10 of their own. The members of the general panel may be affiliated with exhibitor or distributor interests.

Each party to a dispute may designate as his arbitrator any member of this general panel or any one else he desires outside of the panel.

The neutral panel shall consist of 10 members to be mutually agreed upon by the exhibitor and distributor interests in each exchange territory. These members shall not be members of the general panel and shall not be associated with exhibitor or distributor interests but shall have an understanding and knowledge of the motion picture industry.

The two arbitrators chosen by the above method shall designate the third arbitrator from the neutral panel and if they are unable to agree the third arbitrator shall be drawn from the neutral panel by lot.

No compensation shall be paid to any arbitrator from the general panel, but compensation wherever necessary may be paid to the neutral arbitrator.

3. The cost of arbitration machinery. Upon the filing of a claim the complaining party shall pay a filing fee of $5. These fees are to cover the cost of:

(a) compensation to the neutral, wherever necessary,

(b) expenses incurred upon the initiative of the arbitration board,

(c) administration.

In disputes involving principles, affecting the entire industry the arbitration board may assess the cost incurred upon the initiative of the arbitration board upon all distributors' and exhibitors' associations.

The arbitration board shall have no power to award counsel fees.

Except as here provided each party shall stand its own costs and expenses.

The board shall be empowered in its discretion to engage a secretary for its own sessions.

4. Qualification of arbitrators. No person shall be nominated or elected to act as an arbitrator in any dispute in which he has a personal or financial interest, directly or indirectly. The parties may, however, waive their right in any objections which may exist on the above.

5. Vacancies. Vacancies occurring by reason of illness, resignation, disqualifications, disability or death shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

6. Hearings. Hearings shall take place in the exchange territory in the city in which is located the exchange out of which the complaining exhibitor is served.

Parties may represent themselves or be represented by another.

Each party shall have the right to question the witnesses of the other party or parties.

Witnesses shall testify under oath.

The arbitrator may require any party to produce whatever records and documents they may deem necessary.

Stenographic records of testimony will not be taken unless either or both parties so request and provide funds for the same in which case the stenographer shall be selected by the board, or if designated by either or both parties, approved by the board.

7. Waiving oral hearings. If the parties to a controversy agree in writing to waive oral hearings they shall submit to the arbitrators a statement of claim under oath including statements from books of account or other evidence together with written argument. Immediately upon receipt of the statement of facts and written arguments a copy thereof shall be submitted to the respective parties and each shall have the right to reply thereto. But if either party should fail to make such reply in days from receipts thereof he shall be deemed to have waived the right to reply. The files shall then be submitted to the arbitrators.

8. Preferential cases. Certain disputes require prompt and immediate decisions while others do not. There shall therefore be established a list of disputes to which the arbitrators must give preference in time of hearing.

9. Miscellaneous. All questions affecting procedure such as the time when the submissions are to be made; the time within which the arbitrators must make their awards; the forms to be used; the notices to be sent and similar problems should be referred to counsel for the distributors and exhibitor groups.

[Disputes where more than 2 parties are involved, or involving third parties who refuse to submit to arbitration, or where a greater number of exhibitors are involved than distributors or vice versa, or where a distributor and its affiliated theatre company are parties, present problems which have been discussed but have not yet been resolved.]

[11] An exhibition season for the purpose of this Article shall be deemed to commence September first and end August thirty-first next following.

Text Accompanied By Rodgers Letter

Following is the text of a letter which was sent with the "new revised memorandum" of the distributors' trade practice proposals by William F. Rodgers. The letter was mailed to Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied States Association, to Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to the Department of Justice, and to the presidents of seven regional unaffiliated exhibitor organizations, as follows:

Harry Brandt, Independent Theatre Owners' Association, New York; Lee Moffitt, MPTO of Kentucky; John Rugar, Intermountain Theatres Association; W. F. Crockett, MPTO of Virginia; Albert A. Galston, Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California and Arizona; Charles R. Gilmour, Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region; Leo F. Wolcott, Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska.

"Please refer to my letter of December 1, 1938, under cover of which we sent you a memorandum prepared by us embodying the trade practice proposals resulting from the conferences between the distributors and various exhibitor groups representing most of the theatre operators throughout the country. That memorandum as revised by us has been the basis of further conferences, and your counsel was good enough to send our counsel a further revision which was discussed at conferences between our respective counsel. As a result we have prepared a new revised memorandum which we enclose herewith.

"Our original memorandum called attention to the fact that various matters in connection with arbitration and arbitration machinery had not been fully discussed. In a subsequent conference, when we discussed a revision of this memorandum, we handed you a proposed basis which we had prepared upon which arbitration machinery might be set up. Your counsel's revision contained counter suggestions as to arbitration, which were discussed with our counsel. However, we have not yet completed a revision of the provisions with respect to arbitration machinery, and for that reason we again enclose the proposed basis for arbitration which we previously handed you. It is obvious that this is not complete and further elaboration will be necessary in the light of discussions and of your counsel's suggestions, but we believe that the statements of principle contained in it and in the revised memorandum enclosed herewith will furnish the foundation for the arbitration machinery desired.

"Since our discussions we have been notified by United Artists Corporation that it has withdrawn from participation in the conferences.

"Following the same course as before, we are sending a copy of this letter and its enclosures to the Department of Justice in accordance with assurances of counsel that the department would be kept informed of the results of our industry conferences.

"If the accompanying revised memorandum substantially expressed your understanding of these proposals, we renew our previous suggestion that a joint conference be held with the Department of Justice at the earliest possible date for the purpose of obtaining its approval of these proposals and of considering methods of putting them into effect."

W. F. RODGERS,
For the Committee.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Anniversary

An anniversary has slipped by almost unnoticed, the twenty-fifth year since Hollywood became the center of production.

Many claims have been made as to which picture has the honor of having been the first made here. It is conceded, however, in many quarters that Cecil B. DeMille's "The Squaw Man" has a strong claim to the honor. The picture made in a barn which stood at Vine and Selma Streets, Hollywood, was picture number one on the production schedule of what years later was to become Paramount Studio. Incidentally DeMille's "Union Pacific" is number 1,200 on Paramount's production schedule.

The barn where "The Squaw Man" was made now stands on the Paramount lot and is used as a gymnasium.

Radio and Film

Motion pictures and the radio "must get along together," William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting system, told your correspondent. "Each is dependent upon the other and their relationship should be marked by the utmost harmony."

Youthful Mr. Paley refuses to be disturbed by the removals of several picture notables from the air and considers that such removals are merely sops tossed by producers to please exhibitors who are loudest in claiming that broadcasting is harming theatre business.

"If the screen orders its stars off the air, we'll quickly build our own featured performers. As a matter of fact, many of the big names in pictures got their start on radio."

"Television," he said, "is not a threat to the business of making and exhibiting motion pictures any more than it is to radio broadcasting. It will be many years before this scientific development can be considered a competitor of either. But CBS is continuing its experiments with television. We have more than one problem to solve. In fact the largest television transmitter in the world, in our New York studios, will go into operation about June 15th. Yet we do not expect any miracles. Practical television broadcasting is limited to a radius of between forty and fifty miles and even within these limits it is not perfect. Our first concern with television will be spot news events."

Eight Start

Eight pictures were started in the last week in March; ten were finished.

Three of the new productions are credited to Columbia. The top flight picture is "Good Girls Go to Paris," in which film Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell, Walter Connolly, Alan Curtis and Isabel Jeans will be featured. A Larry Darmour production, "Power to Kill", will present Jack Holt, Gertrude Michael, Dickie Moore, Marilyn Knowlden and Regis Toomey. The stars of "Arizona Cowboy" are Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith. They will be supported by Russell Simpson, Dick Curtis, Hal Taliaferro, and the Sons of the Pioneers.

CLIPPER PROVIDES LOCAL COLOR

The tag line of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" has the telephone inventor dreaming of inventing the airplane, saying "If sea gulls can fly, men can fly."

Just at this moment in the showing of the picture at the Federal Theatre on the San Francisco Fair grounds, the 42-ton China Clipper roared over the theatre on its maiden trans-Pacific flight.

Universal started two productions. Victor McLaglen, Tom Brown, Nan Gray, Constance Moore, William Frawley, Donald Briggs and Marc Lawrence will be seen in "Ex Champ." The cast for "They Asked for It" will include William Lundigan, Joy Hodges, Michael Whalen, Lyle Talbot and Isabel Jewell.

At 20th Century-Fox "It Could Happen to You" was started. It will feature Stuart Erwin, Gloria Stuart, Douglas Fowley and June Gale.

Samuel Goldwyn resumed production on "Angels Making Music", formerly titled "The Restless Age." Violinist Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Margot Stevenson, Gene Reynolds and Porter Hall head the cast.

"Five Came Back" went into work at RKO-Radio. Chester Morris, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, John Carradine, C. Aubrey Smith and Joseph Calleia are the principals.

RKO Completes Two

Two pictures were completed at RKO-Radio. Lucille Ball, Allan Lane, Evelyn Brent, Steffi Duna, Bernadene Hayes and Abner Biberman will be seen in "The Second Shot." Lupe Velez is the star of "The Girl from Mexico", in which Donald Woods, Donald McBride, Leon Errol and Linda Hayes are featured.

One of the two pictures finished at Warners is the widely publicized yet secretive "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Some of the cast names are Edward G. Robinson, George Raft, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas, Dorothy Tree, Joseph Sawyer, George Sanders, James Stephanson, Lya Lys and Grace Stafford. A horse is the central figure in "Gantry the Great." The players concerned in telling the story are Edith Fellows, Jimmy McCallion, Granville Bates, Frankie Burke and De Wolfe Hopper.

Paramount also finished two pictures. The regular cast for the series, John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive and Elizabeth Patterson will be seen in "Mr. and Mrs. Bulldog Drummond." "The Magnificent Fraud" will present Lloyd Nolan, Akim Tamiroff, Mary Boland, Patricia Morison, Steffi Duna, Barbara Pepper, Ernst Verebes and Ernest Cossart.

Universal Finishes One

"For Love or Money" was finished at Universal. The cast lists June Lang, Robert Kent, Edward Brophy, Richard Lane, Addison Richards and Tony Merrill.

After more than two months in production Columbia finished "Only Angels Have Wings." Jean Arthur, Cary Grant and Richard Barthelmess are featured.

"The Return of the Cisco Kid" wound up at 20th Century-Fox. Warner Baxter will be seen in the title role supported by Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Cesar Romero, Kane Richmond, C. Henry Gordon and Harold Huber.

Monogram completed "Boy's Reformatory", which will present Frankie Darro, Grant Withers, David Durand, Warren McCollun, Albert Hill, Jr. Bob McClung, Frank Coghlan, Jr., Ben Weldon, Tempe Piggott, Lillian Elliott, John St. Polis and Kathryn Sheldon.

Advance Reaction

Edward Small has purchased the screen rights to Howard Spring's novel, "My Son, My Son," and plans to include a picture based on it as part of his United Artists quota. It is a story of two fathers and their hopes and dreams for their sons.

He is asking the press for any opinions it may have concerning the filmization of the novel. Specifically he asks "whether you see the story through the eyes of the father or the son, and to whom the sympathy of motion picture audiences would naturally flow; whether the audiences will accept the character of Oliver as created by Mr. Spring; whether you think the bite of the Irish interlude is essential to the natural conclusion of the story."

Emanuel Cohen tried a kindred experiment some years ago. He sent out a magazine story which he planned as a vehicle for Gary Cooper. However, he did not ask any advice or reactions. In the course of time Mr. Cooper saw the story and said "No." It didn't make much difference, for about that time Mr. Cohen retired from the business of making pictures.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Boy's Reformatory

Melodrama

This title establishes the entertainment character of the production. It's the case of a good boy who wants to protect others who have been kind to him. He goes wrong in order that he may get the goods on a criminal-maker who has led many boys astray. He succeeds, though his actions cause him to appear a renegade in the eyes of his benefactors and those who have his welfare closest at heart. But he wipes out a criminal and what better deed could any boy do?

Frankie Darro will be the hero. His benefactor is played by Grant Withers. The boy he takes the rap for and eventually saves from a life of crime is David Durand. Young Durand, who has been seen in minor support roles in several pictures, will be in the public eye after "Streets of New York," a Jackie Cooper picture, has been released. The supporting cast lists Warren McCollum, Albert Hill, Bob McClung, George Offerman, Jr., Junior Coghlan, Ben Welden, the heavy, Lillian Ellitt, Tempe Piggott, John St. Polis, Jack McHugh and Kathryn Sheldon.

Ray Trampe and Norman Hill wrote the story on which the photoplay is based, and Trampe collaborated with Wellyn Totman on the screenplay. Howard Bretherton is the director.

Release date: May 1, 1939.

Boy Friend

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy Melodrama

Everyone knows Jane Withers can act, sing, dance and mimic with the best of them. That knowledge has made her one of the box office Big Ten for two consecutive years. In "Boy Friend," wherein she will be the kid sister of a young police officer whose exploits lead to the smashing of a crook gang, she will go through her entire routine. But this will be the first time that Jane has a "fellow," the first time she will receipt for the screen kiss of adolescent or puppy love affection. This should inspire new ideas for exploitation. Secondly, she will introduce a brand new dance number. Having watched this in production, one can safely hazard that it will start a new rage among the teen age dancers.

Laughs and thrills are the entertainment substance of the story, for which Joseph Hoffman and Barry Trivers wrote a screen play on an original by Lester Ziffren and Louis Moore. James Tinling, who handled "Pepper," "The Holy Terror," "Angel's Holiday" and "45 Fathers," is the director. Sidney Clare and Harry Akst composed the music and lyrics, and the dances were arranged by Geneva Sawyer and Nicholas Castle.

The supporting cast will feature Arleen Whelan, Richard Bond, the comedians Douglas Fowley and Warren Hymer, the "Jones Family's" George Ernest, who will be seen as Jane's boy friend, and Robert Kellard, Minor Watson and Myra Marsh.

Release date: May 19, 1939.

It's a Wonderful World

(MGM)

Comedy Melodrama

Any exhibitor who doesn't capitalize upon the prestige of Claudette Colbert and James Stewart as a result of their latest pictures will be overlooking a good bet for "It's a Wonderful World." Miss Colbert's work in "Midnight" has restored her to that audience favor which she enjoyed following "It Happened One Night." Stewart, in "Made for Each Other," proved his right to rank with the screen's foremost leading men. Together they make it comparatively easy to exploit the picture's other names, Ernest Truex, Frances Drake, Guy Kibbee, Sidney Blackmer, Nat Pendleton and Edgar Kennedy.

Considering that the plot of "It's a Wonderful World" is of the same substance as was that of "The Thin Man," smart crime detection punctuated by hilarious comedy and romance, it is of importance to note that W. S. Van Dyke, director of the "Thin Man," also is directing this subject. It is his first assignment since "Stand Up and Fight."

Everything is being designed to provoke laughter. The hero's job is to keep a super-wealthy, irresponsible playboy out of trouble, particularly from scheming women. When his charge is accused of murder, the hero finds himself involved. His escape enroute to jail is witnessed by the heroine, a dizzy headed poetess. In a worse predicament than ever now, since he is sought as her kidnaper, he, however, enlists her aid in solving the murder case and running down the culprit. This action takes place in situations, which for want of a better description the industry calls "screwball comedy." Still there are two spine-tickling murders and a whole mess of plots and counterplots. Then, of course, there is the love story.

Release date: May 19, 1939.

G-Dog

(RKO-Radio)

Melodrama

"G-Dog" will be the fourth in a series of pictures which have featured the canine actor, "Ace." The others were "Two in Revolt," "Blind Alibi" and "Almost a Gentleman."

This time the dog will be seen as the ally of a young police officer whom he aids in solving the secret of a big city crime ring and the creature that rescues the policeman's sweetheart from peril. While the romance and melodrama is being enacted, production detail will show how dogs are trained in police work.

The story was written by Earl Johnson, noted trainer of dogs, and Guy Austin, newspaper man. The screen play is credited to Morton Grant and Jo Pagano. A Bert Gilroy production, the picture is being directed by David Howard, who, like the producer, has been specializing in the George O'Brien films.

For name values the picture will make available Tim Holt, Janet Shaw, who is being given her first opportunity at a leading role, the popular Virginia Weidler, Frank M. Thomas, Rolf Harolde, Don Brodie, Monte Montague and Muriel Evans.

Release date: April 28, 1939.

Family Reunion

(Warner)

Domestic Tempest

Last September Warner-First National brought out a picture called "Four Daughters." The record shows it was very well received by the public. Rosemary, Priscilla and Lola Lane, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Frank McHugh and John Garfield, who was to be discovered as a new star, were in it. The same unit, minus Dick Foran but plus Fay Bainter, 1938 Academy award winner, and the dependable Donald Crisp will be in "Family Reunion." That's one of those rare situations that give exhibitors a running head start in the exploitation race. Further data for getting the jump are that Michael Curtiz, who directed "Four Daughters," is directing this, and Julius Epstein, who did the "Four Daughters" screen play, is collaborating with his brother, Phillip, on this.

"Family Reunion" will not be a sequel to "Four Daughters." Its origin is a play by Dorothy Bennett and Irving Smith, "Fly Away Home." The premise, however, is calculated to have an effect upon audiences as though the whole group were sitting beside a common fireside talking about things that had happened to them or which they knew of happening to others. You know how such things go when persons get to talking. The mother of this brood is getting ready to remarry when the long-lost husband and father shows up. He's a kidding josher who has a way with him that puts everyone else on the defensive. Along with him (Rains) appears a kindred soul (Garfield), with whom the family's pride and joy (Priscilla Lane) falls in love. The pair wreak havoc with the plans of the would-be father-in-law until "Aunt Penny" (May Robson) sticks her oar in.

Release date: To be determined.

Undercover Agent

(Monogram)

Melodrama and Romance

Russell Gleason and Shirley Dean, who always share the romantic content of the 20th Century-Fox "Jones Family" series, will be the stars of "Undercover Agent." They will be supported by such well known and capable players as J. M. Kerrigan, Maude Eburne, Oscar O'Shea, Selmer Jackson, Rolf Harolde, Ray Bennett and Ralph Sanford.

This E. B. Derr production will make several departures from the formula. In the ordinary procedure the undercover operator has something to avenge; his brother, sister, sweetheart or what have you, has been done dirt. In this case, all the hero wants is a job. All the agencies of government have been powerless to stop the flood of counterfeit lottery-sweepstakes tickets. But the boy gets an idea. The idea embroils him in difficulties with the law and his girl friend, who, of course, is working for the man who peddles the tickets.

The original story is by Martin Mooney, former newspaper man who has contributed several stirring photoplay stories. It is being directed by Howard Bretherton.

Release date: April 5, 1939.

THE DRAMATIC STORY of "MAN OF CONQUEST"

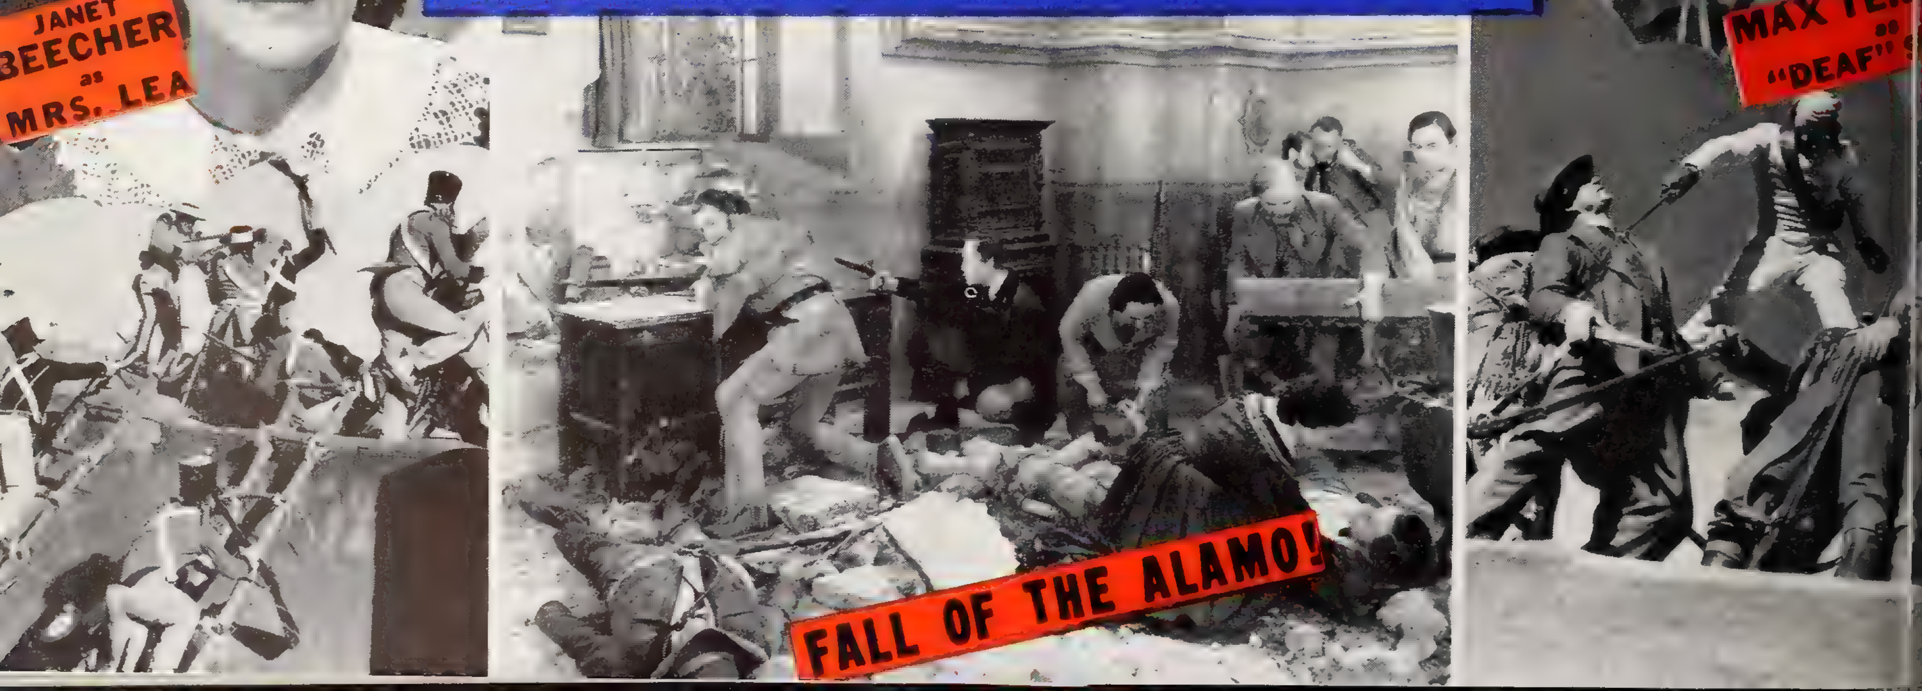
After spending much of his youth with the friendly Cherokee Indians, Sam Houston enlists with General Jackson and is severely wounded while leading a charge at the battle of Horseshoe Bend. Jackson commends him for his gallantry, and a life-long friendship is formed. Jackson is elected to the Presidency and Houston becomes Governor of Tennessee. On the eve of Houston's re-election, he marries Eliza Allen but after many misunderstandings they separate. Houston resigns in the face of the scandal, goes into a long debauch and returns to the Cherokee Nation.

He goes to Washington to protest the treatment of the Cherokees by the government, and there meets Margaret Lea at a Presidential ball. Jackson persuades Houston to go to Texas, where he meets Margaret Lea again. Jim Bowie and Davey Crockett decline to join Houston in a fight to free Texas. They are loyal to peace-loving Stephen Austin, who refuses to enter into war with Mexico. Word is brought that the Mexican Army is marching across Texas, killing and plundering. Austin is convinced that Texas must fight and Houston agrees to lead the army.

The Mexicans attack the Alamo and Crockett, Bowie, Travis and others perish. Houston riding to re-inforce this garrison arrives too late. Thus the cry, "Remember the Alamo!" is born. At San Jacinto, Houston outsmarts the enemy and with a handful of troups routs the Mexican Army, thereby establishing the independence of Texas.

Houston is elected first president of the new Republic, and, with Margaret Lea, now his wife, he watches the Lone Star come down and the Stars and Stripes raised on the capitol flagpole, signifying the annexation of Texas into the Union.

Back in Tennessee, Andrew Jackson, dying, hears the news and whispers, "All is safe at last. My old friend and companion in arms . . . has been true to his trust."



THREE MORE SALES CONVENTIONS OPENING TO LAUNCH NEW PRODUCT

Republic and Universal Start Regional Gatherings This Weekend; United Artists Convenes in Hollywood May 8

Having heard three of the large companies, Warner Brothers, MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox, outline their product plans, expectations and policies for the 1939-40 season, exhibitors prepared this week to scan new chapters just ahead in the story of coming product. Republic starts the first of four region conventions on Friday in Houston, Texas (see page 57), at which its plans for 26 features, 24 westerns and four serials will be discussed; Universal has announced three sales meetings, the first to open in Cincinnati next weekend, and United Artists on Tuesday published plans for its 20th annual convention to be held in Hollywood starting May 8th. Twentieth Century-Fox last Sunday concluded its Chicago convention at which 52 features were announced.

Eleven Producers on UA List

Eleven producers will be represented in the release schedule for United Artists which will be announced at the Hollywood meeting May 8th. These include Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Edward Small, Hal Roach, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Sol Lesser, Ernst Lubitsch and David Loew. All producers and the field and home office staffs will attend. About 30 features will be promised for 1939-40.

Murray Silverstone, executive head of the company, on his return from the coast said this week that Sol Lesser would produce one picture a year under his contract with the company, announced last week, in addition to the Lubitsch pictures, the first of which is not expected until 1940. The Lesser-Lubitsch company will contribute about three pictures every two years.

Mr. Loew, financing his own productions, will make one or two big pictures annually, working at the Selznick-International Studio. Mr. Silverstone gave high praise to Mr. Selznick, whose contract with United Artists was renewed last week, and said he would contribute a minimum of two pictures to the new schedule. Mr. Chaplin is actively at work on "The Dictator" which will be released during the new season, Mr. Silverstone said.

Although two pictures are scheduled from Mr. Goldwyn it was said that his future activities will depend on the outcome of his suit against the company. His contract does not expire until 1945 but it does not require any minimum number of pictures from him. However, it was pointed out that United Artists will take all legal steps to prevent Mr. Goldwyn from entering upon or completing any negotiations for release of his pictures through other outlets than United Artists. Charles Schwartz, attorney for the company, said, "Any attempt on the part of Mr. Goldwyn to arrange for the distribution of his future pictures, in violation of his contract, will be most seriously and vigorously resisted."

Mr. Goldwyn's next two scheduled pictures are "The Real Glory" and "Angels Making Music."

Edward Small will make six top budget pictures for UA release, headed by the screen production based on the novel, "My Son, My Son," by Howard Spring. Others will be "South of Pago-Pago," "Food for the Gods," "The Life of Rudolph Valentino," "Two Years Before the Mast," and "Quantrill the Raider."

THEN HE SENT THEM A PASS

Two Omaha high school girls, devout Charles Boyer fans, set a record for seeing "Love Affair" there. After they had witnessed it seven times, Will Singer, Brandeis manager, sent them a pass, enabling them to see the picture three more times for a total of 10 in the 14 days the film ran.

To Press South American Market

Twentieth Century-Fox is going to greater lengths to develop the South American field, Sidney R. Kent, president, told delegates to the annual sales convention in Chicago at the concluding session last Friday.

"We are going to Rio de Janeiro in May to hold the first film convention ever held in South America," he said, "and on our return trip we are going to stop in Trinidad to hold a similar convention for Central American countries. Our thought is to develop this market.

"This is an important job. The motion picture business is the only salesman America has today covering a world-wide front. It has increased our country's export business by creating demands for American goods shown in our films, it has opened new factories to meet this demand, and it has even forced foreign governments to teach English in their schools. The American film is the greatest sales force our country has today in foreign lands and it is our hope to increase this prestige in South American countries."

In discussing the problems facing the motion picture industry in this country, Mr. Kent pointed out that the public today is in a different mood." They are demanding pictures bigger in theme and in production values," he said. "We have set our budget accordingly and have expanded our production facilities to meet this demand."

In discussing trade practices Mr. Kent complimented William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for MGM, for the fine work he has done in the negotiations for the trade practice agreement.

Rental Increase Set

An increase in prices based on increased product value will be expected by 20th Century-Fox next season, Herman Wobber, general sales manager, told the delegates.

"We only want what our product is worth," he said. "On the merits of our past record we deserve increased prices." This applies to both shorts, news and series pictures as well as features.

More than 20 representative Chicago exhibitors were present at the Friday afternoon session of the sales meeting, as well as representatives of the trade press. Mr. Wobber thanked exhibitors for their support in the past and the trade press for its fair treatment and said that he hoped the company would continue to merit that same treatment and support in the future.

Prices for the company's product for next year have been set, Mr. Wobber revealed. This was done some weeks ago when the exact amount to be spent on various productions for the coming year was available. The sales manager said that district managers would advise the branch managers as to just what prices were expected from the various situations.

No 20th Century-Fox pictures will be available for reduction to 16mm use it was learned because of a feeling that such reduction results in competition for theatres showing the standard size prints.

Don Ameche's radio contract, which has some time to run and which is held by Chase & Sanborn, will be bought up if a deal now pending goes through, it was reported. The company will continue to keep their stars out of radio as much as possible in the future, Mr. Wobber added.

All Shirley Temple pictures will be made in a higher production cost bracket than heretofore, it was said. This move was based on reports that "The Little Princess," latest Temple picture, would probably gross $500,000 over any other Temple picture. Since Shirley has become a star all of her pictures have grossed in world markets, a total of more than $20,000,000, Mr. Wobber said.

Other highlights in Mr. Wobber's talk which outlined in detail the coming product, included the following statements of interest: Sonja Henie pictures have each grossed over $2,500,000 to date in world markets; "Alexander's Ragtime Band" alone grossed over $2,600,000 in rentals; the 48 pictures planned for this season will cost more than the 52 made last year; production costs have gone up; labor difficulties in the main have been ironed out; Fox doesn't want to buy good will through the use of price concessions; that the company has the capital and the organization to fulfil all of their plans for 1939-'40; that domestic rentals for this past period were the greatest in the company's history; that the foreign market could not be looked upon for much support and that new markets must be developed.

Darryl Zanuck addressed the gathering via telephone from Hollywood. He spoke fervently of such forthcoming productions as: "The Rains Came," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Brigham Young," "Hollywood Cavalcade," "Drums Along the Mohawk" and "Maryland."

The opening session of the convention was marked by the declaration by Mr. Wobber that the company would adhere to the trade practice policies that already had been or would be adopted. Spyros Skouras also spoke at the opening session and expressed optimism at the prospects for the coming year. He intimated that the government suit would have but little effect on the film industry regardless of what decision was reached.

Universal Meets Next Week

In addition to the second Republic regional meeting in New York next Tuesday and Wednesday, Universal will start a series of three regionals with a sales convention at the Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati next Saturday. Attending from the home office will be Nate Blumberg, president; W. A. Scully, sales manager; F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager. Joseph H. Seidelman, foreign sales manager who returned to New York this week after a six weeks tour of South America, also will be present.

In the quota year which began April 1st

EYES ON SOUTH AMERICAN MARKET

Paramount will have nine features from England, according to John W. Hicks, foreign manager, who arrived from Europe last week on the Normandie. Three of the productions will be Charles Laughton pictures produced by him with Erich Pommer in their Mayflower Productions and the remaining six will be made directly by Paramount. Mr. Hicks sailed from New York three months ago with Adolph Zukor and David Rose, production manager in England, with whom he arranged the foreign product schedule. Mr. Zukor, after visiting the Paramount offices in the British Isles and on the continent, plans to sail for New York April 15th.

Other arrivals on the Normandie were Gabriel Pascal, Ben Goetz, Sam Wood and Herbert Wilcox. Mr. Goetz, head of MGM production in England, brought a print of "Goodbye Mr. Chips," which Mr. Woods directed. He left immediately for the coast to confer with Louis B. Mayer on future product plans.

Mr. Wilcox will discuss with George Schaefer, RKO president, final details on the cooperative production arrangement his Imperadio Pictures has with RKO for from two to four films a year. "Marie Lloyd" was to have been the first of these but later this week it was announced that a film based on the life story of Nurse Edith Cavell would be first. "Kitchener of Khartoum" will follow.

Mr. Pascal said he had obtained exclusive film rights to all George Bernard Shaw's plays. He will make "Doctor's Dilemma" in England and possibly others for MGM.

Completing Featuret Series

The Warner Brothers 1938-39 short subject and color featuret program will be completed late in May with release of "Bill of Rights" and "Rose of Monterey," historical pictures. These will make a total of nine such pictures produced by Gordon Hollingshead's department during the present season.

Both remaining pictures will be directed by Crane Wilbur. The first featuret on the 1939-40 program will be "Monroe Doctrine" which goes before the cameras early in June.

Howard Associate Producer And Actor in "Intermezzo"

Selznick International has signed Leslie Howard for the leading male role in "Intermezzo" and he will also act as associate producer of the film. Mr. Howard is currently playing in "Gone with the Wind" and on days when he is not acting he will confer with Mr. Selznick on production plans for "Intermezzo." The picture is scheduled to start early in May when it is believed Mr. Howard will have completed the Margaret Mitchell story. The "Intermezzo" screen play has been completed by John Van Druten from an original story by Gastaf Molander and Gaesta Stevens.

Lawrence W. Fox, president of General Film Company, has concluded arrangements with Walter Futter to finance the forthcoming Leslie Howard production for RKO Radio release. The first film under the arrangement, to be filmed this summer in England, will be an adaptation of H. De Vere Stackpoole's "The Man Who Lost Himself," starring Howard. Future productions are planned in cooperation with General Film Company by Mr. Futter and Mr. Howard as co-producers.

General produces the "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns for Paramount release and the "Crime Club Mysteries" for Universal release. Mr. Fox has started plans for the establishment of an industrial film department in the east. He is also planning to include radio in General's activities.

Wachsberger Sees Fewer But Better French Films

French production will drop about 20 per cent in the number of films made, but budgets will be increased to about $150,000 for top pictures next season, Nat Wachsberger, French exhibitor, said in New York this week. Mr. Wachsberger, who is associated with Synimex of Paris and Las Film Triomphe of Brussels, together with Harry Brandt, New York circuit head, has organized Films Alliance of the United States for distribution of foreign product in this country and South America.

Mr. Wachsberger brought three French films—"Le Deseurteur" (The Deserter), an Arnold Pressburger production directed by Leonide Mogui with Jean Pierre Aumont and Corinne Lerchaire; "Quai des Brumes," to be called "The Port of Shadows," which is a Gregoire Rabinovitch film directed by Marcel Carne with Jean Gabin and Michele Morgan, and "Le Roi s'Amuse," the English title of which will be "The King Goes Gay."

To Press Wage Act Exemption

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Exemption from the wage-hour act of all salaried employees who are given vacations with pay will be pressed when Congress takes up legislation amending the Fair Labor Standards Act. Also tax relief which would enable the motion picture industry to save large sums which otherwise it will be called upon to pay in 1940 and succeeding years has been laid before Congress.

The tax relief was in the shape of suggestions by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that social security tax rates be held to their present level through 1942. To make this possible, it is suggested the law be amended to provide for a "contingent" reserve of $2,500,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 instead of the full reserve of $40,000,000,000 provided for when the act was adopted.

The Secretary made three suggestions, one for continuance of the present rate and the others for less sharp increases than now provided for in the law, which calls for an increase of 50 per cent next year in the one per cent now paid by both employers and employees and for a further increase in 1943 to two per cent.

Technicolor Nets $1,050,536 in '38

A net profit for 1938 of $1,050,536 after all charges, compared to $463,169 for 1937, was reported by Technicolor, Inc., and its wholly owned subsidiary, Technicolor Motion Picture Company, in the annual statement issued Monday.

The profit is equivalent to earnings of $1.24 per common share on the 842,664 shares, against 58 cents on each of the 803,081 common shares in the preceding year.

Shipments of technicolor prints for the year ending December 31, 1938, came to 66,720,237 feet. The year before accounted for 40,561,318 feet in a similar period, and 1936 shipments came to 37,822,444 feet. Speaking of the prospects for 1939 in his annual message to stockholders, Herbert T. Kalmus, president and general manager of the company, said: "The current year is starting out substantially ahead of the corresponding months of 1938. Shipments for the two months January and February, of 1939, total approximately 13,500,000 feet as compared with the corresponding figure for 1938 of approximately 12,000,000 feet. The contracted bookings for 1939 for feature productions are substantially in excess of the volume of feature productions that were made in 1938."

50 FEATURES FROM REPUBLIC IN 1940; "A's" INCREASED TO 26; FOUR SERIALS

24 Westerns on Schedule; "B" Product Group Eliminated, Sales Force Told in Houston at First Regional Meeting

Republic Pictures announced a program of 50 feature productions and four serials at the first session of the company's southern regional sales meeting at the Rice hotel, Houston, opening Friday.

26 "A's," 24 Westerns

The new Republic schedule included 26 "A" features and 24 westerns. The serial and western program parallels that of last year, but the "B" pictures, included last season, have been eliminated to make way for a greater number of higher-budget productions.

Sinclair Lewis, W. R. Burnett, R. D'Ennery, Armstrong Sperry, Achmed Abdullah, Peter B. Kyne, Nat Ferber, Jack London, Louis Berg, Frank Scully, Mark Twain, George Broadhurst and Richard Wormser are among the authors included in the program.

With more than 40 attending, the Republic meeting was presided over by C. E. Hilgers, southern district sales manager. Herbert J. Yates, J. R. Grainger, president, and Al Adams, director of advertising and publicity, were on hand from New York. A highlight was the world premiere of "Man of Conquest" on Thursday evening at the Majestic theatre in Houston. M. J. Siegel, studio head, and William Saal also attended.

Mr. Yates and Mr. Grainger expected to leave for New York on Sunday to attend the New York meeting at the Park Central hotel, April 12th and 13th. The Chicago convention will follow at the Drake hotel April 20th and 21st and the San Francisco meeting at the Empire hotel April 25th and 26th.

Franchise Partners Attend

Republic franchise partners and others at the Houston meeting included A. C. Bromberg, George Jones, A. E. Rook, S. T. Wilson, P. Spencer and Carl Floyd of Atlanta; Cy Dillon, H. P. Rhodes, M. Funderburk, Jack London and R. H. Bradley of Charlotte; L. Seicschnaydre, George Nungesser, G. Y. Harrell and J. D. Duffy of New Orleans; William Underwood, C. Ezell, L. Rust, D. Rathbone, M. McDonnell, M. Sexton and R. I. Brown of Dallas; Sol Davis, M. Loewenstein, F. Moran, G. Alt, E. Greggs, Ona Johnson and T. B. Noble of Oklahoma City; B. F. Busby, G. Jones and F. Lawrence of Little Rock; W. M. Snelson and L. B. Miller of Memphis; H. Glover and H. Moore of Tampa; C. Hillgers of the home office.

The company's executives detailed four "De Luxe Productions," six "Anniversary Specials," 16 "Jubilee Specials," including four "Higgins Family," eight Gene Autry westerns, eight Roy Rogers westerns, eight westerns of the "Three Mesquiteers" series and the serials.

The Product

The product was announced as follows:

"De Luxe Productions"

Seven Million Dollars, by Sinclair Lewis; concerning "a new kind of Babbitt."

The Dark Command, by W. R. Burnett; The Quantrell Raiders in the Civil War.

Two Orphans, by R. D'Ennery; from a French classic.

Wagons Westward, by Armstrong Sperry; a frontier "epic" drama.

OTTAWA MANAGER FLIES FOR FILM

Martin Levinson, manager of the Rialto theatre, Ottawa, Canada, discovered one afternoon last week that the special film he needed for the evening performance was still in Montreal. A little rapid calculation showed him that the airplane service from the Ottawa airport was the only way out of his difficulty.

In a short time he found himself climbing into an airplane of the Laurentian Airways, Limited, beside Jack Charleson, Ottawa's only member of the Caterpillar Club. Taking off at 1:30 he was back at 4:45 o'clock with the print and time to spare before the show began.

"Anniversary Specials"

Lady From New Orleans, by Beth Brown; New Orleans social melodrama with a Mardi Gras background.

Tillie the Toiler, by Russ Westover; based on the cartoon.

Storm Over India, by Achmed Abdullah; story of the English army in India and native rebellion.

Guilty of Treason, by Peter B. Kyne; a thankful alien breaks up a spy ring.

Gangs of Chicago.

The Crooked Road, by Nat Ferber; the rise and fall of a king of the underworld.

"Jubilee Productions"

Escape From Sing Sing, by Louis Berg; an "expose" of prison life.

Call of the North, by Jack London; adventure in the Alaskan gold fields.

The Champ Maker, by Kendal Evans and Frank Scully; based on life of Tex Rickard, fight promoter.

Bengal Border Patrol, by Adrian Johnson; the Lancers in action.

Tom Sawyer Abroad, by Mark Twain.

Wolf of New York, by Nat Ferber; a Wall Street speculator sent to jail.

Girl From God's Country, by Nell Shipman; a girl fighting alone in the North.

Bowery Boy, by Sam Fuller.

A Sporting Chance, by Richard Wormser; a race track mystery.

Man of the Hour, by George Broadhurst; political machine elects a pliable playboy, who proves not so pliable.

Here Come the Marines, by Mildred Cram; a Nicaraguan uprising.

"The Higgins Family"

The Fighting Irish.

We're in the Money.

Everybody's Happy; Wall St. adventure.

Gene Autry Westerns

When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain; Gene prevents a spoiled heiress from selling her holdings.

Village Barn Dance; Gene drops his traveling radio program to clean up town.

Just a Song at Twilight; Gene outwits the villains in bidding for an army horse contract.

Old Faithful; Gene helps a young girl win the big horse race.

Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride; clearing the captain of the border patrol by rounding up the killers.

Round Up Time in Reno; old Pa Hawkins' ranch is not run into the ground by two irresponsible daughters.

Down by the Old Mill Stream; the railroad company doesn't buy all the property.

Carolina Moon; Eastern gangsters find their methods don't work.

Roy Rogers Westerns

The Arizona Kid; Roy fights organized terror in Cripple Creek.

Death Valley Days; trailing outlaw Apaches into the desert.

In Old Cheyenne; under-cover man for the cattlemen's Association.

Robinhood of the Pecos; settlers of early California saved from outlaws.

Man From Rio; the mystery of the Overland Stage.

Washington Cowboy; foiling the crooked utility corporation in Washington.

Days of '49; smuggling on the Canadian border.

Wyoming Wildcat; Public Enemy Number One and the cattle business.

"Three Mesquiteers" Westerns

Cowboys From Texas; the Mesquiteers defeat the gang battling for precious metal.

Sons of the Saddle; justice and the timber pirates.

West of Santa Fe; rounding up outlaws in the "pan-handle" territory.

Oklahoma Outlaws; saving the Indians and their oil.

Rocky Mountain Rangers; helping the middle westerners recover from nature's calamities.

Pioneers of the West; protecting the covered wagon train.

Covered Wagon Days; saving gold mine for a wagon train.

Arizona Skies; uncovering a plot which threatens the country.

"Super Serials"

The Lone Texas Ranger; outdoor adventure, in 15 chapters.

Drums of Fu Manchu; sliding panels and the menace of Sax Rohmer's Chinese villain, in 15 chapters.

"Streamline Serials"

King of the Royal Mounted; based upon the daily newspaper cartoon.

Jimmy Valentine Strikes Again; the Valentine underworld stories, in 12 chapters.

Sunday Shows for New York

New York legitimate theatre interests moved closer to their desire for Sunday shows during the New York World's Fair when representatives of the craft unions seemed favorable to the suggestion at a meeting with the league of New York Theatres Tuesday night. Actors' Equity, if the membership is favorable to the idea, would only be willing to hold Sunday shows if the craft unions were also willing to work that day at no extra rate of pay. The delegates will report on the question to their unions next week.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Dodge City

(Warner Brothers)

1866-1872 in Deep Kansas

Ladies and Gentlemen of Show Business, your reporter seats himself at a very early hour on this warm Sabbath morning—1:15, to be precise—at Dodge City, Kansas, to report that the city is still athrob with immense excitement stirred up by the Brothers Warner in behalf of this somewhat prodigious production of the same name.

Three governors and some 50,000 plain citizens of this and surrounding states came here today to see this picture. They are still seeing it, in the town's three cinemas, which will be grinding on until sometime tomorrow, in simultaneous presentation of the film that brought a special train from Hollywood and a special car from New York and Chicago for the official preview and premiere, with representatives of all the great outlets of screen information, the newspapers, the radio systems, and the magazines, especially the picture magazines. The upshot of all this is a rare condition. Anybody who doesn't know all about "Dodge City," and keenly, must have had his head in a rain barrel for weeks. They film is pre-sold to an extent that no other film ever was.

The foregoing is, of course, not news in the sense that news of pictures is interpreted in this department. The news is that those hundreds out of these thousands who were fortunate enough to get into one of the theatres for the firm's first exhibition were audibly unanimous in their approval of what they saw. They gasped at some of the splendid scenic shots. They shouted for the hero and they hated the villains perceptibly. They seemed to know that it was going to come out all right, what with Errol Flynn making a personal appearance in obvious good health before the screening, but they clamored to see the arrangements made. They saw a great display of daring, of courage, and of good oldfashioned barroom brawling, and they loved it. This was what had been promised them, and they were not cheated. Showmen who elect to make similar promises to their customers can rely on that sort of precedent, a singularly reliable sort.

Mr. Flynn is quite a hero in the film, a riding, shooting, square-hearted hero with a bit of blarney on his tongue and a knockout in either fist. He has hearty Alan Hale as one of his buddies and Guinn Williams as another, and they give the unscrupulous lot, played by Bruce Cabot, Victor Jory and assorted others, such a going-over as veteran Kansans were telling the newcomers about all day today. Both the veterans and the newcomers pronounced this a bit of all right.

Olivia De Havilland is the girl chiefly concerned in the story, which has little concern for girls save in the abstract, and she is as lovely as always through the eye of the color lens. There are some shots of Ann Sheridan, too, which are briefly breath-taking, but it is primarily a man's story so far as the acting goes. They do what they do to make Dodge City safe for wives and children, but it is the doing that makes the picture hum.

It is approximately axiomatic that Michael Curtiz directed the picture. The Brothers Warner usually turn over to the experienced Curtiz a picture that is big and broad and upon which they expect, as the saying is, to go to town. He hasn't let them down.

The production by Robert Lord is expensive, expansive and particular. Long shots of stampeding herds and short shots of brawling combat alternate in dramatic sequence, each quite manifestly authenticated. So is the original screen play by Robert Bruckner a straight-line institution, a 1-2-3-4 recitation of the exciting events which transpired, or seem to have, between the time when the Santa Fe got its main line through to Dodge City in 1866 and the sheriff in the picture got the place made fit to live in, which was around about 1872. There are no subtleties in the telling. It hits.

"Dodge City" is limited to no type of theatre, town or audience. It is a bright chapter cut boldly out of the history of the nation and placed firmly before the nation's people for inspection. It is earnest and convincing. It is exciting and it is, on occasion, amusing.

Previewed at Dodge City, Kansas, in three theatres with practically all of the population of Kansas inside or outside of one or another of them. There wasn't a dissenting voice.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Associate producer, Robert Lord. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Original screen play by Robert Bruckner. Photographed by Sol Polito. Film editor, George Amy. P. C. A. certificate No. 4959. Release date, April 8, 1939. Running time, 105 minutes, when seen in Dodge City. General audience classification.

The Story of Alexander Graham Bell

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Romantic Biography

Much must be remembered as one prepares to report "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" to the world's showmen. Everyone can forget one thing, though, and that is the title length and how it will fit the marquee. What is important to every possible patron is that in this picture is as fine entertainment as anyone could want.

The production is human interest entertainment as close to the heart as are one's own emotions. As a commercial proposition, it's close to the last word in honest, understanding and convincing production.

The true story of Alexander Graham Bell has an inspirational quality. This inspired the "out front" folk—Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Spring Byington, little Bobs Watson, Russell Hicks and all the rest—to performances that rightly may be described as memorable. It inspired the "behind the scenes" personnel—Darryl F. Zanuck, associate producer Kenneth Macgowan, director Irving Cummings, story author Ray Harris and screen play writer Lamar Trotti, their aids and assistants—to an effort which undoubtedly will force the inclusion of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" in future listings of the industry's most noteworthy accomplishments.

The appeal of the story is bounded by no limits. Its locale might have been any country in the world; its persons from any race, nationality or creed. It might have been about any man and woman who lived and loved and dreamed great things. But the locales are Boston and Salem, Mass., of 1875; the persons are Bostonians. It tells the story of the man who invented the telephone and the woman who was his wife.

Actually in telling one complete story, the picture tells four stories. One is the romantic story of the invention of the telephone; another is the heart warming love story of "Alexander Graham Bell" and "Mrs. Bell"; the third is a human interest story; the fourth is the triumph of the poor and weak over the wealthy and powerful.

One may think there is no romance in the story of the invention of a machine. There is great romance in the story of the telephone. It is the story of a man who dared to dream; who suffered and starved for his ideals, who grew discouraged and bitter, who saw his friends tempted to desert him, but persevered and was guided to a great destiny by a woman's love. There's great romance in true life love stories. This picture tells the story of the elocution teacher and his deaf pupil who became his wife; the woman who produced a love letter that became a vital piece of evidence in defeating powerful vested interests from robbing her husband of the profits and fame that were to be the result of his invention which made the whole world next door neighbors.

These stories are the picture's intimate substance endowing it with great appeal to the senses. They are amplified in dialogue, characterizations, situations and action. Among the incidents that may long be remembered are "Bell's" relations with the methodical, to-the-second, New Englander "Gardner Hubbard"; the faith "Thomas Sanders" had in the young teacher-scientist. Electrician "Thomas Watson" gave up a $3.00 a day job to starve with young "Bell." When he delivered his elegy to an egg, patrons felt their hearts jerk. But the moment which in sheer human interest and power to influence sympathetic emotions seldom has been rivaled on the screen is when "Bell," after long months of training, seats little deaf mute "George Sanders" on his father's lap and has him murmur "Father." There was scarcely a dry eye in the preview audience. The suspense dissolved in thunderous applause.

Just as "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" is high grade entertainment, it is high grade commercial screen merchandise. One could go on for pages enumerating values which showmen might use to call it to the attention of their patrons. But, in a larger sense, the job can be done easily and simply. Tell them you are offering a great attraction. Bid them remember pictures they have seen before. Assure them that "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" will not suffer when compared to any other production.

Previewed at the Federal Theatre, Treasure Island, San Francisco Bay, to an audience of Hollywood and San Francisco reporters, stars and guests. Mr. Zanuck might have been surprised that there was not that usual burst of applause common in Hollywood and environs when preview titles and credits are flashed on the screen, but the roar that followed completion of the showing must have floored him. You may as well prepare to be similarly floored when your audiences see the show.—GUS MCCARHTY.

I Am Not Afraid

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

The basic story of "I Am Not Afraid" is Lucien Hubbard's "Star Witness." However, Lee Katz, the screen play writer, has added a wealth of current events material that gives timely significance.

The theme of the original story was a condemnation of corrupt politics and gangsterism. This also condemns both, but goes further in advocating Americanism by making scathing attacks on foreign isms which threaten American institutions and liberties.

Gangsters and grafters, having terrorized a city, fight savagely when this dual reign is menaced. Only in the heart of old grandpa "Ulysses," who fought with Teddy Roosevelt at San Juan, does the spirit of Americanism flame. Many times reviling domestic and alien enemies, he succeeds, where police and law enforcement officers failed, in crushing the vicious ring after rescuing little Bill in true old soldier fashion.

Charles Grapewin is seen in the role which Chic Sale created in "Star Witness." His supporting cast includes Jane Bryan, Henry O'Neill, Elizabeth Risdon, Jimmy MacCallion, Dickie Jones, Fred Tozere, John Gallaudet, Don Douglas and William Royle. Grapewin is outstanding and the others are convincing. The show is wide open for exploitation that makes contacts with the wave of Americanism and patriotism now sweeping the country.

The Night Riders

(Republic)

Western

Starring the popular trio, The Three Mesquiteers, this latest of their western series for Republic goes back to the 1880's for its story. It is an unusual story, in line with the apparently increased attention this season to the story content of westerns. It tells of a gambler who poses as a Spaniard and with a phony land grant dating from Philip of Spain, establishes himself as a virtual dictator within the United States.

The pseudo Spaniard evicts all tenants on his "lands" who fail to meet his tax demands. Among those evicted are The Three Mesquiteers—John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune, who is a ventriloquist to boot. The Mesquiteers appeal to President James Garfield, but he points out that the United States court of claims has found the land grant claim valid.

So the Mesquiteers become "night riders."

Bulldog Drummond's Secret Police

(Paramount)

Mystery Melodrama

The late H. C. (Sapper) McNeile's estimable character of fiction, "Captain Hugh Drummond," is again on the screen for more adventures in his native England. The picture, adapted from the author's "Temple Tower," is set in "Drummond's" own country home in Rockingham, 20 miles from London. The possibility that gold and jewels, once belonging to Charles I, lie hidden within the fortress-like home establishes the plot, the motive for three killings, the opportunity for "Bulldog Drummond" to keep in practice, and, incidentally, the necessity that he postpone his wedding to "Phyllis Clavering" once again.

The secret police title stems from the humorous remark of "Colonel Nielson," of Scotland Yard, and refers to the little band of faithful followers of "Bulldog." John Howard continues in the "Drummond" character. Heather Angel as "Phyllis." H. B. Warner as "Nielson," Reginald Denny as "Algy," and E. E. Clive as "Tenny" also are in their accustomed roles. "Phyllis'" jittery "Aunt Blanche" is played by Elizabeth Patterson.

The production follows the pattern of the series and as a mystery is exciting entertainment, despite overdone comedy sequences and the continuous reference to the marriage plans.

Broadway Serenade

(MGM)

Musical Romance

"Broadway Serenade" is a combination of things that for a great many years have proved their entertainment and commercial values and some things not so valuable. For names it offers Jeanette MacDonald whose hit pieces when with Nelson Eddy are many, Lew Ayres, who is making a comeback and so does not overlook any trick that would enable him to steal the show, and such dependable performers as Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Al Shean, William Gargan, Franklin Pangborn and Paul Hurst. So far as story is concerned, it's ninety percent formula and a balance of surprising novelty.

A couple of beer garden entertainers are married. She becomes a Broadway star. He wants to compose great music but winds up playing a piano in a nickel and dime store. The stage star sings there, of course, while the tin pan alley devotee of Beethoven, pounds the ivories, the shop girls swoon and the customers are enthralled. The great woman gets greater and a rich man desires her, but the poor man gets so poor that he tosses his compositions into the fire. But there is a kindly wise old man to rescue them from the flames. Do those thousands of musical symbols prove a tremendous commercial success, do they not reunite husband and wife and do they not mean that the third angle to the triangle gets an undeserved punch in the jaw? Sure they do. Thereupon comes a demonstration of pictorial and musical spectacle, as ultra modernistic in staging, lighting, scenic and costume effects and as strange to the modern mind as would have been a radio message to the mind of one who was reading Whittier's "Snowbound" the winter it was written, visioning, the while, the facilities of 1939-1940.

Bing Crosby Sings Again

All a showman need do to collect the price of an admission ticket from your reporter and several million other Americans is to announce that he has on display a film in which Bing Crosby sings some typically Bing Crosby songs in the Bing Crosby manner. In this instance the songs are four in number and all are of hit parade quality. They are by Johnny Burke and James V. Monaco, who now take their place among the top ranking song writing teams of the era.

Two of these songs are sung by Crosby to an infant of some ten months whom they lull to sleep while the lens is full upon him. The infant's name is Sandy, and he pours into the picture such a measure of baby appeal as the screen hasn't dished up in many years. The songs Bing sings to the baby are no mere lullabies, nor are they sung as such; they are characteristic Crosby songs, delivered in slow Swing, and it will be a dull audience that doesn't discern in Bing's mastery of the situation the fruits of long experience with the four Crosby sprouts at home.

These songs and the numerous sequences with the baby, whose babblings had the preview audience in stitches, are the strong points of the picture and strong enough to carry any film. What goes on between these strong points is less distinguished. Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Irene Hervey, C. Aubrey Smith and Robert Kent, to name those of billing value, are affiliated with Bing in the telling of a sometimes humorous, sometimes dull, story about a crooning telegraph messenger, later taxi driver, who tries to be helpful to a young woman married to a play boy whose wealthy father wishes she weren't. There's a radio commentator in it, too, and some of the situations are amusing, others ordinary, some of the gags effective, particularly Auer's, some of them static.

Direction by David Butler, who is also credited with the story in collaboration with Herbert Polesie, is up to his standard. William Conselman's screen play spots the musical numbers advantageously. Art director Jack Otterson's settings, which include a wide variety of backgrounds, are of a kind to add much to the polish of the production. Orchestrations by John Scott Trotter, of Bing's radio hour, and Frank Skinner give the Crosby songs that solid lilt that listeners around the world can't seem to get enough of.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where the song numbers and the baby sequences elicited hearty response from an audience made up in about equal parts of profession and public.—W. R. W.

Streets of New York

(Monogram)

Melodrama

Here is a show that any exhibitor can offer his patrons with confidence that it will satisfy almost everyone, adults and youngsters. Monogram in the past year has turned out several outstanding attractions that had both entertainment and showmanship value. Not only is "Streets of New York" the best Monogram offering of the year, but it compares favorably with the leading pictures turned out by any studio. Considered as a whole the picture is a combination of those qualities, a sound and believable story, good production detail, which together create the desired illusion and produce the desired effects, with the aid of capable acting and intelligent direction. Should by any chance an independently produced picture be nominated for any of the Academy awards, "Streets of New York" would have an odds-on chance to carry off one or two honors.

For the important matter of name value the picture makes available Jackie Cooper and little Martin Spellman, who actually carry the story, and in the work of George Cleveland audiences will see one of the finest etched character bits that they have witnessed in years.

The story's simplicity is the element that gives the production its power punch and appeal. Newsboy "Jimmy" is ambitious to become a lawyer. While studying, he organizes his sheet hustlers legitimately and make a particular pet of crippled "Gimpy," meanwhile tolerating irascible "Pop" nicely. Looked upon with favor by "Judge Carroll," after he has defended his own group as well as some musclers—in headed by "Spike," "Jimmy's" handicap is his elder brother "Tap," a racketeer. The Christmas party which the "Judge" gives Jimmy and his pals is a warmly tender event. But immediately the story turns melodramatic again when, as "Spike's" mob raids "Jimmy's" stand, "Tap" is being hunted by police as a murderer.

While melodrama is the fundamental quality of the picture, it is not without moments of rare comedy and bits of human interest. As written into the screen play by Robert D. Andrews, directed by William Nigh, produced by William T. Lackey and played by a skillful cast, the show stacks up as one that any exhibitor may include on his program.

One Armed Bandit

Lantz Cartune

A cartoon moral on the lesson that gambling never pays, especially when played at a slot machine, is joined with a "ten-twent'-thirt" melodrama of the Gay Nineties vintage to produce a pen and ink composition that should amuse most audiences. The heroine's father is addicted to the vice of jackpot playing and gambles away not only his relief check but the mortgage on the old homestead. The daughter, being psychic and knowing that all is not well with the pater, leaves her washboard to plead with the villain. Not content with having won the family's house and home, the nasty man makes some mean gestures at the virtuous gal. But all turns out well in the end when the young lady's muscular boy friend bouncingly trounces the cad, saves pappy's dough, retrieves the mortgage and wins the daughter's hand. There is one shot in the cartoon rough house that will bring a good laugh to showman and patron alike. While the hero and villain are swapping punches, two odd little figures march across the scene bearing a banner inscribed with the sentiment that "motion pictures are your best entertainment."—Running time, seven minutes.

Partisans of the claims of Artie Shaw for the King of Swing title will clap their hands and stamp their feet in approval over this recital by their favorite, which is the newest number from jazz concert classification of the Melody Masters series. Maestro Shaw and his lads render such "hot stuff" numbers as "Begin the Beguine," current favorite in jam session circles; "Let's Stop the Clock"; "Non-Stop Flight," featuring Mr. Shaw's renowned clarinet, and a Russian ditty called "Pross-Tschai." Helen Forrest and Tony Pastor, not the original T.P., offer the vocal interludes.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Our Gang Cutups

A juvenile lesson on the fickleness of the feminine heart is offered in this page of Our Gang comic strip that may be more in the range of adult understanding and experience. The figures in the young triangle are Alfalfa, as the romantic with a yen for the chivalrous past; Darla as the femme fatale, and Butch as the menace. Stimulated by the spell induced by a hynotist, Alfalfa challenges his rival to a contest of pistols for the hand of their prize. Revived from his state of false courage, Alfalfa arranges with Butch to fake the match and to allow Darla to choose the victim of her heart's desire. But, the young lady overhears the arrangements and when the challengers are stretched out on the field of honor, true to the calling of her sex, chooses the arm of Waldo, a rich black horse in the sweepstake contest for the miss and her attention. Even though the material may be too advanced for the infant fans of Our Gang antics, their big brothers and sisters should find the amorous complications amusing.—Running time, 10 minutes.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

W. Ray (William Raymond) Johnston, that young old timer of Monogram, likes to tell stories about his stay at Thanhouser Studios in New Rochelle, 25 years ago, in the days when, if an unexpected snow descended, the scenario writer, who lived next door, would rush to the studio, and by noon the company would be shooting on a snow picture. Likewise, when Long Island Sound would freeze over, a quick filming job would result in some such piece as "My Cousins from Labrador."

Once a water main broke, flooding a side street in New Rochelle. A story was quickly written and the players, in flat-bottomed row boats, made hurried "rescues" from windows and rowed people up and down the street before the water ran down the sewers.

In "The Million Dollar Mystery," one of the first serials, Johnston relates, "James Cruze, later a director, played a young reporter, and was using his own small car which he had just bought. Someone in the Thanhouser press department told him he should have received the car free for the publicity he gave it in the picture. Jimmy approached the automobile agency on the question and they agreed to give the actor a new car. The following afternoon, Jimmy played a game of horse-shoes, betting the car. He lost. A few days later he was informed that the agency had changed its collective mind since discovering he already had one of their cars and it had been identified in the first reels of the serial.

In the next chapter, Jimmy arranged with the scenario editor to have a scene where the car broke down. In the film he attempted to fix it when a farmer came along asking what was wrong with the car. In a subtitle, Jimmy said, "Everything. The darn thing never did run right."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has two new "scientific measuring devices" which it will hereafter apply to screen testing of prospective talent. One is called the haemotometharmozograph, the other the electroencephalograph. With the first they will measure blood to determine stage-fright. The other is a "lie detector" to measure mental responses to emotions through changes in blood pressure. They'll tell everything but whether the candidates can act. That will be determined when theatre owners put the old boxofficecapability test on them.

Louis Salvador is the son of a New England sea captain, onetime football player for Boston College, onetime amateur rum-runner, owner of a furniture moving business, father of six children . . . AND holder of the world's record for 68 consecutive tailspins in an airplane.

On the day he went up to try for the tailspin record, near Boston, few knew of his intentions. It took him an hour to climb the 12,500 miles in the clouds, and just 20 minutes to spin down.

"The field down there had been about empty when I went up but there were about 3,000 persons there when I got down—they saw me from the highways and the beaches and came rushing over, expecting to see a crash."

In the group on the ground was a 20th Century-Fox newsreel cameraman, who apparently hoped to get a "scoop" on an anticipated crack-up. When Salvador set his plane down, the newsreeler walked over to him, disgusted, and said, "If you had only crashed, what a swell picture it would have made!"

Electrical Research Products, the Telephone Company subsidiary that was formerly so active supplying U. S. exhibitors with sound equipment, received a most unusual order the other day for a theatre reproducer. It came from His Highness Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George, Rajah of Sarawak—the only white Rajah of the Orient.

Seems that His Highness enjoys a unique distinction for his benevolence, his many benefactions to his people, including a magnificent movie house at Kuching which he built and furnished completely at his own expense in 1934 for the enjoyment of his subjects. He now wants an up-to-date sound reproducer.

Sarawak is an independent little state carved from the Northwestern plains of Borneo. The White Rajah's regime dates from the occasion in the 1800's when Rajah Muda Hassim prevailed upon James Brooke, an English officer, to help him in suppressing a rebellion and in return for his courageous services ceded Sarawak to Brooke.

At the 21st anniversary luncheon of Associated British Pictures, in London, the other noontime, Arthur Dent, in reminiscent mood, told the trade and press in attendance about how years ago when he was first in the film-selling business, an exhibitor in a small town had wired for a feature film in a hurry. Arthur sent him a print of "Why Do You Live?" It was so good (?) that the next day the exhibitor sent back a wire: "The only reason you live is because you sent it by train instead of bringing it yourself."

Mr. Dent also told the old chestnut about a Wardour Street film executive who was fighting a film suit in London's High Courts, but who was away on vacation at the time of trial. After the decision in the courtroom an elated assistant to the executive dispatched a wire to the vacationist, informing that "Justice has prevailed!" Back came the reply on a prepaid form: "Appeal at once!"

Carl Porter, down in Charleston, South Carolina, writes to say that he has found "the perfect Negro theatre." It is situated, he adds, in Charleston, on the main street, sandwiched in between white business houses, owned by the Bijou Amusement Company of Nashville, Tenn., with a negro manager, a pioneer in southern exhibition.

"Unless you live in this historical city and are aware of its existence, you will not think that it is a negro house from the exterior, as the lobby is up-to-date and the cashier may be taken for a Japanese.

"Passes are unknown. Billboards can be posted all over the city and cards placed in windows of even white business houses.

"The entire personnel are negroes. The projectionists are very good, as they are compelled to stand a rigid examination before a board of whites.

"The order is good, the projection is as good as any I ever saw and from a talk with the old grey-haired intelligent negro manager, I learned that the cashiers are never short."

DIVORCEMENT BILLS MEET WITH REVERSAL

Kansas Measure Dies; Elimination from Consideration Recommended for Missouri Bills

Measures to divorce theatre control from producers and distributors met with reversals this week in legislative moves in two states. The Kansas legislators closed the session's books and went home, permitting a divorcement bill to die on the desks of the Senate judiciary committee. In Missouri a revisory committee recommended that 212 bills be eliminated from consideration at once. One of them called for separation of theatres from producers.

Block Sales Bill Dies

The Kansas Legislature adjourned without enacting any legislation directly affecting the industry. The censorship bill banning block booking and placing enforcement in the hands of police over the state died on the calendar after being reported out by the Senate judiciary committee.

The Williamson divorcement measure, based on the Dakota law, had been passed by the House. The chain store tax bill, with progressive levies running up to $500 a unit, died in the Senate. A companion measure already had expired in the House. Other bills that fell by the wayside were HB 533, which would have done away with the state censor board, and one sponsored by broadcasters against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The revision committee of the Missouri Legislature has recommended that 212 bills now before the legislature be immediately dropped. Among the bills are the theatre divorcement measure sponsored by Representatives Turner and Smart; Representative Hayden's bill creating a state censor board with sweeping powers; two House chain store tax bills which had been combined, and two anti-ASCAP bills.

The Missouri House approved extension of the two per cent tax to Dec. 31, 1941.

New York Bills

The New York State legislature recessed last Friday for 10 days until Monday. Only three bills bearing on the film industry had survived. Hundreds had been killed in the final report of the Assembly standing committee. The measures surviving were the projectionist bill introduced by Robert J. Crews. Another was the Butler bill on admission of children and the third was the Webb measure providing a referendum by villages on Sunday shows.

All but one of the many bills imposing restrictions and heavy taxation on outdoor advertising died in committee. Among the tax bills eliminated was that of Assemblyman Bennett calling for a levy on theatre circuits. Anti-discrimination bills also went by the board.

Another important measure dropped in the Senate but which it is believed will be revived is that providing the transfer of theatre ticket agency regulation to the license commissioner in New York City.

There were indications in Albany that the Republican majorities in both the State Senate and Assembly had turned to a two per cent sales tax as a means of defraying the $64,000,000 emergency taxes in Governor Herbert Lehman's record-breaking $415,000,000 budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1st.

A new bill introduced in Albany last week asked for revision of the tax on the sale of motion picture and broadcasting rights on public boxing and wrestling exhibitions. The bill would substitute a five per cent tax on gross income for the five per cent on total gross receipts.

THREE-CORNERED CANADA BADINAGE

The bill to create a National Film Board for Canada, now in the hands of the Senate at Ottawa, if it achieves nothing else, at least livened one session of the House of Commons. The following three-cornered discussion took place among Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Earl Lawson (Cons., York South) and Denton Massey (Cons., Toronto East), cousin of Raymond Massey, actor.

Mr. Massey: The minister . . . suggested that he would be chairman. . . . There would be three civil servants and . . . perhaps a school teacher, a pressman (newspaperman) and a business man. . . .

Mr. Euler: That was merely a suggestion.

Mr. Massey: . . . if we are going to produce films, the presence of a showman on the board is highly to be desired.

Mr. Lawson: No one has thought of the moving-picture man!

Mr. Massey: . . . with all due deference to the honorable gentlemen opposite who occupy the treasury benches, I see no one who has the ability of a P. T. Barnum or a Cecil B. deMille.

Spokesmen for the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, appearing before the Ohio joint committee on permanent relief, have urged reinstatement of the former 10 per cent admission tax as a means of raising funds to finance the state relief program. Arguments that the admission tax was practically the only state impost to show an increase in 1938 over 1937 returns, was answered by P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in the current bulletin, as being due to more rigid tax enforcement rather than an increase in business. Ohio exhibitors now pay a three per cent sales tax based on gross business.

On Wednesday the Ohio ITO was to have submitted an amendment providing for the elimination of "Newsreels" from censorship to the House Bill No. 35, which seeks to amend the present Ohio censorship law.

A bill introduced in the Wisconsin Assembly calls for a tax on circuit theatres of $5 to $100, depending upon the number of units in the circuit. In addition, the measure would assess an equalization tax on seating capacity, from two cents to 30 cents per seat, also depending upon the size of the circuit.

Theatres in Wisconsin with refrigerating units of less than 100 ton capacity, when used for humidity control and air conditioning, provided the refrigerant used is non-injurious and the refrigerating equipment is in compliance with orders of the industrial commission, are exempt from the provisions of the Assembly bill which seeks to license operators of refrigerating machines.

The common judiciary committee of Milwaukee has referred to the special citizen's committee named a number of months ago to study the health features of double bills, the proposal by Alderman John E. Kalupa that theatres install illuminated clocks. R. A. Tesch, business manager for the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin, appeared against the proposal, maintaining it would be an expense to exhibitors to install the clocks and that they would distract attention from the screen.

The second Massachusetts film censorship bill has been defeated. It would have set up a motion picture division in the state education department "with authority to review and license" and would have had jurisdiction over advertising as well.

The Lincoln, Neb., city council has laid over consideration of the proposed ordinance limiting film programs to two hours, 15 minutes, and designed to kill duals. The draft has been referred to Clarence Miles, city attorney, for a legal opinion.

Three billboard bills ran into difficulty this week. In Concord, a New Hampshire legislature committee gave an unfavorable report to the bill which proposes regulation of billboards; in Vermont a bill drastically revising the state's billboard regulation law was withdrawn in favor of a substitute measure, while in Nebraska a committee killed the billboard bill which would have taxed all billboard ad space 25 cents per square foot.

Admission Tax Proposed

The Main House having sanctioned by a 78 to 49 vote the legalization of Sunday motion pictures, this week added an amendment to impose a five cent tax on each admission. The bill, which provides local option, and the amendment have still to be passed on by the Senate. It is estimated that the five cent tax would produce $200,000 annually for old age pensions. The legislature rejected a similar bill two years ago. The Rhode Island Ministers' Union is opposing the bill.

Theatremen throughout Tennessee report crowded houses on Sundays, following the passage of the state law permitting Sunday shows under a local option procedure, by vote of a majority of any city council.

J. B. Streepy, attorney general of Arkansas, said this week that Act 175 of 1939 legalized Sunday motion pictures in all cities and towns in the state, irrespective of local elections. The act repealed an old law permitting Sunday films only after they had been approved in local communities at an election.

The Ohio appellate court has approved $50 fines of Dan Gilhula of the Cort and State theatres in Cambridge, Ohio, and three employees. They were arrested several weeks ago for operating Sunday films, and fined $50 and costs by the mayor.

Canadian Film Board

The measure to create a National Film Board of Canada has been referred to a committee of the Senate in Ottawa. Under the bill several government departments will be consolidated. As the measure stands there would be only one salaried official in an eight man board. The others would be given traveling expenses and allowance would be made for temporary employees when films are in production.

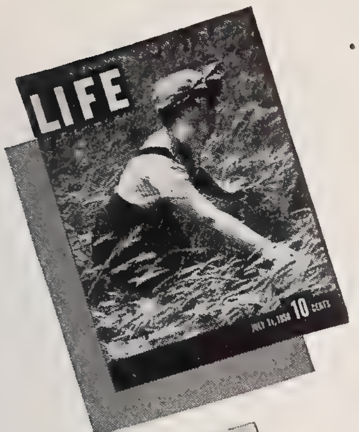
The proposal by the Ontario government to amend the statutes as to permit commercial amusements on Sundays, including films, has been shelved for one year, according to Gordon Conant, attorney general.

There is some possibility of the Ontario government legislating at the present session of the House to restore, in some degree, the amusement tax in Ontario. The Toronto Board of Control is opposed to the restoration of the tax.

The Patterson bill providing for licensing and regulating film exchanges in Nova Scotia has passed second reading in the provincial legislature. It would empower the provincial censors to investigate distribution.

LIFE IS A NATURAL FOR MOVIE ADVERTISING

17,300,000 PEOPLE



10 years old and over read LIFE each week. For this pleasure they pay the largest sum the public ever paid for a magazine.

And a substantial part of their reading is about motion pictures, through LIFE's "movie of the week," and through many other stories that bring them news of this glamorous art.

More and more film companies are taking advantage of this ideal opportunity of reaching thousands of box office prospects in every U. S. city. Already film companies have placed more orders for space in LIFE in 1939 than they ordered in the whole of 1938.

Note: When Publishers Fact Service asked 9,382 exhibitors, "In which of the four large weekly magazines are you most likely to read what's on every page, including the advertisements?" LIFE WAS WAY OUT IN FIRST PLACE.

The following motion picture companies have ordered space in LIFE for 1939 to presell 17,300,000 movie goers:

Columbia Pictures Corp.
Loew's Incorporated
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture Corp.)
Paramount Pictures, Inc.
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.
Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation
United Artists Corporation
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

LIFE SELLS ENTERTAINMENT

TELEVISION PLANS IN U.S. ARE EXTENDED

Ostrer Says Baird Sets Will Be Shipped to America Within Three Weeks

As the New York World's Fair nears its opening on the Flushing meadows April 30th and with it the first large scale debut of television, the companies holding patents, transmitting images and manufacturing equipment are expanding their technical preparedness and consolidating their financial positions. The Fair's opening will mark the start of a race by American and English companies, to win public favor in the first year.

Baird Stock Issue

The English Baird Television Company and the Allen B. Dumont Laboratories, of Passaic, N. J., figured largely in this week's development.

At the annual meeting of Baird's stockholders in London last week, the financial report and the new plan, under which Gaumont British is taking 35 per cent of a $2,000,000 stock issue, were both approved. Sir Harry Greer, chairman of the board, told the stockholders that the company's present assets are $6,026,000. Isidore Ostrer, financier and theatre chain operator, was reported by the London Times to have said that Gaumont would save about $2,000,000 by equipping its theatres with its own (Baird) apparatus. Mr. Ostrer declared that in the current year the investment of GB in radio and television had returned 12½ per cent.

(Editor's note: Unofficial estimates in English radio circles place the number of television sets sold in the approximately four years' "official" life of television in that country, at about 5,000 maximum. Baird and Scophony, which is an "optical-electro" scanning system differing from the cathode tube system, are among leading television systems in England).

Baird "Invading" U. S.

Further Baird developments are the company's determination to invade America, either by exhibition of its equipment at the New York World's Fair, or by use in Broadway theatres of its receiving equipment, or both. Ian Javal, commercial director of the company, was in this country and reportedly talked over such an invasion with several Broadway theatre owners, and with the Fair officials. Mr. Ostrer, last week in London, declared that "within three weeks" Baird television sets would be shipped to New York. Mr. Ostrer told reporters he believed the British company could supply the demand for sets, if there is one. A Baird Television Corporation of America is understood to exist, though inactive, as a financial basis for operations in this country. Mr. Javal is expected back this month with equipment and engineers to handle installations.

Arthur Lee, GB vice-president, said this week that "three Broadway theatres" would install Baird equipment by about May 15th.

On Saturday, the British Broadcasting Corporation televised the Oxford-Cambridge boat race. Three London Gaumont British houses received the images, on Baird equipment. The event was accompanied by much publicity, which packed the houses.

Solomon Sagall, managing director of the Scophony company, is expected to return to this country, to negotiate additional deals for an "American Scophony," of $10,000,000 capitalization. Mr. Sagall, while in New York in November, talked with financiers, some of them in the motion picture industry, and was reported to have tried to persuade transmitting companies here, and the Federal Communications Commission, of the necessity of altering transmission in some degree to accommodate reception by Scophony receiving sets. Eddie Cantor, the comedian, is interested in the Scophony company.

The news this week from the Dumont Laboratories, of Passaic, New Jersey, in which Paramount Pictures has a large interest, is of the television company's registration with the Securities Exchange Commission, in Washington. The registration certificate covers $750,000 of ten-year convertible, five per cent notes, and warrants for common stock.

Paramount, the statement shows, is the owner of 14,000 shares of the Class B common, which represents 100 per cent of this class of stock. Paramount also has an agreement to increase its holdings. DuMont states, in the registration, that it will use $592,350 for increased production, and $270,000 for working capital, out of the proceeds of the note issue, which will be underwritten by the Lehman Brothers and Hemphill, Noyes and Company.

The Dumont company has applied to the Federal Communications Commission for permission to change, if necessary, the location of its transmitter, to broadcast during the daytime, instead of, as now, from midnight until morning; and for an increase of power, to 50 kilowatts.

Fair's Television Plans

Plans for television at the New York World's Fair are practically complete. The NBC-RCA exhibit of television in all aspects, will feature 13 of RCA's latest model stock receivers, and one "projection type" receiver which will throw an image on a six by ten foot screen. There will be an RCA-NBC "telemobile" unit roaming the Fair grounds to pick up outside events. The NBC television station, W2XBS, Radio City, goes into daily public television transmission April 30.

The Columbia Broadcasting System may have its Chrysler Tower transmitter ready in time for the Fair. General Electric will not only show its receivers, but allow guests to take part in television programs. Westinghouse plans are virtually the same.

The Ford company will have a television receiver in the executive lounge of the Ford building. The gesture is understood to be for advertising its line of cars, and not as an indication that Ford will enter into television set manufacture. Crosley, and other companies, will display television, in a manner similar to that of the foregoing companies.

Last week, it was reported from London, that more than a dozen of that city's newest apartment houses are being equipped with "central television" much as present day modern apartment houses and hotels are equipped with central radio systems.

The Philco Radio and Television Corporation is sending a "television caravan" across the country. The equipment includes a transmitter, and receiving sets to pick up the images telecast. The route, as given out this week, includes Washington, Baltimore, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and St. Louis.

A supplement to the standard motion picture producers agreements covering the use of RCA Photophone sound-film recordings for television, was mailed this week to all of the company's recording licensees by Harry Sommerer, RCA Photophone Division head.

National Screen, Trailer-Made Litigation Ends

The litigation between National Screen Service and Trailer-Made, Inc., which had been carried on in U. S. District Court in New York, has been brought to an end by an adjustment of the claims.

Trailer-Made has withdrawn its suit under which it was claimed that National Screen interfered with contracts between Trailer-Made and its customers. The settlement decree perpetually enjoined Trailer-made from the use of National Screen music in the sound tracks to its trailers.

In addition, Trailer-Made will turn over to National Screen for destruction all negative sound tracks containing National music, and will withdraw from its exchanges and take out of circulation all trailers containing National music. National Screen may also, upon 48 hours notice, inspect the sound tracks in Trailer-Made's library.

Saul Rogers, Trailer-Made attorney, pointed out that no admission was made in the decree that the use of any of the music was deliberate.

AMPA Ticket Headed by Lazarus

Paul N. Lazarus at last Thursday's meeting at the Hotel Astor was nominated to be president by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. Nominations for other posts were Vincent Trotta, vice-president; Kenneth Clark, secretary, and Herb Berg, treasurer. Ralph Rolan, Eli Sugarman, James Cron, Lou Lifton and Martin Starr will act as trustees for the next three years.

There is no opposing ticket. Elections will be held April 27th.

Herbert Kline, producer of the film, "Crisis," was the principal speaker at the Thursday luncheon. Other speakers included Mrs. Timothy A. Kenny, of Kendor Productions and Brenda Forbes of the play "One for the Money."

Drops Vaudeville Policy

The Fox Tower Theatre, Kansas City, has dropped its policy of regular vaudeville with films. Occasionally name bands will be featured. The house will pair with the Uptown in showing important new pictures available to Fox Midwest.

Lee Joins Paramount

Claude F. Lee, as executive of the Sparks circuit in Florida, said last week in Gainsville that he had accepted an assignment with Paramount Pictures, Inc., to make a study of theatre public relations from a national standpoint.

Select "Gateway" Judges

RKO has selected the three judges who will choose the finalists in the "Gateway to Hollywood" series, for the first 13-week cycle. The board will be Cecil B. DeMille, Frank Lloyd and Gregory LaCava.

SMPE CONVENTION PROGRAM GIVES ONE FULL SESSION TO TELEVISION

Engineers Will Combine First-hand Study of Technics of Production at Source with Papers on Advancement

A symposium on television and a first-hand study of the technics of production at the source will highlight the Spring Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which convenes at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood for five days starting Monday, April 17th. The tentative program for the meeting was announced this week. The studios to be visited are Paramount and Warner Brothers.

Technical processes and equipment developed since the Society met in Detroit last fall, October 31st to November 2nd, will be discussed at the sessions. The Society meets twice a year. Last spring the convention was held in Washington April 25th to April 28th.

Also arranged is a color stills exhibition. Twenty-nine contributors have already signified their intention of participating. E. A. Williford, president of the SMPE, will preside and will be assisted by the various committee chairmen.

The tentative program follows, in detail:

MONDAY, APRIL 17

10:00 to 12:00 Noon

Blossom Room; General and Business Session; H. G. Tasker, Chairman.

Report of the Convention Committee; W. C. Kunzmann, Convention Vice-President (5 min.)

Report of the Membership and Subscription Committee; E. R. Geib, Chairman (5 min.)

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LADY OBJECTS, THE: Lanny Ross, Gloria Stuart —One of the better offerings from Columbia this year. No business to amount to anything on this but everyone well pleased and several went out of their way to tell me how much they enjoyed it. I even liked it exceptionally well myself. The music is far above average. If Columbia would do this well each week there would be no kicks. But two or three big ones will not support 50 weak ones. And are they weak! Played January 31.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

LET US LIVE: Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Bellamy—A grand show for any theatre. Running time, 68 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TERROR OF TINY TOWN, THE: Billy Curtis, Yvonne Moray, Little Billy—Business was so flat that I didn't care what happened so I booked this single, but did I get fooled? They liked it so well, some came back Saturday. It was a good story and was more carefully put together than the run of mill westerns. The little fellows put all they had into it. It was something different and that is what we need in westerns. Running time, 60 minutes. Played December 16-17.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—One of the finest pictures I've seen Cagney in for a long time. The "Dead End Kids" were great and the picture has a wonderful moral lesson with it. Also, the girl with all the "oomph," Ann Sheridan, and Pat O'Brien give it the finishing touch. Played to good business two nights.—Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan—This was above the average and certainly brought them in at the box office. Warner has certainly come out of it with action pictures and this helps us small town exhibitors.—Castle Theatre, Brackettsville, Texas. Small town patronage.

CASE OF THE STUTTERING BISHOP, THE: Donald Woods, Ann Dvorak—Used this on Friday and Saturday with another feature and must say it clicked 100 per cent. Little weak for a single; a honey on a double. Running time, 56 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, Johnnie Davis—Another nice program picture from Warner. O'Brien is well liked and seems to always please. Running time, 94 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins, Louis Armstrong and Orchestra—Very pleasing light entertainment and that is what most people want. The picture was thoroughly satisfactory. The cast was good; there was plenty of action and some humorous situations. Louis Armstrong and Band added greatly to the enjoyment. Should please any audience. Recording only fair. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 12-14.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay —We picked this up rather old but failed to find any of the gold. It was all gone. Barely made expenses. But we must admit it was a very fine picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Lynne Carver, Rex Ingram—Very good picture which did extra business and pleased all. Play it. Played March 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Nat Pendleton—Personally, I did not care for this but it grossed more in two days than "Sweethearts" did in three, so guess I have no cause to complain. Dennis O'Keefe is not good enough for the lead but this one pleased the action fans. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 18-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey, Nat Pendleton—A nice little program picture that has plenty of action and enough suspense to please all fans. We played it on a weekend and got by nicely. Running time, 67 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell—A picture that I liked very much, and all that came to see it liked it. Lot of people stayed away, figuring they would not like it. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 17-19.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Buddy Ebsen—A good little picture with a little extra draw. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 17-18.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Honors go to Gracie Allen in this one. Fair Sunday-Monday business. My people say that Eleanor as an actress is still a good dancer. Played March 12-13.—J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. Rural and small town patronage.

LET FREEDOM RING: Nelson Eddy, Virginia Bruce, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Victor McLaglen—Something missed here. The trailer we received was very poor, so far as exploiting as wonderful a show as this one. The one-sheets showed absolutely nothing and all in all we feel that the poor draw was due entirely to the advertising department of the producers. A good action picture with Eddy's wonderful voice at its best, but a disappointment at the box office. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Bennett, Melvyn Douglas, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Fay Bainter—This picture will please both sides. Margaret Sullavan alone would pull the continued interest and you certainly won't go wrong giving this preferred time in small towns. Business good.—Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. Small town patronage.

SPRING MADNESS: Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan, Burgess Meredith—We're sorry that we played this picture midweek. It is certainly deserving of a better spot on the program. Excellent comedy kept our audience in good humor throughout. Well cast and will prove a good builder for the coming Lew Ayres. He deserves more important roles and believe he will get 'em as a result of this. Played March 15-17.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—As I did not make film rental in a three-day showing, I am not sure I can give a fair report. I made the mistake of booking this on a midweek date and struck the worst roads of the year. It had been shown previously in an adjoining town and got a lot of word of mouth panning, as it was not generally liked. The color is the most beautiful I ever saw, music excellent, the Albertina Rasch ballets tops, as they always are. There is absolutely no story and those who like music thought it good while others were decidedly bored. The best musical number is "On Parade," sung by Nelson Eddy, accompanied by a marine band. With a good story, this could easily have been the best of the year but, except for the superb coloring, this is the poorest this team has ever made. Give 'em a story next time, Leo. Running time, 114 minutes. Played March 15-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Cary Grant, Constance Bennett, Billie Burke, Roland Young—Went back and picked this one up to play before "Topper Takes a Trip" and find it is one of the swellest pictures it has ever been my good fortune to play. Cary Grant is at his best and Connie Bennett and Roland Young are also very good. The story is well connected and worked out. It is a very hilarious and extremely funny affair with a serious undertone through the whole thing. You really hate to see it end. If you haven't already played it, do so. It will hold up top dates, too. Played February 13.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

AMBUSH: Gladys Swarthout, Lloyd Nolan—Good. Pleased 100 per cent.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Joan Bennett, Jack Benny, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—No story, no interest and no receipts.—Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. Small town patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland—This is a nice little program picture suitable for family night. We ran it on our Pal Nite program and everyone enjoyed it. I wouldn't recommend it for weekends. Business just fair but pleased everyone. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Rufe Davis—Here is one that is a flop at B. O. It's silly. Where do they get the title "Mountain Music"? No draw at B. O. Rufe Davis very good. This is one Paramount that sure slipped. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 5.—J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER, THE: Douglass Dumbrille, Sidney Toler, Russell Hayden, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields—I think the industry owes producer Harry Sherman a vote of thanks for keeping the "Western" average so high. This film will please any audience and we need more casts such as the excellent selections made in this Zane Grey story. Highly exciting. Excellent plot. Swell scenes. A-1 class. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 18-21.—W. E. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ONE-THIRD OF A NATION: Sylvia Sidney, Leif Erikson—Fair action picture which failed to draw. No kicks; no compliments. Played March 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaaal, Akim Tamiroff—Not as good as some of Bing's past pictures, but we would class it as a fairly good picture for family trade. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 19-21.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison, J. Carrol Naish—Especially good action picture of crime type. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 22-23.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—Pretty good action picture which failed to draw. No star power. Played March 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—Played this a little old but it sure drew at B. O. Truly great picture. We played it three days to a very good business. Direction, acting and cast excellent. Here is one you should give a return date.

Print in fair condition. Running time, 109 minutes. Played February 26-28.—J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—"Hoppy" with "Windy" and, boy, this one is really tops in these westerns. You don't stand behind the door when they come out.—Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. Small town patronage.

SUNSET TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Just an entertaining western that western fans enjoyed.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ZAZA: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr—A box office flop. We were out time, money and patience with this poor effort.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

Republic

CALL OF THE YUKON: Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts—Plenty of thrill and gasps in this. Our audiences ate this up and Republic sure knows how to make them. Running time, 70 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

DOWN IN "ARKANSAW": Ralph Byrd, Weaver Bros., Elviry—Very well received. Did the complete cost of whole show over "Suez" and a rainy, icy night, at that. Print was in bad shape but sound OK. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 24-25.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

DOWN IN "ARKANSAW": Ralph Byrd, Weaver Brothers, Elviry, Pinky Tomlin—Plenty of weekend entertainment in this picture. Everybody liked it but no outstanding business. Play it. You'll not be sorry.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DURANGO VALLEY RAIDERS: Bob Steele, Louise Stanley—Played this picture old but did nice business. My patrons said they were tired of singing cowboys and were glad once more to see one who put up some fight and action. Played March 25-26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GANGS OF NEW YORK: Ann Dvorak, Wynne Gibson, Maxie Rosenbloom—Had to double bill this and at that lost money.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

PRISON NURSE: Henry Wilcoxson, Marian Marsh—Only fair. Managed to hold up the bottom end of a double feature on Friday and Saturday. Henry Wilcoxon would make a much better villain than hero. Republic's Autrys are failing; the Mesquiteers are only fair. Their program stuff is fair. Played February 3-4.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Play up Lulu Belle and Scotty. They will do business for you. Rogers fast approaching Autry here for top business. Our patrons want more like this one. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 24-25.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

STORM OVER BENGAL: Patric Knowles, Richard Cromwell, Rochelle Hudson—A good action picture, somewhat different from usual action stuff. Running time, 66 minutes.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRIGGER TRIO: Three Mesquiteers (Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune)—Another great western. Republic can be proud of the Three Mesquiteers. They draw as good as any on the market. Running time, 54 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

WESTERN JAMBOREE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Jean Rouverol—Republic should spend a little more money on Autry productions. Smiley Burnette draws the laughs. Low gross due to bad weather. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 10-11.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

LAW WEST OF TOMBSTONE, THE: Harry Carey, Tim Holt, Jean Rouverol, Evelyn Brent—Very poor western considering the cast. Harry Carey and Tim Holt both very good but the story let them down somewhere. I coudn't pick out just exactly what was wrong with it but it just didn't hold together somewhere and did not click. Played February 3-4.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAD MISS MANTON: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—Thoroughly enjoyed by my audience. Good entertainment. Stanwyck does a good job here. Can recommend this one. Running time, 9 reels. Played March 16.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY WITH THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis—Too short unless on double bill. However, good entertainment. Would fill in on a double bill OK. Running time, 6 reels. Played March 9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers—I didn't think this was as good as most of the Withers pictures as it was just too far fetched, but apparently my large Bargain Night crowd disagreed with me as they nearly tore up the seats with their laughter on the windup. Good business, and I guess I must have to say good picture, as the public must be the final judge. Played February 7.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks.—Just fair. He is not Charlie Chan.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—By far the best in the entire Jones Family series and they have all been above average entertainment. These pictures are enjoyed by everyone and are really beginning to mean something at the box office. Fazenda and Eddie Collins contribute to the laughs. Recording very good. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 24-25.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—A box office tonic. The halt, the lame and the blind came to enjoy it.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bill Robinson, Bert Lahr—Played this one day, Sunday only, and it fit the booking like a glove. While no good for top playing time, it is a good enough little picture which the exchange was good enough to allocate at program picture prices. No praises, no squawks. Fair business. Played February 12.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Here is a picture that any exhibitor will be proud to run. It will establish itself in any town, large or small. The story is good; the acting is good; the scenery is beautiful and the box office excellent. Play it by all means. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ROAD DEMON: Henry Arthur, Joan Valerie, Henry Armetta—Just as good entertainment as you could wish for with lots of action and comedy. Don't pass this up. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW: Ritz Brothers, Richard Arlen, Ethel Merman, Phyllis Brooks—A little too much of the "Ritzy" side perhaps but still a good enough picture for midweek date. The wild steeplechase ride in the climax had the audience in an uproar. Played February 8-9.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft, Dick Hogan—Suspenseful drama that had them on the edges of their seats all the way with enough light spots to balance nicely. It's OK for almost any date. There was a young fellow in a featured role in this who came from a nearby town and was well known here. This pulled a little extra business. The fellow is Dick Hogan. You'll be seeing more of him. Wait and see if I'm not right. He played Johnny Miller in this picture. Played February 1-2.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

SUEZ: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Annabella—A grand picture but one for small towns to lay off. It did a little extra business Friday, but Saturday was flat. Patrons seemed disappointed. I had the picture in earlier and took it out and why I picked it up is more than I know. Without Annabella the picture would be pretty much a flop. Played March 17-18.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Although this picture got a panning, it nevertheless did business for me. The fact that Alice Faye did not really sing disappointed quite a few. Otherwise, this picture is OK. Played March 19-20.—J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. Rural and small town patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—A few stars miscast, walking around chewing the rag and making themselves generally silly. Running time, 83 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin—We considered this a very clever, entertaining picture. Jack Haley at last comes into his own and makes the most of the opportunity. The cast was good and the plot quite refreshing. The draw was not so good but the thermometer was around —40, so who can tell? Very well produced and recorded. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 26-28.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Preston Foster, Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Arthur Treacher, Bill Robinson—Swell little picture for Bargain Night and could hold up better dates if necessary. Enough action, comedy, and so on to make a darned near perfect program picture. Play it by all means. Bill Robinson comes in for a nifty number in this, too. Played February 14.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS: Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari, Joan Woodbury—A very good program. Nothing new as to plot but the treatment was much better than average. Good dialogue and a closely knit story and a capable cast made it satisfactory entertainment. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, David Niven, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Brennan—Our best Sunday business for some time. Cooper a favorite. One of the few from United Artists to draw. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 19-20.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FAREWELL AGAIN (TROOPSHIP): Leslie Banks, Flora Robson, Sebastian Shaw, Patricia Hilliard—Let us down to worst average three-days business so far this year. Really kept people away. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 22-24.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—This picture with Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy good but failed to draw for me. Business off 50 per cent. Personally, I liked the picture very much but I don't buy the tickets.—Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas. Small town patronage.

Universal

DRACULA: Bela Lugosi, Helen Chandler—FRANKENSTEIN: Boris Karloff, Colin Clive, Mae Clarke—Ran into very bad weather and lost my shirt on these. Not a class of entertainment for rural communities. Played March 2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION, A: Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy"—Picture pleased everyone that saw it and brought in a lot of extra business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 10-11.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," George Murphy, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou—At last Universal has come through with a picture that really hits the spot. A swell comedy-drama with comedy supplied by Bergen, "McCarthy," "Snerd" and Company. A picture for your best playing time and then some. Played January 29-30.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Lewis Stone, Barbara Read, Tom Brown—A nice little picture for double bills only. Positively will not stand alone. Running time, 66 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

NEWSBOYS HOME: Jackie Cooper, Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie, "Little Tough Guys"—Nice picture. Pleased all. Different, snappy. Good all around entertainment. Running time, 73 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SPIRIT OF CULVER: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew, Andy Devine, Henry Hull, Jackie Moran, Tim Holt—A fair picture. However, I think the producers should have included more shots of Culver and surrounding scenes. Business fair considering Lent. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 18-21.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

STORM, THE: Charles Bickford, Preston Foster, Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Nan Grey—Is a good show. Well done. Excellent cast and pleased all. Stand alone in any spot, large or small.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carrol—Another hit from Universal making two in a row. But again a few big ones cannot make up for all the run of the mill stuff. I have to play every major company (nine) on selective deals, to keep myself in good product all the time. And even then I still have to play a cluck every now and then. I don't know much about the inner workings of the powers that be but the exhibitors and public are coming out on the short end. Played February 5-6.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CALIFORNIA MAIL: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—Another revival and a honey. These westerns of Warners are in a class of their own. Running time, 55 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—All male cast kept some of our opposite sex at home. A very good picture and should have done better business here. You won't lose on it. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 26-27.—R. A. Moree, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, David Niven, Donald Crisp, Basil Rathbone—An outstanding picture with superb acting of David Niven and Donald Crisp. Here is a picture that should do business any day of the week in any spot. Cannot be praised too highly. Running time, 103 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DEVIL'S ISLAND: Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan Good and a money maker. Pleased to good business. Running time, 63 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FOUR'S A CROWD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Haviland, Rosalind Russell—A slapstick comedy. With good shorts this will carry alone. Running time, 91 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent—Really and truly a wonderful production. Bette sure deserved to win the Academy Award, and are we proud of Warners. Intend bringing this back again later. Running time, 104 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis, Wayne Morris—Brought this back after playing it about a year ago and it didn't lose any of its speed or drawing power. "Galahad" made good money for the Casino.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Can. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—A better than average outdoor and action drama that pleases the Cagney fans. Business a little above average.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—We gave this big publicity and got the crowd. Naturally it appeals to Oklahoma people. But it is all the producers say it is. Plenty of action and enjoyed by everyone. James Cagney does a fine piece of work. It can't miss. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—Played with "Ferdinand the Bull." Here is one attraction that is the most unsteady gross we ever did for a three day run. A tieup with the local schools where an advance ticket sale went on, and had to call out the local police to take care of the crowds. Without this tieup, would be just ordinary. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 9-11.—J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Gloria Dickson, Ann Sheridan, May Robson, Claude Rains, "Dead End Kids"—An excellent picture for any type of audience, the drawing power of which was ruined by the title. Warners trailer didn't add anything to the cheerfulness, either. We can not get out patrons in to prison, racketeer, newspaper pictures on passes. This must not be the only place where they feel this way. Garfield is likeable and magnetic but I suppose from now on he will be either a criminal or a fugitive. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 3-4.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Gloria Dickson, Ann Sheridan, Claude Rains, "Dead End Kids," May Robson—This is definitely a good picture for weekends in a small town. John Garfield is excellent and the picture will hold interest. It is not entirely what its title suggests but the story is good. May Robson gives a fine performance. Hats off to Warner Bros. for this one. I don't believe it would disappoint in any town.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville—A good picture but failed to draw at B.O. We anticipated a great attendance but were fooled. Weather good but they didn't go for this picture. This is not a small town picture. Our advice, if you have to play it, don't give it too much playing time. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 6-8.—J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Too many air pictures. My people are sick of them. The picture is undoubtedly good and of great value in these times but we are getting too many of them. Business only fair. Played March 24-25.—J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. Rural and small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Roland Young—A delightful comedy that pleased 95%. Played Vitaphone's "Lincoln in the White House" with this and it was a fine feature short.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Jeffrey Lynn, Priscilla Lane, Fay Bainter, Roland Young, May Robson—One of the most thoroughly enjoyable pictures we have had this year. We advertised it not for children because of the recent publicity. This stimulated business. Those who were a little disappointed because it wasn't as risque as they expected, enjoyed it so much that they didn't mind. It is delightful entertainment. The cast is superb, as is dialogue and direction. Recording fair. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 19-21.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

FOOTBALL GIANTS: Special Sport Thrills—Running it out of season made me fearful, but it was well taken. The slow motion showed a lot of things that the fan seldom sees and it brought some extra business the second night. Running time, 9 minutes.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

MUTTS TO YOU: 3 Stooges—Didn't seem to get the usual volume of laughs, yet it was far from sour. Running time, 18 minutes.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

NIGHT IN A MUSIC HALL, A: Music Hall Vanities—A very good little musical that for once did not have a tap dancer so it was different. Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 5—The star at Catalina and it was excellent. Always enjoyable is this series and this was no different. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BRAVEST OF THE BRAVE, THE: Historical Mysteries—Another Historical. Just so-so.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GRID RULES: Pete Smith Specialties—For football fans OK.—Harland Rankin, Plaze Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HEROES AT LEISURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Very interesting and educational reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOT ON ICE: Pete Smith Specialties—Not worth running. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JAIPUR, THE PINK CITY: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—We wish that Jimmie FitzPatrick would make a full length travel some time. He has what it takes to make a good show. This one is excellent. No better than the balance and no worse. The tops of any program. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MEN IN FRIGHT: Our Gang—A very clever Gang comedy. Alfalfa as usual stole the show. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIRACLE MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These "Crime Doesn't Pay" are really good. This one exposes cancer rackets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIRACLE OF SALT LAKE: MGM Miniatures—Rather interesting short. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: Have run three of four issues of this news and does not come up to other news that I have run. To date I am very much disappointed.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

PETUNIA NATURAL PARK: Captain and the Kids—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

CHAMPAGNE MUSIC OF LAWRENCE WELK: Headliners—Very good orchestra reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CUSTOMERS WANTED: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LAND OF INCA MEMORIES: Color Crusies—Good travel reel in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: No. 42—Very good reel of principal events of 1938.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 6—Good short dealing with Stan Shaw and his Milkman's Matinee on the air.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SONG IS BORN, A: Headliners—One of the better Headliners which went over exceptionally well.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

FARMYARD SYMPHONY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good Silly Symphony.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Did some extra business on it. Running time, eight minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—We consider this just an ordinary cartoon. Have shown better. This has been getting a great deal of publicity. Running time, eight minutes.—J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

HARRIS IN THE SPRING: Phil Harris and his Orchestra, Ruth Robbins—My patrons enjoyed this short. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 4—Our American neighbors. Not as good as the previous but always well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MICKEY'S TRAILER: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good short subject. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTH AND THE FLAME, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Good single reel. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE GOES HOLLYWOOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of the funniest and cleverest cartoons we have ever played. Played this with "Jesse James" and it made it rather inconvenient when most of the entire audience stayed to see it twice.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

RHYTHM IN A NIGHT COURT: Nu-Atlas Productions—Only fair. Very bad print. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

ROMANCING ALONG: Phil Harris—Good enough two-reel musical comedy but it isn't as good as the rest of this series has been. I'm afraid it will be some time before they make another as good as "Sea Melody" with Ted Fio Rito. Running time, 18 minutes.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

WYNKEN, BLYNKEN AND NOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—One of the better ones. Running time, eight minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Universal

CHEESE NAPPERS: Oswald Cartoons—A good cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

LITTLE BLUE BLACKBIRD: Lantz Cartunes—Lots of laughs in this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOUSEWIFE HERMAN: Terry-Toons—Only fair color cartoon. Twentieth Century-Fox's features are OK but their shorts are about the poorest we play. They sure have lots of room for improvement.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

HOUSEWIFE HERMAN: Terry-Toons—A very clever cartoon in color. Not the best we have had but good enough to be satisfactory. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

OWL AND THE PUSSYCAT, THE: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon in colors.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TRAILING ANIMAL STORIES: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Play it by all means. A real short.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHAT EVERY BOY SHOULD KNOW: Lew Lehr—Keep Lew in the newsreels. Too much of him doesn't seem to go so good.—Sam Kimball, Cornish Theatre, Cornish, Me. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

CAMPUS CINDERELLA: Johnnie Davis, Penny Singleton—Very good color two-reeler. Johnnie Davis is popular with my audience. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

CLEANING UP: Cross and Dunn—The best Brevity we have had this year. This short really has some talent and it is presented with a new idea or two. Recording just fair. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN CORPS OF REPORTERS

From British Columbia and three states come new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me". They are:

Fred H. Stephens, Community Theatre, Bralorne, B. C., Canada.

W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colorado.

Castle Theatre, Brackettville, Texas.

J. Edelstein Amusement Company, Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minnesota.

In two instances the exhibitors have reported before, but in each case the latest report was a year ago.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, THE: John Litel—Our patrons liked it. Running time, 19 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

IDENTIFIED: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—This series seems to be well liked. This one is gripping entertainment but not too much so. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

IDENTIFIED: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Very good. Everybody seems to enjoy the Floyd Gibbons' "True Adventures". Running time, 12 minutes.—M. D. Buxton, Garden Theatre, McCracken, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JERRY LIVINGSTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Just another not so hot band act. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

JIMMY DORSEY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Lord deliver us from any more of these bands. All the same, only this one is worse. A drum solo. Ouch! Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JOHNNY SMITH AND POKER HUNTAS: Merrie Melodies—Very clever. Got several laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A good short for the swing fans, replete with good singing and dancing. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LEON NAVARA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The usual Melody Master this year. A so-so orchestra, a dancing couple and a singer. Just a filler, not any entertainment in this. Recording fair. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

LINCOLN IN THE WHITE HOUSE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Played this with "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and it was a fine feature short.—B. C. Brown, Vernon and Temple Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

PORKY IN EGYPT: Looney Tunes—Rather silly. Not so hot. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RAY KINNEY AND HIS HAWAIIANS: Melody Masters—A lovely short. The best of this type we have had for some time. A treat and a relief from the Swing Cats. Recording only fair. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

ROAMING CAMERA, THE, NO. 1: Color Parade—Shelve it. When a company makes a short with half of it on styles of women's hair, the entire reel is spoilt so far as exhibition is concerned. Nothing to it. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWING TIME IN THE MOVIES: Fritz Feld—Another good color two-reeler. It's easy to see they really spend some money on these shorts. Some of the scenes in this are really outstanding.—R. D. Fisher, Cozy Theatre, Cabool, Mo. Rural and small town patronage.

TABLE MANNERS: Vitaphone Varieties—This short on table tennis is entertaining. It seemed to please, would be an addition to any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

TWO SHADOWS: Broadway Brevities—Seems to be just a filler. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

VITAPHONE INTERLUDE: Vitaphone Varieties—Three fairly good acts of vodvil. The dog act made quite a hit here. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

YOU'RE AN EDUCATION: Merrie Melodies—A clever little cartoon that went over with a bang. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PROPORTIONAL QUOTA PROPOSED IN BRITAIN, COST CLAUSE FOR SHORTS

Backers of Plan for Fractional Quota Certificates Say It Would Increase Production of Secondary Features

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Their last hope of an increase in the quota schedule gone, British producers, or select coteries, are likely to concentrate upon the Films Council with suggestions of a different caliber and quality, suggestions timed at lifting them out of the doldrums into which they have fallen in the first year of the new Act.

Fractional Quotas

Most interesting of these new ideas and one likely to be presented to the Council at an early date, provisional upon reasonable support from the trade, is that of a proportional quota, that is, the awarding of fractional quota certificates for films costing less than the stipulated minimum. Second to this in significance is the suggestion, also likely to be made before the Films Council, for the setting up of a cost clause for shorts.

The proportional quota plan, which has the backing of smaller independent producers, is sponsored by a member of the Films Council, and a trade representative at that, John Grierson, of the British documentary. Trade interest probably has been more intelligent than widespread, but already there has been sufficient sympathetic support to lift it to the prominence of serious consideration as a practical scheme. Apart from the natural sympathy the idea has evoked in producer circles, not only renters but exhibitors have accepted it as a partial solution to present difficulties.

Would Stimulate Production

The plan is aimed at increasing the volume of production, even if of lesser cost films, at stimulating the production of British second features, and at giving an impetus to the documentary producers by making feature length documentaries a practical proposition.

In essence the principle is that films costing ten shillings, or less than a pound sterling a foot, should count as half, or proportionately, for renters' quota purposes.

Sponsors believe that it would have the effect of stimulating that voluntary production which American producer-renters here contend has been the only brand of production to decline, a view supported in the House of Lords during the recent debate.

Smaller Investments

On the financial terrain it is contended that the City, which of recent months has been unwilling to face the increased financial risk involved in a £15,000 ($75,000)—or more—production, would look with a friendly eye upon investments within the £7,500 category.

American producer-renters have expressed no opinion upon this scheme, but its sponsors contend that it is to their advantage, that support would be logical because the granting by the Board of Trade of new quota ratings on a fractional basis would be a precedent which would allow them to increase the multiple quota rating at the other end. In other words, they say, if the Act could be adjusted to allow also for less than single quota ratings, then there would be an arguing point for it to be adjusted to permit quadruple and quintuple quota pictures.

REPORTS GOVERNMENT FROWN ON "DICTATORS"

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

It is an accepted fact in informed circles in London that the proposed picture by Charles Chaplin, entitled "The Dictators" and devoted to satirical treatment of the heads of dictator nations, will not be produced.

The Government has given the matter its official attention.

Last week official disapproval was expressed over a musical review song number which lampooned Adolph Hitler. The song was withdrawn.

It is assumed that if Chaplin's "The Dictators" is known to be headed for official opposition in the United Kingdom it will not be produced.

Murray Silverstone, executive director of United Artists, reiterated this week in New York that Chaplin is going ahead with the production for release in the fall.

For Second Features

Exhibitor support, entirely unofficial at this stage, is based upon the belief that such a plan would provide a new fund of second feature subjects of which there is presently a dearth.

Such renters as have looked with friendly eyes upon such a proposal, suggest it would provide an opportunity for them to acquire pictures on a much wider range.

Producers in the past have been known to boost their expenses artificially in order to get within the minimum cost clause. A fractional quota would, it is contended, make such "wangling" unnecessary.

Returns on British second features made at £15,000 do not, sometimes, top £10,000. The adjustment of the quota on fractional lines would, it is suggested, make the process economic.

Labour Backing Doubted

Little support is likely to be forthcoming for the proposal, however, from the labour groups; direct opposition can be foreshadowed. It is the labour belief that the fractional quota scheme would stimulate further the production of quota quickies, instead of the better type of film. They believe that the expenditure of a reasonable and not excessive amount of money is necessary for the production of quality films.

Nor are they convinced that the scheme would increase the volume of production, taking the point of view that as long as the quota schedules remain at their present level, and, they contend, their insufficient level, quota production will never exceed the minimum necessary for the distributors to fulfil their requirements. It would, they suspect, mean that ten half quota pictures would be produced, where five full quota pictures were produced before, but that the low quality of these would mean no more employment than hitherto, if not indeed less. Until there is an increase in the quota schedules they see no hope of betterment for studio staffs and technicians generally.

Meanwhile, the conflict between the two branches of shorts producers has intensfied and the gap has widened. Efforts to achieve a united front between the realist shorts producers and the self-termed entertainments shorts producers have so far been abortive. The first-named will probably press the case for a cost clause. The other group, with a recently cemented organization, will continue to oppose it, contending that the test should not be production costs, but box office returns, avowing that there is no evidence that the two are synonymous, that they are in fact too often opposed.

The Association of Shorts Film Producers, at the head of which is H. Bruce Woolfe, and which includes the serious documentary producers in its ranks, would prefer a quality clause, but considering this impracticable, argue for a cost clause. That this cost clause would undoubtedly obliterate a considerable percentage of the quota shorts acquired by English and American renters, and shown with no negligible commercial success, is a verifiable fact.

First with Demands

The realists, as they might be termed loosely, were first into the field with the demand for a cost clause, contending that the terms of the Act made it impracticable for them to produce worthy short films on an economic basis. They contended that the Films Act has strangled the production of quality shorts and encouraged the quickie, protested that the market was flooded with cheap quickies made for a few pounds apiece—often no more than photographs of paintings with a commentary and musical background—insisted that American renters were fulfilling their commissions by buying shorts that were nothing more than trash.

Against this the "Entertainments Shorts Producers" pointed to a dozen films made by three of their number currently running in the West End, chided their competitors with the suggestion that many of their pictures were no more than veiled propaganda, subsidized and sponsored by advertisers and kindred organizations.

Seat Control Move

Swansea, port and industrial center in the South Wales mining area, has followed the lead of London and set up municipal seat control.

Provincial exhibitors in the Irish Free State have formed a new protective association with the title of Provincial Exhibitors Association.

The Royal Naval Film Corporation, inaugurated some time ago to distribute films for the entertainment of navy men at sea, actively got under way this week when it staged a film show in a hangar of the Ark Royal, giant aeroplane carrier of the British fleet. Films are distributed gratuitously and are shown on apparatus purchased from GB Equipments.

Provincial Cinema Theatres, for the year ended January 31st last, declared a profit of $2,581,750, the highest total in the history of the company. In three successive years profits have exceeded half a million pounds. A dividend of 15 per cent, together with a further payment equivalent to 7½ per cent will be paid, making 22½ per cent in all, which is the same as was approved last year.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

SABOTAGE, IT IS

Stopping off en route to New York, the Hollywood producer who tells the story had occasion to make the rounds of the theatres in the midwest city he was visiting. The biggest and most modern house playing a double bill of strong hit pictures, he noted, held about one-third capacity. Little appeared to be done in the way of exploitation, to which the producer referred in casual conversation with the manager. In answer, that worthy made the startling reply that he saw no reason to break his neck for a "lousy sixty bucks a week."

Whether or not the aforesaid $60 is a "lousy" salary in that situation is not the immediate question. The point to emphasize is, underpaid or otherwise, the squawking theatreman gains nothing by just going through the motions on the job to express his personal feelings. In that frame of mind he is injuring his own chances for survival and, more importantly by the same token, the standing of those managers who choose to regard their work as a highly-held profession. And, mark you, the majority of theatremen do look upon their work with the professional respect it deserves

Your Chairman would be the last to deny there are situations where managers are inadequately rewarded for what they accomplish. But where these instances show a change for the better, the improvement may be traced to the continuing efforts of showmen loyal to their profession in their eagerness to do a good job, regardless of working conditions.

That would seem to be more progressive than the policy of the misguided theatreman who sabotages the boxoffice by lying down on his assignment.

CHICAGO HONORS BURHORN

Those South Chicago folks who have been waiting to signify their high regard for John Burhorn finally got their opportunity last week at a testimonial dinner in honor of the Quigley Silver Grand Award winner. Mayor Kelly of Chicago and a host of other prominents were on hand to speak up in praise of the manager of the subsequent-run Gayety Theatre, situated in a steel-mill district. It was quite a time.

Officially, of course, Burhorn works for Alex Manta and Jack Rose, of Indiana-Illinois Theatres. And while he does a whale of a job for his bosses, he also manages to accomplish an awful lot, unofficially, in advancing the general welfare of his locale through civic cooperation and varied promotional tieins.

In turning out so enthusiastically, John's friends and admirers were obviously acknowledging appreciation of his efforts in their behalf. To the observing, the gathering might also have indicated how much a manager can accomplish for his theatre by doing so much for his community.

A TIEUP THAT "TIES"

Home-office exploitation for short subjects, lately become more important, adds to its prestige now with the nationwide promotion consummated on behalf of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Fashion Forecast". Sprung from an idea by Movietone News head, Truman Talley, and worked out by his aid, Dan Doherty, with the assistance of the Charles McCarthy ad forces, the pressbook lists hundreds of leading stores handling the styles shown in the picture, with the listed establishments reported properly stocked-up and ready-to-go.

To say that this comprehensive promotion for a short becomes something to applaud is not going far out of line. Neither is it aiming wide of the mark to venture that a similar pattern of cooperation might do a more effective job for suggested national tieups that prove far from "national" and somehow fail to "tie".

Famous Players Canadian Corporation in the annual financial statement discloses increased earnings for 1938. For the information of those not so informed, FPC is the circuit that pays all managers a percentage on grosses for extra business done during the 52 weeks of every year.

As we go to press, come the glad tidings that Ray Bell of Washington and Frank Weatherford of Fort Worth have been awarded the all-expense trips to France given by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to theatremen in the recently completed national contest on behalf of "Marie Antoinette".

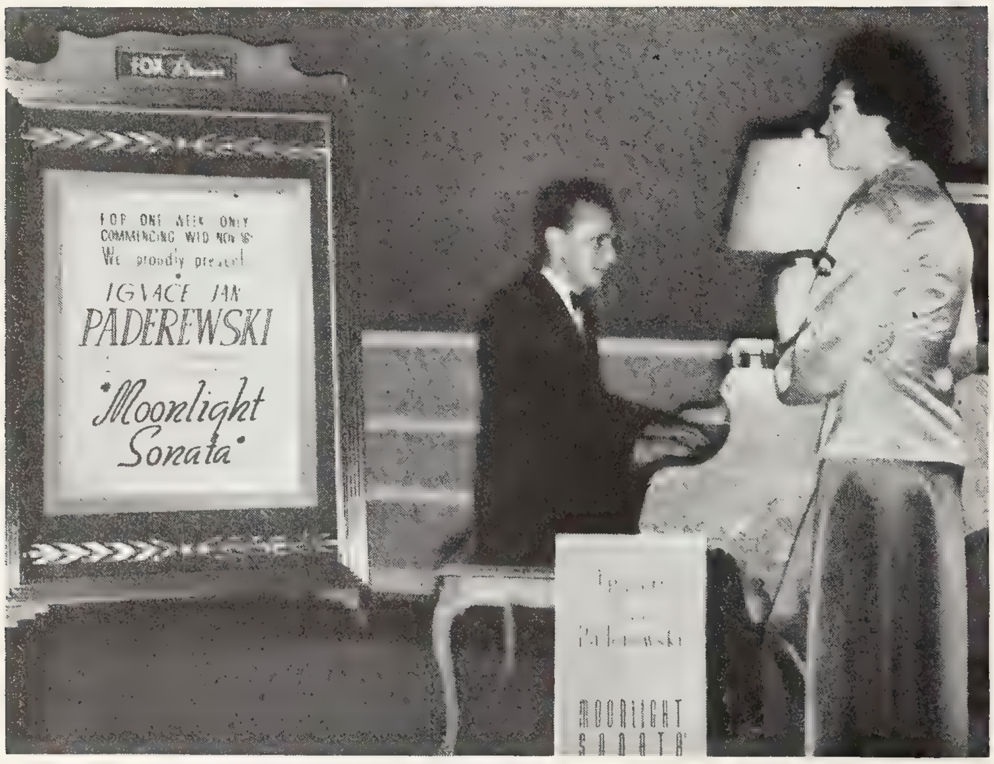
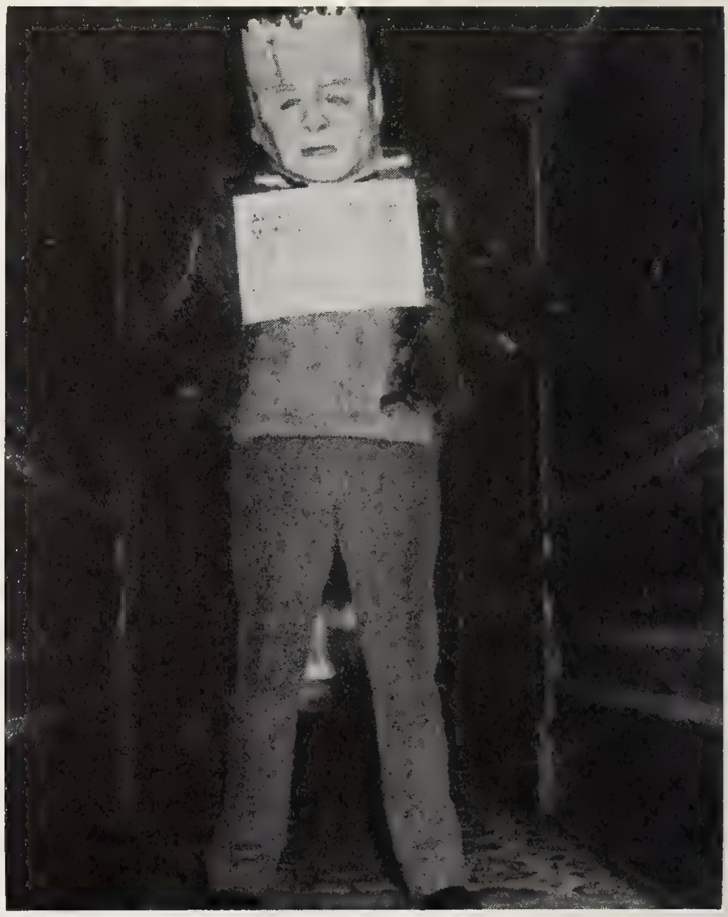
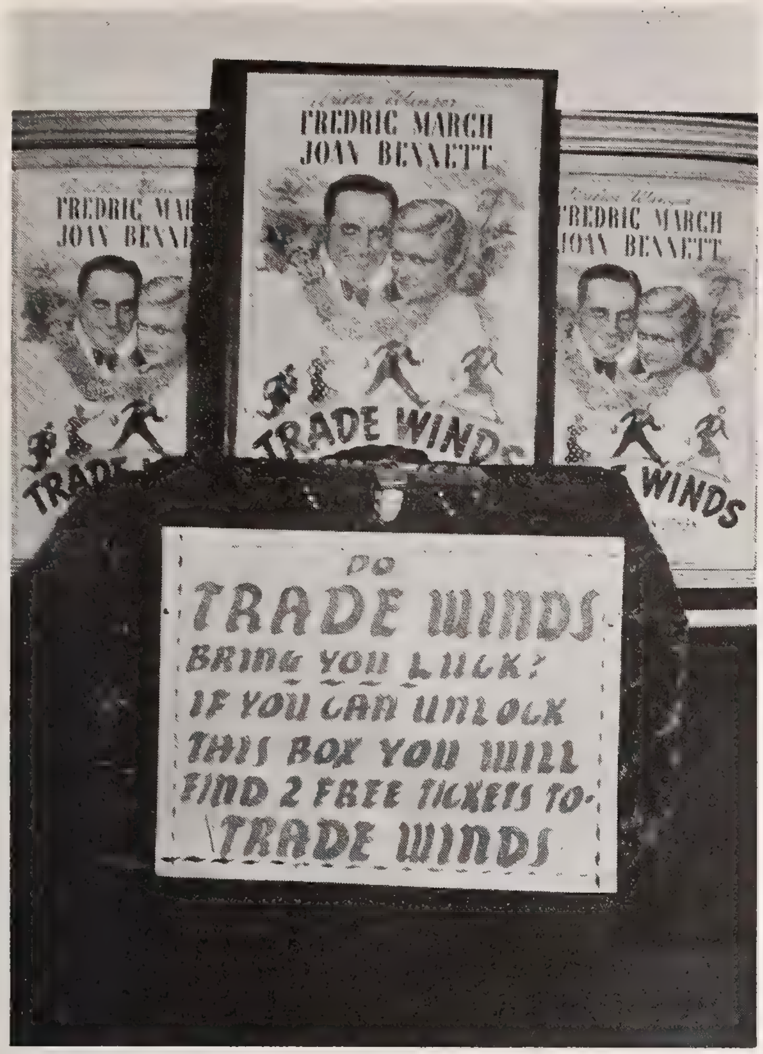
Above, left, is shown miniature model of the front of the original Omaha Theatre, in Omaha, Neb., for the world premiere of "Union Pacific" in that city on April 28. Opening will be ushered in with a four-day historical festival called "Golden Spike Days." . . . Reproduced above is marquee stunt used by Louie Fishkin, manager of the Alba Theatre, Brooklyn, for his date on "Gunga Din." Lad dressed as waterboy blew bugle at intervals during day and also covered busy street intersections with back banner.



Before leaving the Fox Bruin, Westwood, Cal., for the Fox Paramount, Hollywood, Dave Martin planted lobby stunt shown above for his engagement of "Moonlight Sonata." Al Libby, his assistant, who is himself a pianist of no little note, was stationed at keyboard accompanying girl who sang tunes from picture. Piano, lamps and hauling charges were promoted, two 250-watt spots with blue gelatin providing illumination.

For a week ahead and week during run of "Son of Frankenstein," the monster illustrated at right chilled patrons of the Fox Tower in Kansas City, Mo. Manager H. A. Rodick had his artist build a papier mache head and secured a localite to wear it with a shaggy sheepskin coat. Ballyhoo man stalked through the theatre and downtown business districts.

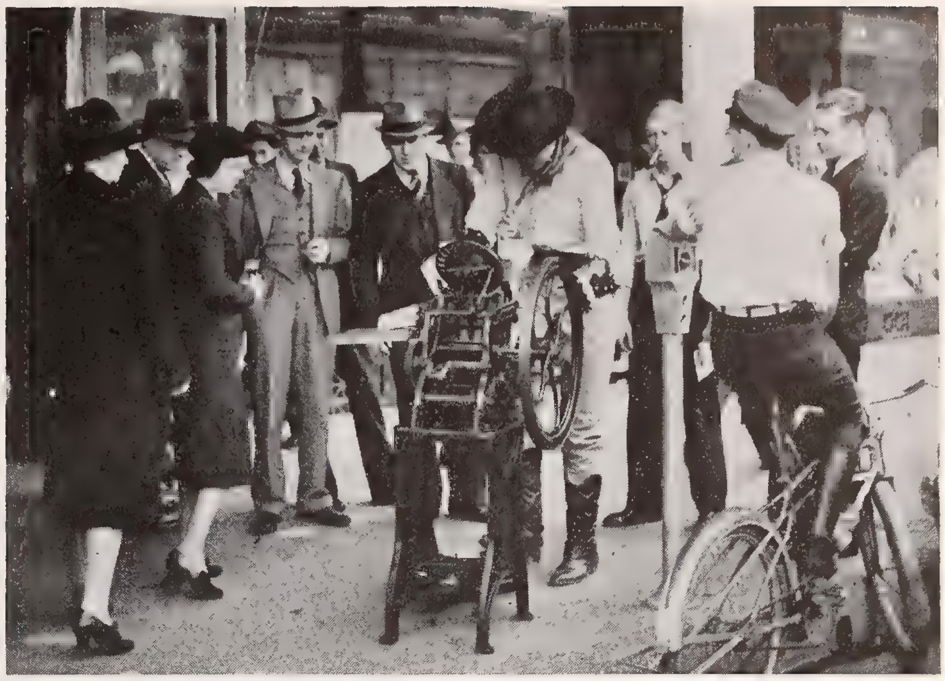




With a padlock and a couple of thousand keys left from a stunt put over a year ago, Bill Johnson at the Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, promoted a metal chest, put in a couple of tickets to "Trade Winds," chained and padlocked the whole thing and planted it in his lobby ahead of date. Keys were distributed to patrons by usher who briefly explained the stunt and the "try your luck" angle. Lucky keys were dropped back into available box every few minutes so that there were frequent winners during peak hours. Johnson reports the stunt as being one of the best crowd-stoppers recently pulled.

Reported by Sanford Morris of Warner's Forum Theatre in Los Angeles was stunt used for opening of "Little Tough Guy." Staff properly bannered and bandaged as illustrated at right wore copy reading "damage was done by the little tough guy." Group was also used for street ballyhoo.

With Lulu Belle and Skyland Scotty a popular team with the rural residents of Elkhart, Ind., City Manager Sid Holland booked them for a personal appearance current with the showing of their picture, "Shine on Harvest Moon," at the Elco Theatre. Couple dressed in costume covered surrounding towns, stopped at farmhouses, country stores and all local gatherings singing and playing tunes from picture.



Much of the action of MGM's "Let Freedom Ring" centers about a mysterious printing plant in the hills where the phantom "Wasp" grinds out inflammatory literature. Francis Deering, of Loew's State, Houston, procured an old-fashioned printing press illustrated above, employed a ballyhoo man to act as printer and knocked off circulars advertising the picture which were distributed to passersby.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS

HEAD USHER: "Henry, you substitute for Sidney. We've got one more feature to go. . . . Now get out there and fight."

State Holiday Proclaimed For "Man of Conquest"

Perry Spencer, director of publicity for Republic Pictures in the south, prevailed upon Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee to proclaim a "Sam Houston" state holiday recently. This was in memory of the former Governor of Tennessee and founder of the State of Texas, Sam Houston. The proclamation preceded the planned dedication exercises that will take place during the opening of "Man of Conquest" in Nashville. Newspapers gave the occasion plenty of space and Maryville, Tenn., where the statesman lived the best part of his life, decorated the town and had a public barbecue.

Also inaugurated by Spencer is a new service, whereby exhibitors playing "The Lone Ranger Rides Again" are furnished several thousand copies of Ranger comic tabloids gratis, being mailed direct for kid matinees. Arrangements have also been made by Perry to furnish free "Lone Ranger" ice cream cones to the exhibiters.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Charninsky Promotes Merchant For "Lone Ranger" Broadcast

Eph Charninsky down at the Harlandale, San Antonio, to exploit his "Lone Ranger" serial tied up local baker to sponsor a Ranger Club in the three Interstate houses there, plugging the stunt thrice weekly over their broadcasts. Merchant also promoted to defray cost of display set pieces in each theatre, special trailers and in addition furnished Charninsky with four sets of Lone Ranger outfits for each theatre for the fifteen-week period covering the serial's run. Club meetings open each week with a plug for the baker and then go into the theme song "Hi Yo Silver."

Leader Holds Quiz On "Flying G-Men"

Capitalizing on the nationally advertised movie quiz, Walter Cohen, Leader, Baltimore, held a similar contest on the Columbia serial, "Flying G-Men." An electric-model airplane was awarded to the person answering most accurately the 15 questions printed weekly in the theatre's program. One question was chosen from each chapter, thus extending the contest for the entire run of the picture.

Besides program and special herald publicity, an attractive display in patriotic colors and with informative signs was set up in the lobby, the model airplane forming the central motif. A trailer announcing the contest weeks in advance was used, after which on those days of the run, the appropriate question was shown after the chapter. Cohen reports the combined effort tended to boost mid-week kiddie attendance.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Model Plane Tieup Ushers In "Tailspin"

Public school students in San Francisco staged a model airplane contest under the auspices of Fox West Coast Theatres chain as advance promotion for "Tail Spin". Two weeks in advance of opening at the Fox Theatre contest was held in the rotunda of the City Hall with Ruth Nichols and Margo Bain Tanner, famous flyers, as judges in the event.

Immediately after the contest, the two flyers took off to continue their aerial tour of the country ballyhooing the film. They carried invitations from 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition to eight mayors in Seattle, Salt Lake City, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Newark.

Syracuse Dailies Plug Promotions For 'Love Affair'

Considered one of the most comprehensive newspaper campaigns put over recently in that area was that on "Love Affair" at Keith's, Syracuse, and reported here by Gus Lampe. Outstanding in the tieins, according to the Schine Theatres district chief, was a hookup with the Journal wherein prominent radio star called the "Girl with the Radio Mind," through the columns of the paper, answered questions on love forwarded by readers. Letters and answers were run daily, some 2,000 being published in the five days of the tiein. This was in addition to the wide publicity given the promotion in which theatre, picture and stars were emphasized, as was letter to the drama editor from Lampe stressing picture's merits.

Wedding Anniversaries Celebrated

Second newspaper promotion, this in the Post-Standard, invited all couples in the county celebrating silver or golden anniversaries during the month of March to participate in the activities sponsored by the theatre in honor of these occasions. An anniversary banquet to all who qualified was put on at leading hotel at no charge to the theatre and flowers supplied by leading florist. Paper used star cuts in picture publicity as a buildup and day after the banquet broke with six column picture of the celebrants and story of the evening's festivities. Day after opening same paper gave the date editorial mention, calling attention to the directorial skill employed by Leo McCarey, all of which the Round Tabler reports setting a new mark for theatre participation by this newspaper.

Crystal Gazer Employed

Street stunts, too, were employed to good effect, among which was a boy dressed in Arabian costume, making the main streets carrying a crystal ball. Boy would stop on corners and while he gazed into the crystal mumbling abracadabra, crowds would collect, when cards carrying picture plug were distributed. For attention at the theatre, Lampe planted a park bench bannered with copy inviting sweethearts to rest themselves while waiting for opening of box office.

Prominent stores gave large display windows and elaborate cosmetic booth in main department store was promoted and decorated with photos and picture copy. Twelve important local programs over WSYR and WFBL were promoted variously.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Issues Ingenious Program

Effective, is the monthly program issued by William Briemann, manager of the Ambassador Theatre, in Baltimore, Maryland. Printed on reverse side of tinted star photos, theatreman lists his coming attractions with casts, playdates, etc., bottom of each program carrying thumbnail biography of star whose photo is carried on reverse side. Bill says by using the star photos, he is assured of the program being retained in the homes of his patrons.

'Twins' Campaign Started by Loew's For April and May

The importance of consistent exploitation and advertising to build business in April and May is being recognized by Loew Theatres in New York wherein the strength of the double bills in many situations is being plugged by varied copy incorporating the use of a pair of twins—"The Loew Twins," the tag line being "A blessed event for moviegoers." Sponsored and approved by C. C. Moskowitz and carried through by Oscar A. Doob's department in cooperation with the district heads and managers concerned, the idea has taken on immediately in a wide campaign featured by buildup copy and photos of the twins, selected especially for their heart appeal.

The "blessed event" idea is being sold in a teaser campaign wherein trailers, lobby material, billposting, telephone calls and radio gags are being widely employed. The theatremen are concerned with the possibilities in inaugurating the campaign from this angle to the extent that cashiers are ending telephone conversations with "Loew's is expecting twins soon" and "Loew's twins will arrive any day now." Calling cards carrying out the same idea are being used.

Tentatively scheduled is a "Congress of Twins" wherein twins from all over New York will be invited to gather at a designated spot. It is expected that the newspapers and newsreels will go strongly for this in addition to similar ideas aimed for page-one publicity. Loew-men in the field have worked out a number of plans such as promotion of cigars to be handed to patrons with a line, "Have a smoke on Loew's twins, who arrive soon," etc. Tieins are being made to locate oldest and youngest twins and merchants are being approached to feature twin sales.

Civic Cooperation Given Ft. Worth "Castle" Premiere

The fact that Vernon Castle had headquartered in Ft. Worth, Texas, while serving as an aviator instructor during the World War, was utilized fully by Frank Starz, Interstate Circuit advertising director, and Manager Frank Weatherford for the campaign on "Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" at the Worth, premiere of which coincided with that of the New York Music Hall. Publicity breaks of all kinds were secured and featured by a reproduction in the Star-Telegram of the page of the February 15, 1918 issue which carried the crash story which ended Castle's life.

Official cooperation was given the date by the proclamation from the Mayor and assistance of the Chamber of Commerce, which requested all merchants to carry advertising on the picture. Planes were used to shower the streets with rosebuds and opening ceremonies were broadcast by Elliott Roosevelt. Streets were colorfully decorated, leading stores tied in with styles on the picture, KTAT and KFJZ were further employed to broadcast the date and special heralds were distributed in all the schools.

"MONEY-BACK" TENDER BY GRIFFITH THEATRES

As a guarantee of entertainment for the dates on better pictures, Griffith Theatres in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico are offering "money-back" to dissatisfied patrons. Idea is being featured in all advertising, over signature of individual manager. Cashiers are supplied with printed receipts for customers to sign. Percentage of requests is reported very small, with theatres benefiting from word-of-mouth publicity received.

Furniture Tieup To Sell "Dark Victory" Nationally

Just completed by Warners' publicity department with Robert W. Irwin Co., furniture manufacturer, is tieup whereby "Dark Victory" contests in 150 cities will be run coincidental with the national release date on the picture, April 8th.

Contest will be based upon essays concerning the influence of motion pictures upon interior decoration. Local Irwin dealers will get behind the campaign with newspaper advertising, window displays, throwaways and other selling aids.

At the coast, department store is tying in through the model house which is being built in Westwood Village. Each room will be furnished as the rooms which appear in the picture. A "Dark Victory" room will also be displayed in the store.

Schine's Theatres Offer All-Expense Journeys to "Fair"

One of the most extensive World's Fair Tour promotions reported to date has been effective in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, where Kroger Babb, in charge of advertising and publicity for Schine's theatres; Managers Jim Platt of the Vernon, and Ron Sturgess of the Vine have contracted 25 leading retail firms to underwrite the cost of a series of 10 weeks of giveaways for all-expense trips to the New York World's Fair.

The 25 merchants, leaders in the city's representative merchandising groups, are participating in the promotion on a weekly fee basis. The merchants will distribute 500,000 coupons at the ratio of one to each 25-cent unit of a purchase.

Customers receiving coupons deposit same at the theatres on Thursday nights when the tours are awarded, with merchants presiding as judges on the stage. The extensive advance campaign included the distribution of an elaborate 12-page circular, screen trailers, lobby displays, window cards, one-sheets, three-sheets and heralds.

That the World's Fair tieins are doing business for the participating theatres is indicated in Babb's report wherein the Round Tabler stresses the desirability of the tiein as "one sweet boxoffice bet." Business has been S.R.O. as a result, he reports.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

For "The Young in Heart," Assistant Robert F. Black, Madison, Mansfield, Ohio, secured cooperation of local high school principal which brought announcements over school public address system, recommending that each student should see the picture.

Another school tieup was effected with history teachers, students taking the special current affairs test on Time's issue of "The Refugee." Three winners from each class were judged by teachers and presented with passes. Student body saw the reel before test and another test was given after.

Ten days ahead of opening of "Dawn Patrol" at the Ritz Theatre, Lyndhurst, N. J., George Daransoll tied up with the Aero Club, members decorating theatre's inner and outer lobbies with large variety of different types of planes, ranging from a 14-inch wing-spread model to eight-foot wing-spread gas models. In addition, club donated model airplane kits which were given away via a lucky number drawing, and plane which flew over city dropped heralds plugging the attraction.

Special window display was secured by Bill Brown, Durfee Theatre, Fall River, Mass., on "Gunga Din" consisting of uniforms of the original Black Watch Scotch soldiers with complete regalia the men used in that regiment with tunics, medals, etc., etc., all promoted through cooperation of the British War Veterans. Special posters were made in the shape of India soldier hats with stills and playdates, beauty parlor featured a Joan Fontaine coiffure, toy soldier and gun window was promoted in five and ten and local book stores featured window displays in which picture and playdates were prominently included.

Lobby display created for "The Citadel" by Dick Moss, Fox Carmel, Hollywood, included doctor's instrument cabinet, sterilizer and stand and illuminated sign with title which topped off the display. Entire staff wore interne and nurses uniforms ahead and during run and card in lobby read "If I were mayor, I would make it a law to see" etc., etc. All medical fraternities were circularized, newspaper coverage included contest on "Why I should like to be a doctor" and fake dollar bills were placed on sidewalks with attached message reading "There's a million dollars worth of entertainment waiting for you."

Through tieup effected with the society editor of the Detroit Evening Times, Bob Corbin, of the Michigan Theatre put on a preview of "Cafe Society" for a group of young society members. As a result, half a column of society editor's column was devoted to picture, prevue, playdates, etc., etc.

Eye-attractor for "Devil's Island" was used by Leo Haney, Bucklen Theatre, Elkhart, Indiana, in the form of a dummy suspended from a scaffold which was planted atop marquee ahead of opening and then brought into lobby during run.

Grundy Addresses Exhibitor Meet

Featured at a recent meeting of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana in Muncie where the visiting theatremen were guests of Theatrical Managers, Inc., with Leonard S. Sowar, city manager, in charge, Manager Melvin B. Grundy, of the Rivoli, spoke on theatre advertising and exploitation. A round table discussion was held after Grundy's talk.

Recent exploitations put over by Mel include a street bally for "Angels With Dirty Faces" in which four boys were sent out on streets with back banners reading "We're not the Dead End Kids, we're all just 'Angels With Dirty Faces,' now playing at the" etc., etc. Classified ad contest was held, tieup made for kid show whereby enlarged colored photos of Cagney and O'Brien were distributed and special heralds paid for by merchant's ad on reverse side were handed out.

A "Show Your Colors" contest was planted in cooperating paper in connection with Grundy's "Men With Wings" date, cash and promoted prizes going to kids submitting best coloring jobs on scene still run in paper. Local Gas Model Club aided, furnishing large model planes for lobby display and stationed representative in lobby week ahead taking registrations for petition to bring original Wright plane back to America. Also in connection with this, airport flew streamer from plane over city with copy on picture.

Back a while, Mel effected tieup with local dance school as part of his "Great Waltz" competition, school advertising the contest. Extra publicity was garnered by playing up the angle that the local Red Cross would receive the proceeds from the finals. Double spread was promoted in addition to prizes from leading merchants for winners.

Junior Aviators Club Tied to "Tailspin"

The girls in the "Tail Spin" hegira were greeted at the Cleveland airport by members of the Cleveland Press Junior Aviators club as a feature in the campaign arranged by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein for the date at Warner's Hippodrome. All kids wore "Tail Spin" caps which they retained and wore for the balance of the week. Contest was also planted in the cooperating paper, prizes going to those best coloring air scenes from the picture.

On "Son of Frankenstein" specially imprinted teaser copy cards were distributed five days in advance reading "learn the meaning of a new thrill. Call Mr. Frankenstein," theatre phone number followed. Display of mystery books were featured in various stores and an extensive radio tieup with the advertising agency conducting a quizbee program over WHK was arranged for.

Radio played an important part in "Jesse James" date, plugs garnered on WGAR, and WHK. Extensive tieup with the Cleveland Public Library System started seven days ahead, displays planted in 32 branches jumbo cards were posted about town as were window cards and announcements in hotel lobbies.

Display Ads On Next Page

In keeping with the usual procedure of this department, the ads reproduced on the following page and detailed below are representative of various sales approaches forwarded by their creators for the information of the membership.

---

(1) Recognizing the virtues of a novel advertising approach to sell his reissue date on "Trader Horn," Glenn T. Fannin, publicity director, Cactus, Lubbock, Tex., struck on the idea of a one-column full with plenty of "see" copy for the day ahead of opening.

(2) Selected from among a smart collection of ads puts together by the showmanship-backfield of Walter Shuttee, Pat Patchen and Hank Harold, on behalf of the Standard Theatres, of Oklahoma City, these 115 lines on two columns, for "Finn" at the Criterion illustrates an evident circuit advertising policy of de-emphasizing "reverses" to attract quick attention.

(3) Realizing that a definite quote from the Congressional Record by Rep. Hamilton Fish on "Grand Illusion," was an unusual angle for an advertisement, George Kraska used the congressman's endorsement, topped by the authentic Record masthead, for the date of the Fine Arts, Boston. Reported by Herman C. Weinberg, World Pictures publicity head, the display ran 48 lines on two columns.

(4) Especially on pictures that might need more ingenuity in selling, Bill Exton uses his highly-developed conversational type layout, this time for "Lady Vanishes" at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis. In effect, the 132 lines on two columns was a personal-endorsement by Exton, so set up that the copy almost guaranteed full reader-attention.

(5) The open-letter ad idea can be addressed directly to readers only so often, which Vic Morelli kept in mind in composing these 125 lines on two columns, type ad for "Up the River" at the Bristol, Bristol, Conn. Starting off with praise of his local paper in addressing the advertising manager, the picture plug was cleverly sold.

(6 and 8) Since the laugh angle of the picture was regarded as the strongest slant to sell for the Chicago RKO Palace date on "Can't Cheat," Tom Gorman, ad head, used these two unique comedy layouts to top his newspaper campaign. The three-column advance ran 75 lines, and opening morning ad, 212 lines on two columns.

An Open Letter To The Advertising Manager Of The Bristol Press

February 2, 1939

Mr. F. K. Swales, Advertising Manager
Bristol Press
Bristol, Conn.

Dear Sir:

Everyone knows, "It pays to advertise."

In Bristol, everyone knows "It pays to advertise in the 'Bristol Press' ". That is why we find the progressive business men of Bristol advertise their merchandise daily in columns of the Bristol Press.

Occasionally, an advertiser does not know what words will best sell his merchandise, what adv. layout will be most attractive. As a daily advertiser of the Bristol Press, I have come up against such a predicament. In laying out my adv. copy for tomorrow's paper, I just can't find the proper words to tell the Press readers about the funniest picture under the movie sun. The title of the picture is "Up the River" and to simply say it is a funny picture does not do it justice but as I mentioned above, I am stumped for words.

I saw the picture recently at a preview so I can tell you all about it and after you've recovered from a fit of laughter, I wonder if you would be kind enough to help me lay out my adv. for tomorrow's paper.

(Signed)
VICTOR MORELLI,
Manager, Bristol Theatre.

P. S.—Mr. Swales, don't tell any of your friends about this picture. Let them enjoy it by seeing it at the Bristol Theatre Friday and Saturday.

SMART TIEINS CREATED FOR "MANAGERS' WEEK"

Publix - Great Lakes Theatres in Danville Combine to Put Over Citywide Celebrations

The week of March 5th to 11th, during the Lenten period when the grosses are normally off, was turned into one of the most satisfactory weeks in Danville, Ill., according to E. E. Crabtree, Publix-Great States city manager, who forwards details of a "Managers' Week" which took place at the Fischer, Palace and Lincoln theatres. Originated in the circuit's Chicago office, the theatremen were allowed a wide hand in booking their programs and executing the exploitations which were started two weeks ahead by a conference with local newspaper publisher who was impressed by the importance of the event to extend generous cooperation beyond the widest expectation of the theatremen.

Opening gun was an announcement story with thumbnail cuts of all participating managers, plus photos of local businessmen formerly in showbusiness, who testified to the value of their experiences in this field. At this time, Crabtree started to plug "Special Patron's Ticket," containing a number of coupons good only for the shows of the week they advertised and sold at reduced rates, a trifle less than regular matinee admission prices. A limited number of these were sold outside of the theatres.

Other advertising included full page co-op ad, space sold by the theatremen, carrying photos of managers and theatres and copy having to do with the programs. Remainder of the page contained co-op advertising, the entire venture being unusual enough locally to bring forth wide praise. Continued publicity was in keeping, all advertising carrying "Managers' Week" slugs.

At all theatres special lobbies called attention to the occasion, especially to posters containing lucky numbers with patrons asked to compare the winning figures to those on stubs of their "Special Patron's Ticket." Individual events during the week were similarly publicized, the managers' seal adopted for that period attached to all theatre advertising.

Camera Club Tiein Clicks

Chosen from the many promotions for Fortnight appointment was a camera club tiein wherein photos taken by members of the club during the year were displayed in attractive style in the Fischer Theatre lobby. As patrons purchased a ticket, each received a slip announcing that as part of the "Managers' Week" program, they could win cash prize of $10. The slip went on to explain that all they had to do was look at the pictures, vote for the one they thought best, complete the jingle contained on the slip and drop the entry into the ballot box or mail to the theatre. The jingles of those voting for the most popular photo were judged and the best received the cash prize. Additional cash prize was given to the photographer whose picture won the voting contest.

Civic co-operation included assistance of the Chamber of Commerce which wrote to all members urging their attendance to make the week a successful one. To start the week off, midnight show was held the night before and at the end of the week a Saturday morning free show for children was sponsored by local ice cream company. Further extra inducements were offered with special women's matinees on a two for one basis and in each theatre at designated hours, reduced prices in the early afternoon.

Heralds of all kinds were used by the thousands and largely paid for by outside advertising. These were distributed at the theatres and throughout the town. All rural routes were covered by imprinted postcards. Stickers were also planted on windows in leading stores.

Crabtree fully credits co-operation of Managers Everroad of the Palace and Knapp at the Lincoln, who worked with him.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Vennett Sponsors "Employees Week"

Along the lines of the campaign reported by Crabtree, above, but confined to the Opera House in Bath, Maine, and the house staff is the "Employees Week" staged by Manager Frank A. Vennett, in which management is turned to the personnel, who select programs for the work and select various employees to be in charge of the theatre on different days. Put on recently, the event ran a full seven days with full cooperation from the local papers.

Campaign started with a series of stories and photos under the head, "Familiar faces at Opera House," each day featuring one member of the staff from the manager down, and stressing the duties of the particular employee on that day. Top publicity break was a front-page shot of the entire staff with a three-column buildup story. In addition, Vennett promoted generous free display advertising and arranged for further ads at reduced rates for the occasion.

Special Gifts Promoted

Among the exploitations that returned extra publicity was a special showing for local newsboys, distribution of promoted gifts and heralds inserted in the local newspapers going to the regular subscribers. Of special interest on the distaff side was the offer of promoted Mojud hosiery given out on the day when the cashier served as hostess and further publicized by a co-op paid for by the women's shop which contributed the prizes.

Vennett reports these highlights of the week regularly emphasized in putting on this annual event. In addition to its selling value the campaign brings institutional and good will in satisfying proportions. The newspapers, Vennett finds, are especially cooperative and have been so in the situations where he has been putting on this prestige builder over a period of 25 years.

Emerson Details Tri-States Doings In Nebraska Area

Various exploitation activities in the Tri-States Nebraska area as reported currently by Ted Emerson, circuit ad head in that sector, feature, among other effective promotions, a public wedding staged by Harry Schiller, at the Capitol, in Grand Island, with approximately $1,200 in merchandise obtained from local merchants. Gifts included a complete outfit for both bride and groom, complete floral decorations for the stage and flowers for the bridal party, traveling luggage, traveling wardrobe, etc. A local minister officiated and the ceremony was performed with the same dignity as it would have had at a church or home wedding.

On behalf of "There Goes My Heart," Schiller with his assistant, Earl Engstrom, put on a local home talent show called "The Heart Shop." Practically all of the costumes, scenery and talent were furnished by the local high school and townspeople. Consisting of a 30-minute dance, song and patter revue, the setting was a heart shop where hearts were mended or replaced. The characters were a shopkeeper, heart doctor, nurse, pages and old maids. Five three-year-old cupids opened the show. The musical background which ran continuously through the show was furnished by the local high school orchestra and even the speaking parts were set to music.

Kemp Stages "Tom Thumb" Show

Amateur shows are also stressed by Wallie Kemp, manager of the Grand, at Grand Island, who has been putting on a "Tom Thumb" show every Saturday night. The orchestra and master of ceremonies as well as Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb are all under 14 years of age and most of the talent is obtained from a local dance school for youngsters.

For "Going Places," Kemp promoted four horses from a merry-go-round wintering in Grand Island and these were mounted in the lobby with the backs of the horses toward the entrance. Dummy displays representing Dick Powell, Anita Louise and Walter Catlett were mounted on the horses backwards and the doorman dressed in a jocky uniform sat on the fourth horse while taking tickets. Week ahead, entire staff wore imprinted sashes. For his street bally Kemp had a boy in jockey outfit ride backwards on a horse up and down the streets, horse blanket carrying title and playdates.

Butler Features Special Herald

An unusual twist on a herald was used by Warren Butler, manager of the Princess, in Sioux City, Iowa, to see "Devil's Island." Five thousand of these were put out through the laboring sections and tenement settlements day ahead of opening. The herald had burnt edges to give appearance of age and travel and carried the scare head "Tomorrow the lid's off 'Devil's Island.' Fugitive termer talks. 100-year hush-up on prison without a heart. Exposed at last," and then went into the copy on the picture following through on the same slant.

IN COURTS

$191,865 in Fees for Loew's Case Counsel

Fees totaling $191,865 have been allowed to attorneys for Loew's stockholders who had brought suit against Loew's and its officers and directors by Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice, in a judgement signed by him. The judgement provides for payment by Loew's to Emil K. Ellis of $64,025; Abraham L. Pomerantz, $20,000; Joseph Nemerov, $28,500; Harry Bijur, $17,079; Garey and Garey, $11,886; Milton L. Milvy, $6,000; Maurice Rose, $7,000, and Menden and Mann, $7,375.

The fees will be payable out of $543,000 which Justice Valente, after trial, ordered Louis B. Mayer, Nicholas M. Schenck, J. Robert Rubin, Arthur M. Loew and the estate of Irving Thalberg to repay to Loew's for overpayment on contracts.

Twentieth Century-Fox Sued on Song

A song plagiarism suit has been filed in United States district court in New York against Twentieth Century-Fox, Leo Feist, Inc., Mack Gordon and Harry Revel by Robert Brooker Wyatt. He charges plagiarism of "In a Bassinet," in the Gordon-Revel song, "This May Be the Night," in the film, "My Lucky Star."

$3,500 Judgment Won

A judgement for $3,500 against Educational Pictures, Inc., was entered in New York supreme court this week in favor of Lillian Tasker, as assignee of Albert G. McCarthy, Jr. The claim, which was upheld after arbitration, is for legal services rendered to Educational Pictures in 1936.

To Take Depositions

A stipulation has been filed in the United States district court in New York which provides for depositions to be taken in Los Angeles on behalf of Paramount, defendant in a suit by Zelma B. Tilden, who charges plagiarism of her play, "Captain What-the-Devil" in the film "The Buccaneer."

Oklahoma Ruling Stands

The Oklahoma supreme court has ruled that its previous decision in the case of Oscar Berry, owner of the Fox theatre at Ardmore versus Albert George Johnson must stand. The suit, carried through the lower courts, sought damages for a booth accident. In its original opinion the court ruled the theatre not liable as action was brought under provisions for compensation and damages resulting from a "workshop" injury. The court held a theatre booth could not properly be considered a workshop.

Television Trio Sentenced

Three New York men were sentenced to federal prison by a Los Angeles court this week for a $250,000 television mail fraud scheme. Charles Sherwin was sentenced to five years; Joseph P. Sheridan to 18 months and William M. Fidroeff to a year. They are former officials of the Ray-O-Television Manufacturing Company and were accused of representing to investors that their plant on Long Island was ready to turn out home-use television sets in quantity. A fourth man, Harry W. Arnold, former automobile executive, was released on probation.

RKO has been named defendant in an injunction suit filed by Harry Gould in Los Angeles, charging that the film "Gunga Din" was pirated from an original story he submitted to the company in 1934.

Anderson Appointed

Harold Anderson, formerly assistant manager of Ross Federal in Chicago, has been appointed Omaha branch manager to succeed Norman Brennan, who has resigned. Stewart Martin of Boston is taking over the Chicago assistant managership vacated by Mr. Anderson. William Warner of Baltimore has been appointed assistant branch manager in Philadelphia.

Postpone Oklahoma Hearing

The hearing on a motion of defendants to dismiss and dissolve the restraining order of the district court in Oklahoma City was stricken from the docket this week and will be reset in the suit of Stage Employees Local No. 112 versus Standard Theatres, Inc., asking reinstatement of two maintenance men by Standard. The men were discharged December 3, 1938, but Joe Campbell, business agent for the union, claims that Byron F. Moore, then general manager for Standard, signed a contract in October which provided that two additional men be employed at $42.50 a week to be used as swing men to be called from any theatre.

OBITUARIES

David P. Howells Dies in Hollywood

David P. Howells, 56, Bishop of the Wilshire ward of the Mormon Church, died in Hollywood March 29th. Although in recent years Bishop Howells had devoted himself almost entirely to the Mormon church, in his earlier years he was identified with the film industry. He distributed American films in the Far East, purchased the Far Eastern rights of the old World Film Corporation and established the program of the old Metro company in the Far East, Australia and New Zealand.

When First National was organized he obtained rights to its product and his company was among the most extensive of the independent international distributors. He liquidated the company in 1925 and returned to Salt Lake City, and since has divided his time between Utah and Californa.

Edward Rose Dies

Edward Everett Rose, 77, playwright, who adapted for the stage many popular novels of the last generation, died April 2nd in Community Hospital at Fremont, Wis. His adaptations included "Penrod," "Cappy Ricks," "A Gentleman from Indiana" and "David Harum."

Harry English

Harry English, 78, actor, who appeared in many plays and in vaudeville, died April 3rd in the Englewood Hospital, in Englewood, N. J. In 1934 Mr. English was appointed office manager on the west coast for the National Vaudeville Artists.

Altec Deals Signed

Altec this week signed contracts to service Minnesota Amusement Company theatres in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin, and the Casey and Wheeler circuit in Connecticut, New York and New Jersey. Altec also completed an arrangement with National Theatre Supply whereby Altec will act as their agent in stocking and distributing replacement parts for all types of Four Star Simplex sound systems.

Photographers' Ball

New York's Mayor Fiorello La Guardia will be among the spectators who see New York's ex-mayor, James J. Walker, act as one of the masters of ceremonies at the 10th annual press photographers' ball to be held next Friday, April 14th, at the Hotel Astor in New York. Many stars and more than 3,500 guests are expected.

Mecca Acquires "Tralee'

Mecca Film Laboratories, New York, has acquired sole and exclusive ownership of the Irish-made film "Rose of Tralee" for the United States, according to Harry Glickman, president. The rights cover both 35mm. and 16mm.

Mills Joins Newsom

A. K. Mills, formerly of the March of Time and later with Life magazine, is now on the staff of Earl Newsom and Company, publicity agents.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classifications. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 135, No. 2 April 15, 1939

THIS WEEK

PURPLE hyacinths, row on row, paint the borders of lapis lined pools to signalize the spring of 1939 in Rockefeller Center down there a half a thousand feet from our window. Forsythia planted by Radio City magic, overnight, pays in the only gold extant.

The telephone tells of a market agog, faltering, fearing.

Under that roof yonder, just beyond the Music Hall, the cables terminals are spilling into the Associated Press a flood of tidings of this bitter day in Europe—marching men, menaces, promises, threats and boundaries that are not boundaries. "Placation" and "appeasement" fade and give way to the policy of must and force. The umbrella may be, even within the hour, any hour, cast aside for the bayonet.

In London all industries, and all Wardour street, too, have heard what to do, in case. . . .

If the skies start to rain destruction, the motion picture must and will function. Governments in the debacle of 1914 scarcely knew of the screen. Today they are as aware of it, as concerned, as about the press.

HARDLY more than a fortnight ago it was being secretly and diplomatically said that Mr. Charles Chaplin could not make "The Dictator" because it could have no British Empire market in the face of the necessity for avoiding unnecessary irritation of Herr Hitler. There were concerns and diplomatic misgivings, not quite uttered, about "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." And yet—and now—it may be, by the swift unfoldment of events, deemed tomorrow as officially desirable, even necessary, that the screen have its say in these gestures of amusement that are in such deadly earnest.

We are these days standing, ticker tape in hand, listening to the radio, awaiting the crying of newsboys in the street with the extra which confirms in hot type that bulletin "War."

And a reporter comes in, with big news, the biggest in the world. He's had a call from the hospital. It's a girl, he's glad, because she will not have to go to war. He forgets she will probably have sons.

There are hyacinths, row on row, in Radio City—and crosses, row on row, "over there."

COMES A DIM DAWN

". . . I KNOW a hawk from a handsaw," in quotation from Hamlet, is the boast at the top of a feature column in the Hollywood Citizen-News to which Mr. Walter Wanger has contributed a copy of a letter forbidding further use of his name by "a well known organization which solicited his sponsorship."

It has required no super-reporting to discover that the "well-known organization" is Films for Democracy.

Much more difficult, if not impossible, would be a quest to discover the inspiration for this Corriganesque approach, with a letter remarkable in attempting to be anonymous on the front end.

It appears that now in April of 1939, Mr. Wanger has found evidence of "intellectual straddling" and is displeased at the failure—refusal indeed—of Films for Democracy to declare against Communism as it has against Fascism.

Mr. Wanger, and the several who from press and platform have been chiming his earlier advocacy of the Films for Democracy movement, had their first opportunity to evaluate the color of the movement with its primary announcements of a theatre screen invasion program in November of 1938.

If, after that, the facts were not obvious enough to differentiate "a hawk from a handsaw," an editorial in Motion Picture Herald of November 19, 1938, and another in Motion Picture Daily, by Mr. Martin Quigley, would have been found to convey interpretative treatments that were, and are, inescapable. The title of the Herald's discussion was "Muscling In." The subject was discussed, as all subjects are, from the viewpoint of the well being of the motion picture and the public it serves. All the facts were painfully obvious.

However, Mr. Wanger, and his chorus, took occasion to toss aspersions of mossbackism, reactionary pressure and the like at Motion Picture Herald, and its publisher and its editor.

TO bring the issues back to the facts, Mr. Quigley caused to be presented, in several successive issues of the Herald, at the turn of the year, a demand that Films for Democracy declare itself not only about Fascism but also about Communism and their kindred policies of Totalitarianism.

There was no answer.

Meanwhile it was plain enough, and furtively admitted, that the Films for Democracy movement was so dependent on its Red and Communistic components it did not dare to offend them, if it had the power—which remains undemonstrated.

The facts were clear then. The Herald's position declared then, being a reiteration of its stand concerning the Left, Reds, Communists and Fascists alike, was clear—and continues as it must, unchanged. It is a stand for the right of the motion picture industry, as an industry, to tend to its own business of serving its public.

The telling of the story of Films for Democracy has so far taken six months—time enough indeed for most any one to tell a hawk from a handsaw, even if one did not know his art from his elbow in the beginning.

ROOSTER'S BABIES

MAYBE you remember that line about a book on babies, "by a bachelor who can't bear them." Now comes Mr. Frederic Ullman's new born house organ "The Rooster," announcing that Mr. Alexander Woollcott has been retained to "assemble the Quins and recount their eventful five years to them." It is to be a two-reel production. "The Rooster" says the occasion is the fifth birthday of the Quintuplets "sired by Dionne and hired by Pathe." The merry miscellany is decorated by the fact that Mr. Woollcott is studying the biographies of the famous five "while he vacations at the Hollywood home of Harpo Marx."

That makes it about perfect.

This Week

Eyes South

Increasing concentration on development of the film market in South America, partly in compensation for dwindling returns in Europe, is becoming more evident as the distributors reveal plans for new season activities. A Twentieth Century-Fox project for a South American sales convention and consequent serious attention to exploitation of the field, announced by Sidney R. Kent at the Chicago sales meeting two weeks ago, was paralleled this week by a similar statement of policy from Barney Balaban, president of Paramount.

Plans of the two companies are elaborated in the story starting on page 13 wherein also are detailed the views of other executives on Latin America as a customer and how it should be cultivated.

With the Spring

It was not until this week that the Ascap office in New York, which has been battling anti-Ascap bills in the states, heard that one was "slipped over" in the Alaskan legislature, in February.

Ascap is understood to have only one paying radio customer in the territory.

The North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Missouri, and Oregon legislatures adjourned this year without acting on anti-Ascap bills. The Mississippi legislature adjourned without action on a tax bill aimed at Ascap.

The Vermont lawmakers are now considering a hostile bill.

The Society's income for 1938 amounted to $6,100,000, exceeding the 1937 income by $200,000. The increase came from hotels, restaurants, and the like, with film income 10 per cent less than in 1937, and radio income just a few thousand dollars more. Distributable royalties came to $4,100,000.

Finis

The fourth and final chapter in the Chapereau smuggling plots was written Tuesday when Albert N. Chapereau, the principal was sentenced in federal court in New York to five years in prison and fines of $5,000. Chapereau, operating on the fringe of the motion picture and theatrical business, had made his last appearance in the film industry just before his indictment, last December, at a cocktail party he gave at the Pierre on Fifth Avenue to the trade press to talk about some "film importations."

Sentenced one hour before Chapereau was Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of supreme court justice, Edgar J. Lauer, who got three months in jail and a $2,500 fine for receiving goods brought into the country by Chapereau.

In related prosecutions George Burns and Jack Benny previously pleaded guilty and paid heavy fines.

Let's Make a Law

State legislatures, most of them nearing adjournment time, considered new proposals affecting the motion picture industry, reaching new heights in numbers and variety. The range was from a bill limiting the length of programs to one which would compel all exhibitors to install lighted clocks, the last containing no clause, however, requiring the timepieces to be accurate.

Reports from the state capitols are gathered on page 68.

Again, "Good Will"

As virtually the first move in a nation wide radio industry "good will campaign" emulative of the motion picture industry's drive, the major networks this Monday will begin "Open House Week" during which speakers on the networks will explain the "American way" of broadcasting to promote good will among set manufacturers, broadcasters, and listeners. Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters and Bond Geddes, executive vice president of the Radio Manufacturers Association, will speak over the NBC hookup on Sunday at two o'clock, explaining the "week."

Warner Bond Exchange

On April 11th, the board of directors of Warner Brothers, Inc., declared effective the plan of exchange dated July 22, 1938, under which $19,338,000 aggregate principal amount of capital 6 per cent convertible debentures series due 1939 were deposited, for which certificates of deposit have been issued, and are now exchangeable for 6 per cent debentures, series due 1948. The board of directors has given the right to holders of undeposited debentures until May 1st to exchange their optional 6 per cent convertible debentures series due 1939, for an equal amount of 6 per cent debentures of the series due 1948. The 6 per cent debentures, series 1948, have been listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Signed Finally

William Bondy, federal judge in New York, on Tuesday signed the final papers in the long procedure designed to reorganize RKO, realign stock holdings and set up a new company along lines designated by the Atlas Company. Approved also were the officers and board of directors.

Judge Bondy rejected a proposal by H. Cassell and Company to require Atlas to present an underwriting agreement within 30 days. He also overruled objections from John S. Stover, attorney for Ernest W. Stirn, that Atlas was interested in a competitive company, Paramount Pictures.

The directorate includes George J. Schaefer, Floyd B. Odlum, Raymond Bill, Ned E. Depinet, Thomas P. Durell, Frederick L. Ehrman, Lawrence Green, James G. Harbord, Conde Nast, John E. Parsons, N. Peter Rathvon, W. G. Van Schmus, and Lunsford P. Yandell.

New Product

Announcements to be made at four sales conventions within the next few weeks will add details of approximately 200 features to the list of more than 200 already announced by large distributors for 1939-40 release. Universal representatives will convene this weekend in Cincinnati and Monogram, Columbia and United Artists will meet for product and sales discussions during the first week of May.

Plans are detailed on page 56.

No Restrictions

Motion picture licensees of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Radio Corporation of America may participate in sound film production for television program use without mechanical restriction or special royalty fees according to a ruling the sound apparatus manufacturers made this week.

Developments are on page 71.

Newsreels and Fair

While newsreel companies were negotiating this week with New York World's Fair authorities in the hope of modifying Grover Whalen's order barring trucks from the fair grounds, it was reported that labor difficulties might mar the opening ceremonies on April 30th.

The Whalen order bars all automobiles and trucks from the grounds on opening day and during the summer run of the exposition. Newsreel officials contend that it would be impossible for them to get adequate pictures of the opening day ceremonies if they cannot bring their sound trucks into the area. A meeting with publicity officials of the Fair was set for this week.

Meanwhile a jurisdictional dispute threatens between unions whose members are employed in construction at the Fair and Local 4 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes. Local 4 claims that as soon as the Fair opens and the elaborate lighting effects become a part of a public performance, handling of the electrical work will fall properly in their jurisdiction. Members of the building electricians local, also an American Federation of Labor unit, are in charge of the electrical work during construction and since the construction will not be completed on opening day it is claimed that they should remain in charge.

Actors' Fair Pay

Actors' Equity has decreed that performers at the World's Fair shall be paid a minimum of $50 a week for a 44-hour week. Chorus and ballet performers must receive $45 a week and extras and walk-ons $25. Overtime must be paid for at the rate of one and one-half times the usual rate.

"Juarez" in 16 Reels

With the final form of general release still to be decided, Warner Brothers will open "Juarez" as a roadshow, $2 top, two-a-day, in its present 16-reel length, at the Hollywood theatre on Broadway on Tuesday evening, April 25th.

Broadway had heard that the picture would play nationally in its long form, as one "solution" to double bills, but this is unlikely. However, S. Charles Einfeld, director of Warner advertising, said Tuesday that the company still is considering the idea of making two separate versions out of the story of the Mexican rebel, Juarez, who dethroned Maximilian, Emperor, and his wife Carlotta, around the 1800's. Each of the eight reelers would be shown separately.

Accompanying the Broadway premiere will be an extensive campaign, aimed to attract the first New York World's Fair crowds.

Derby Broadcast

The Kentucky Derby will be broadcast May 6th over the nation-wide network of the Columbia Broadcasting System in behalf of "Rose of Washington Square," forthcoming production of Twentieth Century-Fox. The broadcast will be from 6:15 to 6:45, E.D.S.T. CBS sports announcers Ted Husing, Bryan Field and Bob Trout will paint a word picture of the horse race, the mile and a quarter dash of the year's outstanding three-year-olds.

Salaries

Louis B. Mayer, with $1,161,753 from Loew's, Inc., and $134,750 from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was the highest salaried person of a corporation in the United States in 1937, according to the report submitted to Congress this week by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. The next two highest salaries were also accounted for by Loew's, in conjunction with MGM; while the motion picture field paid 40 of the country's 63 salaries in excess of $200,000.

A summary of the report's findings, together with estimates of the parts of these salaries that go to federal and state income taxes, and a list of film executive's and stars' salaries, compared with their 1936 earnings, will be found on page 44.

Dramatist's Royalties

For the first time since the drawing up of the Minimum Basic Agreement by the Dramatists' Guild in 1936, use has been made of the basic motion picture royalty contract, it having been used by Katherine Hepburn in her purchase of the film rights of Philip Barry's play "The Philadelphia Story."

Having purchased motion picture rights to the play prior to its production on the legitimate stage, Miss Hepburn, at the same time, and in the capacity of a motion picture producer, signed a basic minimum royalty contract with the Guild. These transactions came under one of the three methods of selling film rights to plays contained in the Guild Minimum Basis Agreement, that being "A contract providing that payment be based in whole or in part on a royalty on the motion picture, this contract entered into simultaneously with the contract for theatrical production." The Barry play is the first to be sold under this provision.

The basic contract provides for a minimum advance against royalties of $25,000 and stipulates that royalties are subject to approval by the Guild, and are based upon the producer's gross receipts, which are carefully defined in the agreement.

French Bill

American distributor interests in France, pleased with elimination of program length restriction provisions in the comprehensive bill for control of the cinema industry which is now before the Chamber of Deputies, still were worried by the threat of imposition of a dubbing tax expressed indirectly in the preamble to the proposal. French executives in the industry were relieved at cancellation of the clause which would have allowed authors' societies to collect fees directly at theatres but still found much that was threatening.

Pierre Autre writes of Parisian reaction on page 66.

Buying Pool

A pool for the collective buying of product and equipment, tentatively called Theatre Management Booking Operation, is being formed in Cincinnati by Maurice White, who, in association with Ike and Abe Libson, controls several houses in Ohio and adjacent territory.

The Sam D. Lee circuit, operating theatres in Winchester, Frankfort and other Kentucky locations, has been signed. Membership will be confined to theatremen in the Cincinnati trade territory, with 75 to 100 theatres as the limit, it is said.

KENT, BALABAN LEAD WAY IN LATIN AMERICAN DRIVE

Paramount and 20th Century-Fox Turning Eyes South for Offset to Losses in Europe and Orient

The industry is getting down to action in hewing out a market in South America. The determination of Twentieth Century-Fox to cultivate the field, as announced by Sidney R. Kent, president, at the company's annual sales convention two weeks ago in Chicago, was paralleled this week by a similar statement of policy from Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, who arrived on the coast Monday, with other home office officials, for production conferences.

Look to South America

The two public statements are representative of the decision of virtually all the majors to build Latin American sales as a replacement for the markets lost to international tensions and restrictions in Europe and the Far East.

In several other quarters Latin America was mentioned as an increasingly important customer for Hollywood, with a unanimity on its importance but a divergence of opinion on the best method of satisfying it, on the importance of the native motion picture industries, and on the so-called "anti-American" feeling.

Among executives who have contributed expressions to the subject are Miles S. Goldrick, assistant foreign sales manager of Electrical Research Products, Inc., who feels that equipment business, while good and increasing, can be made even better; Joseph Seidelman, foreign sales manager of Universal Pictures, who, while pointing out the preponderance of American films in Latin America, believes there is "room for improvement"; Donald Slesinger, director of the American Film Center, which has completed a study of Latin America as a market; Fernando Mier, brother of the Mexican producer, Felipe Mier; William Rowland, producer, for RKO, in Mexico City; and others.

Compensation for Shrinkage

Mr. Balaban, arriving in California, expanded the Paramount statement of policy, thus:

"We feel that by paying special attention to the entertainment wants and interests of our neighbors of Latin America, and the British Empire, we can compensate for possible shrinkage in market resulting from international trouble in Europe. With such plans in view, Paramount will not reduce the activities of its Hollywood studio. The company expects to make approximately the same number of pictures we produced during the past year, thus maintaining thousands of workers on heavy payrolls here."

Last week, a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, listening to arguments over the Neely anti-block-booking bill, heard two representatives of the majors, Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Mr. Kent, as head of Twentieth Century-Fox, outline the loss of European and other markets, and emphasize the importance of Latin America. Mr. Pettijohn asserted that in South America the gain exceeded recent losses in Italy and Germany.

MEXICO SETS UP NEW FILM BRANCH

Organization of a national chamber for Mexican film producers, distributors and exhibitors, for the purpose of protecting their interests and generally improving conditions in the industry, has been completed in Mexico City by a group of members of the national exhibitors' union, headed by Francisco Somohano.

Manuel Rivera, prominent producer, is president. Other officers include Juan Pezet, Francisco Somohano, Manuel Fernandez and Emilio Azcarraga.

General orders for all grade school children in Mexico City to attend a theatre were issued for the first time by the Public Education Department. The picture is "Professor Mamlock," Russian film. The children were admitted at 2 cents a head to see this persecution film.

Mr. Kent said losses in foreign exchange were sustained by Twentieth Century-Fox from Japan's invasion of China, the absorption by Germany of Czechoslovakia, the German and Japanese monetary restrictions, the civil war in Spain, the building of a British industry and its quota system, the establishment of a government monopoly in Italy.

"All but two or three of the eight companies are out of Germany, and the Central European market, which used to be a large one, is now practically nil through German domination," said Mr. Kent. "The company I represent was doing a million and a quarter's worth of business annually in Spain. It was completely wiped out by the civil war. . . . A few weeks ago we were forced out of Italy by a state monopoly that proposed to buy our pictures at practically nothing. . . . We had been building a lucrative business in China after many years of effort, which has now been destroyed largely by the Japanese invasion. . . . Our former prosperous business in Japan has wasted away to practically nothing. . . . In England, the company that I represent will spend $2,500,000 alone this year to meet the requirements of the Quota Act. That is the price that one company alone will pay for the privilege of doing business for one year."

Only Worldwide Salesman

A solution lies in South and Central market, he went on.

"Our thought is to develop this market. This is an important job. The motion picture business is the only salesman America has today covering a world wide front. It has increased our country's export business by creating demand for American goods shown in our films; it has opened new factories to meet this demand; and it has even forced foreign governments to teach English in their schools. The American film is the greatest sales force our country has in foreign lands, and it is our hope to increase this prestige in South American countries."

Twentieth Century-Fox will hold its Central and South American annual sales conventions, the first such, in Rio de Janeiro and Trinidad. The former convention is expected in May, and the latter in June, probably, on Mr. Kent's return from inspection of South American exchange territories. He will attend both conventions, and, in Brazil especially, in view of the increased American-Brazilian trade cooperation as expressed by the recent treaty, will be greeted by President Getulio Vargas, foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, and other dignitaries.

90% of Bookings

While various industry figures, acquainted with Latin America through statistical manuals or by "inspection" tours, agree it is a large market, not all say that it is so large, important, or undeveloped, for American trade.

It is pointed out that American films now have approximately 90 per cent of the bookings; that neither native, German nor Italian production is threateningly competitive; that, if native production should become a danger it could be financed, or bought, comparatively easily by the American companies, because of the lower costs of labor, property and equipment.

It is, however, generally agreed that certain improvements in business methods should be made; that distribution systems, especially in Argentina, are antiquated; that the personnel of American exchanges could be improved, with more competent staffs; that Hollywood pictures with dialogue in the English language could be scrutinized more carefully, to avoid offending Latin sensibilities and to include items of more interest to Latin Americans; that pictures in Spanish could be made more carefully, in Spanish and with a story content that all Latin Americans will understand.

Methods of Operation

Furthermore, it is agreed that, for American companies to improve their present situation in the market, they can finance production or distribution of native product, or both; they can produce, as they have been doing, Spanish language pictures in Holywood; and in the realization that English language pictures generally outdraw even the best native production they can continue to distribute English language pictures, made with special care.

Opinions differ on the comparative efficiency of these three methods for capturing the entire Latin American market. Those who criticize Spanish language production in Hollywood say that the locale, dialect, mentality, of Latin America cannot be approximated in a Hollywood studio.

"They attempt to follow the Hollywood style, even in the picture technique, and you can't do that in Spanish pictures, because the mentality is different," Joseph Seidelman, foreign sales manager for Universal Pictures, declared. Mr. Seidelman, in New York, is back from a tour of key cities of Latin America, during which he exhibited "The Mikado," an English made picture of Universal release, and a special product trailer, with Spanish accoutrements.

The American companies should pay more attention to their Hollywood English language pictures, Mr. Seidelman said; they should not, necessarily, go into native production.

Spanish Commentary

Universal is following this procedure, according to Mr. Seidelman. The company's newsreels and shorts are being equipped with Spanish commentary, and the Hollywood studios are trying to inject items of interest to Latin Americans into pictures, and to exercise the same care not to offend sensibilities, as formerly was reserved by Hollywood studios to pictures which might offend Europeans.

Argentina has the "only serious" native production, according to Mr. Seidelman.

"They produce about 50 pictures yearly, and about four are good," he said. "But they can't live on making three or four good ones and 46 bad ones, which has been their average."

Mexican Production Improving

Mr. Seidelman noted that Mexican production was improving, but called its distribution throughout Latin America very "spotty." Of native production, generally, he remarked:

"It has its place, and will keep its place; it is limited by production costs and distribution costs. We've always led the market. For us now it's just a matter of being a little more energetic, of adapting our methods, and our pictures, with a little more care and attention."

He noted that in smaller theatres native pictures were booked at weekends, most profitable time, and American pictures mid-week. This he attributed to a lack of knowledge of proper marketing by local exhibitors, though a variety of explanations have been offered by others.

As for German pictures, "though their features even are offered free, these and their distributors are so plainly labeled Nazi that they can't obtain bookings. Germany is no competition at all."

French Competition Seen

Apropos of the dislike for German pictures, Fernando Mier, brother of the Mexican producer, Felipe Mier, said in New York this week that the ideological note was subordinate to the "plain fact that German actors are too loud, and the language is too harsh."

Mr. Mier said that Italian pictures might invade the market successfully, if Italian pictures were "any good," and they "never are any good," he said.

He claimed that French pictures constitute, outside of native product, the sole threat to American grip on the market, a viewpoint concurred in by several other observers. Partial success of French pictures is due, he said, to their "spot" booking policies, whereas, he said, American companies still try to sell in blocks.

Surveys of the Latin American scene, conducted by various governmental, philanthropic, and industry affiliated observers, throw a parenthetical sidelight on Mr. Mier's observation. It was noted last week by a group in New York, representing all three types of investigation, and paramountly interested in "developing" Latin America, that when an American picture has been disliked it has been because of portrayal of free and callous family relations, whereas French pictures are apparently successful for the same content. In the terms of one commentator, American pictures were penalized for half-hearted "wickedness," while French pictures were praised because of their thoroughness in this direction. It was emphasized, however, that the observations hold true only in the so-called specialty theatres in key cities.

Brazil Called Best Market

Mr. Mier called Brazil the "best" American market "to be" because it is still largely undeveloped, its population is growing, its language is Portugese, Spanish production does not enjoy any advantages to speak of and the native production is virtually negligible.

American pictures, whether in Brazil or the rest of Latin America, should above all have action, Mr. Mier said. He pointed out the large percentage of persons who, in "backwoods" areas, are unable to read English titling.

"But such people will always understand action," he said; "and that is why westerns always sell."

WAR ORDERS HALT SHOWS

Motion picture theatre programs at Malta were interrupted Monday night so that British naval officers could call out emergency mobilization orders to sailors and officers in the audiences. Within a few minutes bluejackets and air force men were pouring into the streets from theatres and other places and were proceeding on the double-quick to the ships of Britain's Mediterranean Fleet which were soon steaming for undisclosed destinations after the Cabinet in London had decided that any aggression by Italy against Greece, Turkey or other Eastern Mediterranean States would be regarded as "an invitation to war."

American newsreel managers in New York disclosed Tuesday that their "war crews" were "all set" at Europe's strategic places against any eventualities. In some cases the camera crews have been doubled since the situation became tense following Italy's invasion of Albania.

The content of American pictures was criticized by Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, chairman of The East Coast Motion Picture Preview Committee, who reported that, at the Lima Conference, from meeting Latin American women, she learned that they "were worried about our home life."

The Latin Americans, she said, do not understand gangster pictures and college love stories. She quoted an Argentinian as calling American pictures "the worst possible propaganda" against the United States. Mrs. Sporborg has submitted reform recommendations to the MPPDA.

Rowland's Views

That American companies would better enter native production by subsidization, rather than depend upon the "superiority" of Hollywood production, was the opinion of William Rowland, producer of Mexican pictures for RKO release, in New York this week. Mr. Rowland's "Perfidias," a musical, was finished this week, and he was expected to return to Mexico City this weekend to start work on the third of a series of four which RKO is releasing, "Love at Ninety Degrees."

Mr. Rowland pointed to the anticipated subsidy, by the Mexican government, of $1,000,000 to Mexican producers, as an example of the growth of such a practice, and as a promise of an eventually large industry.

While RKO is merely releasing his product, under present contracts, Mr. Rowland declared he expected the company to finance production shortly, and cited the sponsorship of Mexican production by United Artists, Columbia, and Universal. He said that these companies hold contracts for 22 pictures, about one-half the total Mexico City production; and anticipated that, before the end of the year, American companies would sponsor about 75 per cent of Mexican production.

Outright subsidization would avoid the eventual setting up of quota laws, he said; it helps the majors market their "B" pictures; it pays for their distribution costs in Latin America; increased native production brings to the theatre inhabitants, particularly of the hinterlands, who never saw pictures before, who can't read Spanish titles but can understand Spanish dialogue. He said pictures can be made in Mexico for $40,000 which would require not less than $250,000 in Hollywood.

Would Use "Pure Spanish"

Mexican distribution in other Latin American countries is "spotty" only because Mexican producers use the local language and localized stories, Mr. Rowland said, advocating the use of "pure Spanish" and stories which "all can understand."

Every country below the Rio Grande will have an industry, Mr. Rowland thought; and American industry should enter directly, now. He predicted about 50 pictures yearly, from "about each country," and said that, while no one of these countries can build an industry as large as that of Hollywood, they can produce comparable pictures, because of the labor, and other price differentials. Mr. Rowland said that it was "easy" to get a "50 per cent profit" on Mexican pictures costing up to $80,000.

He decried production of Spanish language pictures in Hollywood.

Increased Competition

J. A. McConville, foreign manager for Columbia Pictures, who returned to New York two weeks ago after a two-week stay in Mexico, noted an improvement in Mexican-United States film relations, and competition to Mexican product from Argentine and from the new Spain. He predicted better and increased Mexican production, and the use by native production of American distribution facilities in all Latin America.

Columbia now has a total of three Spanish talking pictures being released in Latin America shortly. They are "Los Enredos de Papa," "Cada Loco Con Su Tema," and "Luces de Barriada." Entering production shortly will be "Caballo a Caballo."

Donald Slesinger, director of the American Film Center, New York City, left Monday for California, taking with him a report prepared by the Center staff, on the laws, tariffs, agencies of film distribution, personnel of film companies, equipment—and, most particularly, prejudices—of Latin America. The Center has been engaged in the study for several months, and intends to make it available on Mr. Slesinger's return to New York on April 27, to "all who can use it to advantage." The Center has stated that the endeavor was "primarily philanthropic," a service to American enterprise generally.

The aim of the survey by the Center was, ostensibly, to advise those who "are interested" on the conditions which face the distribution and manufacture of educational films but the theatrical film interests are applying its data and the State Department, which as well as the motion picture industry, feels that "educational" films are necessary to promote the good will which will increase commerce.

The Center report has correlated the pertinent facts from various available domestic sources. In this connection, it has paid for the printing of a survey by the Metropolitan Motion Picture Council, in New York City, of all existing films on Latin America. The report also, inasmuch as members of the Center staff were unable to visit Latin America, incorporates parts of confidential surveys from paid agents in Latin America.

While the Center report will be exhaustive, certain highlights expected will include a recommendation by implication that men of greater competence be employed by American companies in their Latin American exchanges, inasmuch as many are related to executives in United States home offices; a statement that, while American films have most of the bookings, they can obtain more; that American films suffer from mid-week dating, in second and subsequent runs, because the distribution system, whereby native producers pay distribution agencies a flat fee, and a percentage of grosses, spurs the latter to obtain weekend bookings from small house exhibitors for native product.

PERMANENT EQUIPMENT MARKET

Equipment

American equipment manufacturers have "nothing to fear" from Italian and German competition in Latin America, nor from native production of such equipment, in the opinion of Miles S. Goldrick, assistant foreign manager for Electrical Research Products, who returned to the company's New York home offices on April 3, after a 20,000 mile airplane tour of most of the Latin American countries. Mr. Goldrick found the business outlook "very promising," with the company expected to increase its sales this year. He noted import difficulties in Argentina, Chile, and Uruguay, but believes these will be overcome, with the negotiations now in progress or expected, between the State Department and those countries, for mutually beneficial trade pacts.

"German equipment is good, but not as good as ours; we have the patents," he said. "As far as the building up of local industry is concerned, that may happen. But no South American country will ever be able to compete with American precision manufacturing methods. And small countries, with small populations cannot expect to have a big enough market to spend the money to build any motion picture equipment industry large enough to compete with ours."

"Even should the improbable happen," he said, "we will always be certain of keeping our own market back here."

Sees Permanent Market

Mr. Goldrick pointed out that American business men "have got to learn" Latin "psychology." Qualifying this, he said:

"Nevertheless, our businessmen are at least as skillful in selling as those of any other country; and, in most cases, their ability, and their product, especially, is superior."

"We've got a good market down there now," he continued, "but, of course, we can have a much better one. The more attention we pay to it, the better it will get."

"Latin America, differing from most other markets, is a permanent market," he declared. "The continuation of our present realistic treatment of our market there will bring us more and more benefits."

Mr. Goldrick blamed money exchange difficulties for the somewhat increased trade attention given by Latin American countries to Italian and German products. Said he:

"It is not a matter of ideologies; just a matter of foreign exchange. Latin American countries don't get enough American exchange to pay for all their American imports."

In such circumstances, he intimated, they turn to countries which barter, such as Germany and Italy. He pointed out the situation in motion picture equipment in Argentina. There, he noted, the Western Electric Company of Argentina must obtain a separate license for each shipment of American products. The Germans are favored over the Americans, because "they get their strength by barter."

In spite of the situation, Mr. Goldrick claimed that Western Electric had "made more progress there in the last year than in the two previous."

Mr. Goldrick explained the licensing system, which obtains also in Uruguay, and Chile.

"These people, and the Argentines," he said, "are merely attempting to control their foreign exchange. The licenses cost practically nothing; they aren't for revenue; they are discriminatory; they are left to the discretion of the officials, who will not favor a country with which they have an unfavorable balance of exchange. And, I believe, Argentina has an unfavorable balance of trade with the United States."

SAYS U. S. LABOR BOARD KILLS "FREE" UNIONS

Protection of unaffiliated, "independent" labor unions from the allegedly biased National Labor Relations Board is sought in amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act by Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana. Senator Ellender said that his amendments would permit aggrieved workers to appeal to the courts from labor board decisions.

"They will allow you to import product if it is necessary to the welfare of the country," he added.

Generally, Latin America has been cultivated assiduously, though not as much as it could be, Mr. Goldrick intimated. He said that, "there has been quite a bit of equipment sold down there during the last few years, but there are plenty of theatres to equip," and cited the many thousands of theatres, in "backwoods" areas.

The company has had to depend upon the United States Department of Commerce for approximately exact figures on the number of theatres and types of equipment, he noted. The company has been trying to conduct an independent survey of the territory, but finds it difficult, he said, "because there are some theatres which no North American has ever seen, and can never get to, apparently."

The lack of purchasing power of the majority of the population in these areas, which comprise much of Central and South America, makes it impossible for the theatre owner to earn much, and to purchase much. Mr. Goldrick noted that while much equipment can be sold, this is a large market which can never be reached until the inhabitants have enough money,

"What we are trying to do in those countries is to have the exhibitor place in our laps all of their problems," he declared.

Modernized Equipment Needed

Modernization is the greatest need of the Latin-American exhibitor, he noted.

"For years, there has been a great market for used equipment," he said, "and they operate in some places with the worst junk you ever saw."

On product, Mr. Goldrick ventured that the increasing number of Spanish language pictures had brought backwoods Indians to the theatres "for the first time"; and that this audience growth was responsible for the better prospects for the entertainment end of the industry.

"From seeing Spanish language pictures—and it is only natural that they want to see pictures primarily in their own language—they have gone on to enjoying English language pictures."

He added that an American "big" picture made box office figures, however.

Brazil is the biggest potential market, Mr. Goldrick said; and Mexico at present is the "livest." The latter he attributed to the modernizing of Mexico, and Spanish language production there; the former he explained as a country bound to become as great as the United States.

Mr. Goldrick started his tour, by Pan-American Airways, on January 15th. He visited Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, the West Indies, Puerto Rico, Cuba and the Guianas.

ERPI operates in Latin America through wholly owned subsidiary companies: the Western Electric of Mexico, for Mexico and all of Central America as far as Panama; the W. E. of Cuba, for the Caribbean Islands, the Guianas, Venezuela, Panama, and Peru; the W. E. of Chile; the W. E. of Argentina; the W. E. of Brazil, for Brazil and Uraguay.

The Department of Commerce in Washington this week released figures from its commercial attache at Buenos Aires, showing that American pictures were holding their lead in Argentina, and that German and Italian films were "no competition." A breakdown of these figures covering the first two months of 1938 and of 1939 follows:

1938	1939
52 features released	52 features released
40 American	35 American
four German	one German
one Italian	none Italian

Following is a general description of Latin-American production:

In order of importance, there is production in Mexico, Argentina, Cuba, Brazil, Peru, Venezuela, Uraguay. Before the Spanish civil war the growing Spanish industry supplied the extant demand for Spanish language pictures; its consequent cessation helped Latin-American production to grow; its probable rebirth, with the grandiose plans of the new Spain, may introduce an element, whose ramifications, ideological and commercial, are hard to foretell. For the present, however, there is only Latin-American production to consider.

Mexican Production Increasing

Last year Mexico City produced 50 pictures and Buenos Aires 47. This year, Mexican producers, if financed adequately, hope to increase the output to 70 pictures; and Argentine production is similarly optimistic. The average "first class" picture in these production centers cost from $40,000 to $80,000.

Libertad Lamarque is the outstanding actor in Buenos Aires. Boxoffice favorites also are Sandrini and Pepe Ortiz. Distribution of Argentine production has been handicapped by use of local dialect.

Maria Teresa Montoya, Arturo De Cordoba, Marina, Tamayo, Fernando Soler, and Domingo Soler are the greatest Mexican drawing names. Mexico appears to be better endowed with talent, with many Spanish stars present.

With Columbia, United Artists, Universal, and RKO already subsidizing or releasing Mexican production, the trend is towards entrance of more American companies, and towards outright subsidization.

In all Latin-American production the trend is towards a "sharpening" of technique; so that, it is estimated, at least four each of the current crop from Mexico City and Buenos Aires compare "favorably" with Hollywood pictures costing about $200,000 to $300,000. The star system has developed, to boxoffice advantage.

In Mexico, the government aids production; an instance being the five per cent rebate in taxes, to encourage American companies to produce there. And, also, five per cent of the gross is charged against all non-Mexican pictures, as a Federal tax, this being rebated to native production.

NEELY SEEMS TO BE LONE COMMITTEE PROPONENT OF BLOCK BOOKING BILL

New Trade Practice Proposals Acceptable to Practically All Exhibitor Units Except Allied, Rodgers Tells Senators

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

A close study of members of the five-man Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee holding public hearings on the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill in the Senate Office Building at Washington disclosed Wednesday that the measure possibly might not reach the floor of the Senate from committee for a vote.

Three of the five members of the sub-committee were seen as probably against the bill, a fourth, Senator Tobey, of New Hampshire, has taken no part in the hearings, leaving Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely still firmly behind the measure, as its sponsor.

At the last Congress, the Senate passed the bill, but without a record vote; it did not reach the floor of the House.

Reaching the middle of the second week of the hearings, Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, chairman of the sub-committee, made it clear that he views the film industry, from producer to exhibitor, as based on the profit motive and is not "sold" on the contention that the quality of films can be legislated upward.

White Expresses Impatience

Senator Wallace H. White of Maine, who voted against the bill when it passed the Senate last year, has expressed impatience with charges of monopoly and lack of interest in the proposed trade practice agreement, pointing out that the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission can deal with such matters, and has insisted on being shown that the moral problem of the screen can be solved by the bill.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who was "put on the spot" by Senator Neely's attempt to discharge the committee, is seen as against the bill on much the same grounds as Senators Smith and White.

Taking a slap at the manner in which the bill went through the Senate a year ago, Chairman Smith, during the hearings this week, expressed himself as "greatly enlightened" as to the film industry and its methods and as planning to share his enlightenment with other members of the Senate should the bill come up on the floor. The chairman expressed the hope that "the Senate will have as open a mind as some of us have had."

Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Research Council, of course, continue to be as much as ever in favor of passage of the bill.

Sees Pictures Retarded

Enactment of the anti-block booking bill would retard rather than advance the improvement of motion pictures, members of the sub-committee were warned by representatives of the distributors as the hearings started their second week on Monday.

Denying emphatically that the bill in itself provided any safeguards of the morals of the theatre-going public, leaders of the majors asserted that, under it, exhibitors would demand the same box-office successes that they now buy, that the new trade practice code would achieve the same results without the disadvantages, and that a majority of the independent exhibitors of the country preferred the new code to the bill.

DISCUSS TRADE PACT AT NEELY HEARINGS

While state exhibitor organizations continued this week to study the industry's new trade practice program (text appeared in Motion Picture Herald, April 8th, pages 44–48), the majors were reciting its advantages to a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee holding public hearings in Washington on the Neely anti-block booking bill. Proponents of the bill, led by Allied, at the same time, insisted in their testimony before the sub-committee that the program did not solve that which they demand through passage of the bill, that is, complete elimination of blind and block selling.

Meanwhile, salesmen of the majors working in the field will ascertain general exhibitor sentiment toward the pact to aid the distributors in rephrasing parts of the code, should this be found necessary. The general feeling exists that the majors stand willing to continue discussions with exhibitors.

The trade practice proposals, it was disclosed by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of M-G-M, were initiated largely in an effort to quiet the demands of Allied exhibitors, who are the spearhead of the drive for adoption of the Neely bill.

Putting the proposals into the record for study by members at their convenience, Mr. Rodgers declared that practically every other exhibitor organization in the country has indicated that it will accept the agreement, although, he admitted, they all are seeking to have changes of more or less importance written into the provisions.

Civic Units' Demands in Mind

The proposals, he disclosed, were written with a view to meeting not only the demands of exhibitors but those of the civic organizations which have been prominent in the fight for legislation. The requirements of the latter, he said, are believed to have been met in the provisions for rejection of undesirable pictures and the securing of desirable films and the setting up of arbitration boards with distributor, exhibitor and neutral members to pass on each such case.

Mr. Rodgers explained that the agreement makes provision for the shifting of play-dates on "week-end" films which an exhibitor deems improper for his week-end audiences, for the determination by small exhibitors of the dates on which they will play percentage pictures, eliminates score charges and the requirements of some companies that exhibitors take shorts or other films in order to get features, and a guarantee that a small exhibitor will not have his pictures taken away from him to be given to a larger theatre.

"The small theatre man has decided advantages under this proposal that will give him, not all the Neely bill provides but a great many concessions he never had before," Mr. Rodgers told the subcommittee.

Apparently misunderstanding him, Senator Neely asked: "If this will give it all the Neely bill provides, why not just pass the Neely bill?"

"I didn't say 'all,'" the witness replied.

Declaring that it is not always profitable to deal with the smallest theatres, the witness declared that the distributors have "bent backwards" in an effort to bring about a house-cleaning in the industry.

A number of exhibitor organizations, including the MPTOA, Southern California exhibitors, ITO of Metropolitan New York, the Virginia exhibitors and groups in Iowa and Nebraska, have already advised him of the probability of their acceptance of the proposals, Mr. Rodgers stated, explaining that the current draft had been sent to all exhibitor organizations and had been printed in all the film trade papers so that all exhibitors knew what they were. Whether they accept or not, he said, every exhibitor will benefit to some extent from the proposals, which are now being incorporated in the contracts and policies of several companies, M-G-M included.

The determination to eliminate score charges, he said, will cost his company over $600,000 a year in revenue, with other distributors suffering proportionately.

Rejected by 1,292 Exhibitors

Leaving to other witnesses the presentation of the effects of the legislation upon the industry, if enacted, Mr. Rodgers cited merely his own company's experience with "better" pictures, saying that it produced Dickens' "Christmas Carol" at considerable expense, only to have it rejected by 1,292 exhibitors, contrasting that experience with the baker's dozen cancellations usually received on a gangster film.

"I am simply trying to emphasize that from a moral standpoint there is no issue here," he said. Nothing in the Neely bill would prevent an exhibitor from rejecting such a picture, admittedly not a box-office attraction, he said.

Declaring there has been a great deal of misrepresentation as to the actual situation, the MGM sales executive took up and answered a number of the charges made by Allied witnesses last week.

In the first place, he said, it is not true that only the "best" pictures are exported to England; it is not true that United Artists sells its pictures singly, and it is not true there is no block booking in England.

Far from selling its films selectively, United Artists, which has not yet agreed to join the other distributors in the trade practice proposals, books in blocks and demands that exhibitors, including the Loew chain whose contract he analyzed over the week end, not only to take all its product but to take also five foreign pictures. Loew's did not want so many foreign films, but had to take them, he declared, and, further, not only had to buy blindly but had no cancellation privileges.

Block Booking in England

Block booking is also practiced in England, he asserted, explaining that while distributors are required to trade show their pictures, they demand that exhibitors sign up for all those shown at a time. He pointed out that there is a prohibition against selling a picture for six months after it is trade shown, and suggested that the exhibitors here who were fighting for such showings would not like such a delay, particularly in the case of musicals of a topical nature.

ANSWER ALLIED LEADERS' CHARGES

Referring to Col. H. A. Cole's assertion that 23 Texas theatres were forced out of business by "oppressive" tactics, Mr. Rodgers told the subcommittee he had never been able to get a list of exhibitors who were put out of business but that, on the contrary, those who are most strenuously fighting the distributors are among those who have been most successful.

In this, he referred to Sidney H. Samuelson (of Allied), who, he said, has had a monopoly in his home town of Newton, N. J., for many years. Mr. Samuelson, he recalled, told the subcommittee that an old building was being remodeled into a film theatre and that threats had been made that if he continued his legislative activities, he would get some competition. That threat, Mr. Rodgers declared, was made, not by a distributor affiliate but by an independent exhibitor.

Sees Curtailed Production

Further, he asserted, Mr. Samuelson complained that the best pictures went first to the distributor-controlled houses. "In his case, he plays pictures in Newton within two or three days after the Capitol in New York," the witness asserted. "The highest rental ever received from the Capitol was $80,000. Mr. Samuelson had the same picture, while it was being played at the Capitol, for exactly $50."

Mr. Rodgers also paid his respects to Nathan Yamins, Allied president, who had declared enactment of the bill would not hurt the producers. "That was theory," he declared. "For my company I can give you facts. If the Neely bill becomes a law there is only one way in which we can operate. That is, after a picture is finished. I cannot risk the provisions of this bill. And if we finish and show pictures and then sell them, despite what Mr. Yamins said to the contrary, my company will be forced to curtail production not less than 25 per cent."

As his final shot, Mr. Rodgers declared that under the bill there would be no way in which the industry could experiment with better pictures, and far from elevating the screen, the legislation would drag production down to a level far below what the producers themselves are aiming at.

"Of these independent theatres that claim to be so oppressed," he concluded, "I would like to know how many of the 10,000 in existence are for sale."

Educator Deserts Bill

The first defection from the ranks of the proponents of the bill was disclosed in a telegram to Senator Pepper of Florida from the president of the University of Florida, and transmitted to Chairman Smith for inclusion in the record. In his telegram, the University head admitted that he had supported the bill in 1936 but said that he has since observed improvement in motion pictures and has learned more about the economic and social problems of the industry and, while still sympathetic with the aims of the measure, does not now believe legislation the most desirable means of dealing with the situation.

A split in the subcommittee as to the moral virtues of the bill was revealed as George J. Schaefer, RKO president, prefaced his prepared statement with an assertion that the measure would not assure better pictures.

"I cannot get very much interested in writing an anti-trust statute applying to only one industry or in any trade practice agreement that applies to only one industry," Senator White interrupted. "But I am very much interested in the moral question.

NEELY CITES SALARY, BUT NOT TAXES

Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely on Tuesday caused a crisp exchange at Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee block booking bill hearings in Washington when he referred to recent publication of a salary of more than $1,000,000 for Louis B. Mayer, vice president of Loew's and MGM, which, he said, was more than was paid the 96 members of the Senate.

Charles C. Pettijohn, heading the majors' counsel in opposition to the bill, reminded the Senator and his colleagues that "about 90 per cent of the largest salaries and incomes was returned to federal and state governments by taxation."

Editor's Note: Mr. Mayer's salary of $1,296,503 was subject to some $881,724 in federal and state taxes (see page 44) which was $881,724 more in taxes than the 96 Senators paid put together.

Standards and Profits

"If this legislation was to raise the standard of pictures, I could get tremendously interested in this bill, but that is the only appeal the legislation makes to me at all. Statistics indicate that whatever selectivity there is in the exhibitors, they are selecting the pictures which have the most box office appeal. If there is monopoly and if there is complaint, it should be to the Department of Justice, and we have a Federal Trade Commission to deal with codes. I feel like relegating the whole matter, so far as those phases are concerned, to the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission."

"This whole business is predicated upon the profit," Chairman Smith interjected. "They cannot go on making pictures that do not sell, that is fundamental; and what, in your opinion, Senator, would be the moral uplift if you leave it to the exhibitor to select and he selected the wholly moral pictures and nobody came to see them?"

On the whole, Mr. Schaefer told the subcommittee, exhibitors do not buy a producer's entire output. In the 1937-'38 season, he said, only 32 per cent of the contracts called for his company's entire output of 48 films; 11 per cent took from 40 to 47 pictures and 57 per cent took less than 40 pictures. Cancellations amounted to $976,425 in value out of the total (undisclosed) flat rentals.

Continuing his attack on the bill Tuesday, Mr. Schaefer discussed charges made last week by Allied witnesses, explaining how Texas exhibitors to whom Col. Cole had referred found themselves with surplus product by the acquisition of new houses and how the Varsity, Dallas, which Col. Cole had said could not get "Little Women," bought not only that film but some 30 others.

Mr. Schaefer also denied charges that his company would not sell "Snow White" except in block, and asserted that any exhibitor could get the picture without taking any others.

Senator Neely at this point interjected that he had received complaints from two West Virginia exhibitors of their inability to get the picture, and Mr. Schaefer explained that, in one instance, the exhibitor wanted the picture alone but a competitor offered to take it with a block.

"In a competitive situation where a man says 'I will buy your 41 pictures and also "Snow White,"'" Mr. Schaefer retorted, "is it good business for me to sell 'Snow White' and my 41 or to say 'I will sell you "Snow White" but the other fellow has to take my 41'?"

Both cases, however, he added, were satisfactorily adjusted.

Referring to the testimony of Nathan Yamins that United Artists sold selectively, Mr. Schaefer, formerly head of that organization, asserted U.A. would have more difficulty in living under the Neely bill than any other company and that it has always sold its Goldwyn pictures in blocks and now sells practically all its films that way.

Yamins and Competition

Paying his respects to Mr. Yamins' situation in Fall River, the witness declared the Allied exhibitor only now, after many years, is facing a break in the monopoly he has had, and charged that he made every effort to influence the city authorities to refuse a building permit and operating license for a new house now under construction by local interests.

He also reverted to the Allied witness's claim that there are 160 producers in Hollywood who could turn out pictures under the Neely bill if the majors did not, and said that those producers are in the employ of the major companies. His added comment that they were paid very high salaries elicited from Senator Neely the remark that salary figures recently published disclosed that one film executive received more than all 96 members of the Senate.

"I'm going to join them," Chairman Smith interjected.

Can't Legislate Quality

"You cannot legislate quality into product," Mr. Schaefer warned the subcommittee as he concluded.

"You are dealing with a manufacturer, and attempting to put restrictions on that manufacturer, but leaving the exhibitor unshackled."

The industry does not believe itself privileged and not subject to "reasonable and wise" regulation, he said, but does feel that it should not be classed as a public utility or railroad. Not all pictures produced are good, he admitted, but "there are more good pictures made than poor ones," and the major companies are constantly endeavoring to improve their quality.

As evidence of the extent of this effort, Mr. Schaefer told the committee that RKO has spent $500,000 for the rights to "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The American Way" and is prepared to spend up to $3,000,000 on the production of the pictures. It is also planned to promote "Ivanhoe" at a probable cost of $1,000,000.

"I believe every worth-while book or classic ever written has been made into a motion picture," he said. If there are some that have not been filmed, they will be undertaken if the civic groups will submit a list, he added.

Mr. Schaefer called the subcommittee's attention to the fact that all of the pictures complained of by the civic groups have been passed by the state boards.

Increased selling costs which would follow enactment of the bill would put some independent exhibitors out of business and would require higher theatre admission prices at all theatres, Mr. Schaefer told members of the subcommittee. He said that it would be extremely difficult for producing and distributing companies to comply with the provisions of the bill without increasing costs to exhibitors and the public. In its basically hampering effect on the industry because of its "impractical and restrictive provisions," it is "fundamentally more vicious and offers a far greater threat to prosperity of the industry" than all of the legislation and restrictive provisions operating against American firms in foreign markets, he said.

Mr. Schaefer pointed out that under the present system approximately seven features a week are shown in 400 cities in the United States, providing plenty of leeway for community film selection and patronage. He said that every worthwhile film is eventually shown in as many as 10,000 or 11,000 theatres in this country, and that the 6,000 or 7,000 remaining theatres are eliminated by competitive considerations from showing the same films. "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" has had 9,000 bookings to date, he said.

Use of Cancellation Privilege

He related that there is no evidence to show that the exhibitor uses his cancellation privilege to eliminate from his programs pictures of questionable moral content. He pointed out that independently made pictures such as "Ecstasy," "Birth of a Baby," "Goona Goona" and "Nudist Camp". were sold singly by their distributors.

Redeeming his promise to submit actual figures to prove the contention that exhibitors are not forced to take any company's full output, Mr. Pettijohn laid before the committee tables showing the actual number of contracts secured for each picture produced by six companies during the 1937-38 season, explaining that the other companies were not yet able to produce such an analysis.

Contesting the claim of proponents of the bill that, under it, only the best and cleanest pictures would play, Mr. Pettijohn turned to statistics for 1933-'34 to show that the most popular films in that season were those of Mae West and the late Will Rogers, the former long an example of the undesirable in celluloid and the latter admittedly among the cleanest pictures ever produced. At the low end of the list, he said, were such desirable pictures as "The Constant Nymph" and "The Good Companions."

Variations in Contracts

Mr. Pettijohn's tables for the current year showed that one company had a picture with over 13,000 contracts and another with less than 4,000. The top and bottom pictures in the output of each of the six companies were as follows: Columbia, 10,298 for "Theodora Goes Wild" and 2,006 for "The Beloved Vagabond"; M-G-M, 10,873 for "Navy Blue and Gold" and 5,455 for "The Chaser"; Paramount, 13,200 for "Wells Fargo" and 3,947 for "Love on Toast"; RKO, 9,567 for "Stage Door" and 845 for "The Rat"; Twentieth Century-Fox, 12,214 for "In Old Chicago" and 3,561 for "Dinner at the Ritz"; Universal, 10,569 for "Three Smart Girls" and 2,315 for "Four Days' Wonder."

Possible indications of improvement in public taste are seen in the fact that, while the first two Mae West pictures had no cancellations her last film was rejected by 140 exhibitors, Mr. Pettijohn told the subcommittee.

20th-FOX STATES ITS POLICY

Twentieth Century-Fox, in a statement of policy on product, this week outlined for exhibitor customers the literary properties from which it will make up its 52 features for 1939-40, also the talent to be used therein. "These ingredients," plus other reasons, it was said, "do not make so-called blind buying quite as blind as some would make you believe."

The "other reasons" cited included: "The company's production record for the past four years;" "Ability to buy our share of additional talent in the open market;" "Purchase of other timely books or stage plays offered on the market which may be superior or more timely;" "The incentive to continue to operate and conduct a successful and constantly growing company;" "The mutual necessity of making product that will produce a profit for ourselves" and customers.

The statement, signed by Sidney Kent, president; Darryl Zanuck, vice president in charge of production, and Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, was frank in its admission that a certain percentage of the literary properties listed will fail to develop because, "as always, in final form, they will not reach expectations and must be replaced or dropped."

"Actually, exhibitors have a variety of ways to get out of playing a picture. By one or more of these methods, it is quite obvious that most theatres do get out of playing certain pictures of every company, otherwise every picture from the same company in the same year would play the same number of accounts."

Submitting a list of films receiving fewer than 20 cancellations or rejections and a contrasting list of pictures which received the most refusals topped by "Music for Madame," with 5,873, Mr. Pettijohn pointed out that the only apparent factor in an exhibitor's decision as to whether to take or reject a film is boxoffice appeal.

"If we do away with block selling, then the censor or the man who assumes to cater to the public taste becomes the arbiter of the fate of the picture," Senator Smith suggested. "Do you mean to tell me that they refused to exhibit some of these pictures?"

Classics Canceled

"Yes," Mr. Pettijohn rejoined, "I gave you the list to show that some of the pictures that have been criticized at this hearing have had very few cancellations. We have tried to bring to the screen worth while things, and those things have been cancelled, not so much in recent years as in the past. My purpose is to show what we are up against in making these classics. If they were not included in wholesale groups, we probably would not sell anybody."

Mr. Pettijohn referred to the English law and submitted for the record a transcript of a discussion in Parliament last month. "Don't let anyone tell that these English gentlemen are interested in anything but trade and commerce in motion pictures," he commented. Thirty per cent of the American companies' intake still comes from abroad, he pointed out.

Relating the lengthy and expensive preliminary work incident to the filming of "Alexander Graham Bell," to demonstrate the impossibility of living up to the synopsis requirements of the bill, Colonel Jason S. Joy, of Twentieth Century-Fox, declared that it would be impossible for that company to produce quality pictures, and the whole industry would degenerate into quickie production.

Section Three would have to be changed before the companies could operate, and, in that event, the bill would be useless.

Reverting to charges that only the best pictures are exported, Colonel Joy said that in the past two years only 11 of the 104 Twentieth Century-Fox features have not been superimposed for showing abroad.

Clubwomen Clash

Throwing down the gauntlet to Miss Catherine Lyford of Boston, who, she said, belonged to the groups that fought for censorship and has never interested herself in concrete efforts to improve pictures, Mrs. Frances Flagg of Newtonville, Mass., a member of a number of national women's organizations, declared the women of the country have no proper interest in the hearings "except as we seek for a settlement of these trade practices in order that we may have films which will increasingly portray America at its best."

Her organizations have never encountered any difficulty in dealing with exhibitors as a result of block booking, Mrs. Flagg told the subcommittee. At one time, she said, she tried to work with the proponents of the bill, but found them "so firmly fixed on a negative policy of criticism of block booking" that she withdrew.

Sees Employment Reduced

Kenneth Thompson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, testified Tuesday that the measure would cut employment. Ralph Block, former president of the guild, said the section aimed against blind selling was impracticable.

Last week's hearings started when Henry H. Atkinson, a leader in the Motion Picture Research Council, co-sponsors with Allied of the Neely bill, and spokesmen for Allied, rejected the industry's new trade practice program as a "cure-all" for that which they demand from the proposed bill.

S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, was one of the principal spokesmen last week for the majors in opposition, telling the committee that it would be impossible for producers to comply with that provision in the bill requiring submission of a synopsis in advance or release. He, too, said enactment would seriously increase film costs for exhibitors.

Later in the week Mr. Kent testified that foreign wars and recent international disturbances have cost American motion picture producers millions and millions of dollars, and that the proposed legislation would not accomplish its purpose and would cripple the industry "that has gone through the entire depression without one dollar of government help."

A STATEMENT OF POLICY AND AN ANNOUNCEMENT
OF 1939-40 PRODUCT
FROM 20TH CENTURY-FOX
FILM CORPORATION

Without hysteria, without braggadocio, without making rash promises that we can never hope to fulfill, Twentieth Century-Fox proudly presents its program for the season 1939-40.

The company will release fifty-two pictures.

In the following pages, we list titles, stars, players and directors that will be used to make up our 1939-40 program.

The literary properties outlined are the most important ever offered by this company. From this list will be selected the pictures that will make up our next year's group.

In spite of their great merit, a certain percentage of our story properties will fail to develop, because there always has been and always will be a percentage that, in final form, will not reach up to Studio expectations and must be replaced or dropped.

This is a situation which is inherent in the production of motion pictures.

These hazards, these changes, these heartbreaking disappointments are realized only by the man who has to deal day by day with the actual problems of production, but they exist in our industry and they cannot be eliminated.

As to the casts, we list that group of personalities under contract to this company and those already borrowed from the outside from whom these pictures will be cast.

Other deals of course will be made, other names will be added from time to time as they have been in past years; but we do not mention our hopes in many directions simply because these negotiations are not actually completed.

In asking you, our customers, to purchase this product, we call your attention to the following facts on which you can base your judgment:

1. The production record of this company for the past four years since the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation was formed.
2. The list of important box-office names under contract to this organization plus our ability to buy our share of additional talent in the open market.

3. The list of impressive and well-known properties from which our program will be made, plus the purchase of other timely books or stage plays offered on the market which may be superior to or more timely than some of those we have indicated in spite of their respective merit.
4. The incentive to continue to operate and conduct a successful and constantly growing company and to secure the continued good will and respect of the thousands of contented customers the world over which this company enjoys.
5. The mutual necessity of making product that will produce a profit for ourselves and for you, which can only be done in the future as in the past by producing the greatest number of money-making box-office attractions.

These ingredients and the reasons as stated above plus this company's well-known record do not make so-called blind buying quite as blind as some would make you believe.

To the exhibitor who has used 20th Century-Fox product these past four years, we pledge the utmost that is possible to deliver a continuous flow of well made and profit-making quality motion pictures, to the end that we can continue to deserve and secure that support and confidence that has made this company's record one of which we are all very proud.

SHORT PRODUCT

The policy of producing its own short subjects, under the supervision of Truman Talley, has evoked such a gratifying exhibitor response that 20th Century-Fox will continue it this season. Quality will again guide the planning of these one-reel featurettes.

6 LOWELL THOMAS' MAGIC CARPET OF MOVIETONE

Incomparably the finest in its field, narrated by the greatest voice of screen or radio. A subject whose breath-takingly beautiful photography and interesting subject matter has made it a "must" for all the better theatres.

6 ED THORGERSEN'S SPORTS REVIEWS

Already, in one season, an established success. Its unique "inside story" slant on outstanding sports activities accounts for its great popularity. Narrated by the man who knows . . . and knows how to tell it.

6 DRIBBLE-PUSS PARADES

The absurdities, peculiarities and laughs in life are shown on the screen while America's No. 1 funny man, Lew Lehr, convulses you with his cock-eyed comment.

4 ADVENTURES OF A NEWSREEL CAMERAMAN

To be individually produced—not compiled as in the past—thus heightening the amazing thrill and suspense that have made this series one of your surest-fire attractions.

4 VYVYAN DONNER FASHION FORECASTS

In TECHNICOLOR. A subject with sensational feminine appeal that has taken the men by storm. The tops in smartness, beauty and audience pull. With sparkling comment by Ilka Chase that would, in itself, mark this series as outstanding.

Meeting for Oklahoma Pool

by FREDERIC SCHOFIELD
in Oklahoma City

A steering committee of independent exhibitors now forming a buying pool in Oklahoma will meet in Oklahoma City Saturday to work out details of organization and to lay the groundwork for a general meeting to be held in Oklahoma City in May.

Those interested in the pool say the primary purpose is to be able to buy product at the same prices paid to exchanges by large theater circuits.

Independent exhibitors active in the pool and leaders of the movement have not been revealed publicly but it was learned this week that George Sumner, manager of the Sumner Theater Supply Company, Oklahoma City, is acting as liaison officer for the exhibitors, although, he himself, has no direct interest in exhibition.

Independent exhibitors in Oklahoma have been urged during the past few weeks to hold up buying of film product for the future commitments until the proposed buying pool organization meeting is held early in May. A silent buying strike has actually been in progress in several spots in Oklahoma according to exchange officials and other informants.

That educational leaders, Parent Teachers Association officials and state legislators have expressed a desire to help the buying pool program if it will make for better programs at theatres in the smaller towns, was also revealed.

The pool plan calls for a central office in Oklahoma City to be operated under a state manager who would negotiate for the purchase of product for all independent exhibitors paying dues of from $5 to $10 per month depending on the individual situation and number of theatres operated by the independent exhibitor.

The state would be divided into eight districts with a district manager, an exhibitor, elected by others from his district to represent them on buying trips to film row in Oklahoma City. The central office manager would negotiate for the purchase of product with film exchange bookers but exhibitors would sign their own contracts.

Sponsors of the group also are arranging a meeting with Department of Justice officials to hear exhibitor complaints to be held in Oklahoma City possibly at the same time an organization meeting is held next month.

Lee Balsly Resigns

Lee Balsly, ad sales manager at Twentieth Century-Fox, has resigned. He will be succeeded by Ed Hollander, who will have full charge of the operations of the ad sales department. Mr. Balsly will enter the theatre business with the R. R. Allison circuit in Cresson, Pa.

James MacFarland has joined Baird-Gaumont British to handle television exploitation. Mr. MacFarland at one time was publicity director for Fox Films, and later for the Rivoli Theatre in New York and the Radio City Music Hall. Subsequently he became publicity director for World Pictures.

National Decency Legion Classifies Six Pictures

Of six pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage and two were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Du Gamal, Du Fria" (Swedish), "The Night Riders," "Streets of New York," "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "A Man and His Wife" (Un Homme at Sa Femme) (French), "On Trial."

English GN Heads Here for Product

Grand National, Ltd., has completed three of the 10 pictures scheduled for production this year in England, according to Jeffrey Bernerd and Maurice J. Wilson, managing directors of the company, who arrived in New York last Thursday for conferences with E. W. Hammons, president of Grand National Pictures, Inc. Other than a distribution arrangement, Grand National of England has no connection with the American company.

The English company, in addition to its deal to distribute the American company's product for five years, may acquire some independently produced American films for distribution in England, as well as looking for American players for its production of "The Stars Look Down," the A. J. Cronin novel which the company has purchased for June production.

T. R. Williams, treasurer of Educational-Grand National, returned to New York Tuesday from the coast, where he had spent more than four months.

AMPA Elects

Slated for election at the meeting, Thursday, at the Hotel Astor, New York City, of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, were Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., as president; Vincent Trotta, vice-president; Herbert S. Berg, treasurer; Kenneth Clark, secretary.

Martin Starr was scheduled to be chosen as trustee, and Ralph Rolan, Eli Sugarman, Lou Lifton, James Cron, and Mr. Starr for the board of governors.

Guests at the meeting were to be Leon G. Turrou, former "G-Man" and technical advisor for Warner Brothers' current release, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," and Joe Penner.

Arnold Heads Cameramen

John Arnold has been re-elected to the presidency of the American Society of Cinematographers, in Hollywood, a post he has held for more than seven years.

Buys "Son of Sheik" Reissue

United States and Canadian 16 millimeter distribution rights to the revival of "Son of the Sheik" have been acquired by Nu Art Films, New York.

Finish Yiddish Film

Shooting on "My Son," an all-Yiddish feature, has been completed at Palisades, N. J., under the direction of Joe Seiden, with J. Burgi Contner at the camera. The picture will be distributed by Cinema Service Corporation.

National Theatres Campaign Starts

The National Theatres drive, known as Spyros Skouras Showmanship Campaign, got underway last Saturday and will run for 13 weeks, with Arch Bowles, northern California division manager, as field marshal. A total of 165 prizes aggregating $25,000 will be awarded to district and house managers, as well as accounting and maintenance departments in the field and bookers.

An elaborate plan has been worked out by a committee headed by J. J. Sullivan, Fox West Coast film buyer, and including W. T. Powers, Ed Zabel, Sumner Gambee and Harry C. Cox. This committee, in New York, will be the final judges.

Mr. Bowles will devote all his time to the campaign and has set up headquarters in Los Angeles. Charles Skouras, Fox West Coast head, will supervise Mr. Bowles' San Francisco territory for the campaign's duration. Mr. Bowles has completed a series of divisional meetings with Andy Krappman and Mr. Zabel, and will make another tour in about two weeks.

Patriotic exploitation is part of the campaign, with theatres including Americanism themes in copy, decorations, lobby displays, etc.

The total of the awards is $10,000 more than in the last campaign. Theatres are divided into classes, with individual prizes ranging from $1,000 to $50. The six divisional publications have been suspended for the period, and Mr. Bowles will publish a campaign periodical at Los Angeles.

Film buyers at the home office have been named sponsors of their divisions.

Television in theatres eventually will take the place of the bottom feature of double bills, Charles Skouras, Fox West Coast head, said Tuesday night in a talk at a homecoming dinner given him at the Elks Temple in Los Angeles.

Will Rogers Short Subject Completed

The short subject "For Auld Lang Syne," for Will Rogers National Theatre week, beginning April 20th, has been completed, Major L. E. Thompson, RKO executive and chairman of the drive, said this week. The stars include Spencer Tracy, Deanna Durbin, Lowell Thomas, Robert E. Sherwood and Raymond Massey, author and star respectively of the current Broadway stage success "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

The film was produced with the cooperation of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Radio, Universal and Warner Brothers. The sequences taken in Hollywood were supervised by Harold Rodner of Warners. The sequences taken in New York were supervised by A. P. Waxman, director of the Campaign for the Will Rogers Memorial Commission.

The rawstock was contributed by Eastman-Kodak (J. E. Brulatour); DuPont-Pathe, and Filmex-Gevaert.

National Screen Service will handle the shipping of all prints, which will be provided free to all exhibitors who enroll their theatres to take collections from the audience.

WANGER, IRKED, QUITS 'FILMS FOR DEMOCRACY'

Herald's Unanswered Challenge on Organization's Stand on Communism Draws a Reaction

Walter Wanger, until recently Hollywood's most conspicuous exponent of Films for Democracy, has in a curious semi-secrecy sent a letter to the New York office of that organization saying "I must ask that my name no longer be used in connection with your organization."

Officially, Films for Democracy admits receipt of Mr. Wanger's letter and asserts, despite its explicit wording, that it is not regarded "as a letter of resignation." A reply, not made available for publication, has been forwarded to Mr. Wanger, it is said.

Mr. Wanger's letter, withdrawing his name, be that resignation or not, conveys it as his decision because Films for Democracy has "not met the challenge to make a public disavowal of possible Communist sympathies or compromise."

While it is not so stated in Mr. Wanger's letter, "the challenge" asking a public declaration was presented in Motion Picture Herald, reiteratively—December 24, December 31, January 7 and January 14. It said:

"INFORMATION, PLEASE!

IN sequel to editorial expressions presented in Motion Picture Herald have come certain criticisms of what has been deemed the attitude of this publication toward "Films for Democracy," which some contend is a constructive, patriotic movement for the preservation of the traditional democracy of the United States of America.

Motion Picture Herald therefore considers it appropriate to ask "Films for Democracy" clearly, officially and publicly to declare its position with respect to:

1—The political theories commonly known as Communism.

2—The political theories commonly known as Fascism.

3—The political theories characteristic of both Communism and Fascism, and commonly described as Totalitarianism, under which the state reserves to itself complete rights over the life, liberty and pursuits of the individual, denying to the individual those rights held under the traditional American system as a natural and inalienable heritage.

MARTIN QUIGLEY."

No reply, no response, was had.

Officially and in public Films for Democracy did not choose to answer. Privately and without official commitment persons whose names had been identified with the organization were reluctantly willing to say that it was held in some quarters that the proportion of Red Communist adherents was such that no declaration against their cause could be afforded, even if desired.

Meanwhile investigations of the membership and adherents by various official, journalistic and socially minded organizations returned reports, confidential to their executives, which made the "no response" stand understandable even as indicated.

Under the title of "What Do You Mean—Democracy?" in Motion Picture Herald of January 14, Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher, discussed the situation in the light of the Films for Democracy's announced program of using the audiences of the entertainment screen "without their knowledge or consent, as guinea pigs for the experiments of political theorists." He also remarked upon "Indications that the carefully disguised purposes contemplated the surreptitious use of the entertainment screen for the promotion of foreign ideologies destructive of and not in support of American democracy."

"This failure to reply," observed Mr. Quigley, "together with various collaterals, is reasonably susceptible to the following interpretation:

"'Films for Democracy' is unable to repudiate all foreign political philosophies, including Communism, which are a threat to American institutions, because its real purposes are sympathetic in whole or in part to Communism and because it is from that sector it expects its support."

"In the continued absence of any such categorical denial the industry and interested persons generally will remain in little doubt about where 'Films for Democracy' stands," Mr. Quigley concluded.

About a month ago it was reported that Mr. Wanger had become dissatisfied with the indications concerning Films for Democracy, and two weeks ago it was reported that he had sent to the organization a letter of resignation. This, upon inquiry, he did not deny, nor did he confirm.

Subsequently, however, in the issue of April 4, in a feature column conducted by Mr. Morton Thompson in the Hollywood Citizen-News appeared a letter, signed by Mr. Wanger, discussing extremely relevant matters but designated in its introduction by Mr. Thompson as "directed to a well-known organization which solicited his (Mr. Wanger's) sponsorship."

In New York, Motion Picture Herald made inquiry of Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, new president of Films for Democracy, who said: "I have heard nothing of it." Samuel J. Rodman, executive secretary, had, however, heard of it, but expressed surprise that the letter had been published.

"We do not regard Mr. Wanger's letter as a letter of resignation," Mr. Rodman observed. "We have answered his letter."

In his letter, as published, Mr. Wanger remarked: "I joined the organization in the belief that it was dedicated to the democratic function which its name defines. . . . I have been disturbed by the failure of your organization to make clear its position with reference to Nazism, Fascism AND Communism. . . .

"I can see no excuse for intellectual straddling on this point. There can be no compromise between Fascism and Democracy. There can be no compromise between Communism and Democracy. There can, in short, be no compromise between Dictatorship and Democracy and I am on the side of Democracy. . . .

"For these reasons, and because your organization has not met the challenge to make a public disavowal of possible Communist sympathies or compromise, I must ask that my name not longer be used in connection with your organization. . . ."

Dr. Fairchild Heads Films for Democracy

Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, professor of sociology at New York University, and president of the Town Hall Club, New York, has been elected president of Films for Democracy. Gardner Jackson of Labor's Non-Partisan League was named vice-president, Professor Robert K. Speer of New York University, treasurer, and Samuel J. Rodman, secretary and executive director.

An executive committee also was elected and is composed of Dr. Ned H. Dearborn, dean of the division of education at New York University; Dudley Nichols, former president of the Screen Writers Guild; Professor Hadley Cantril of Princeton; Mark Starr, educational director of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Clyde Miller, director of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis; A. J. Isserman, member of the executive board of Consumers Union; Mrs. Joseph L. White of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association; Louise Pearson of the Ethical Culture Society, and Helen Hall of the Henry Street Settlement House.

Sue to Bar 20th-Fox from Filming "Young Mr. Lincoln"

Robert Sherwood and the Playwrights' Company, author and producer, respectively, of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," have filed suit in New York supreme court to restrain Twentieth Century-Fox from filming "Young Mr. Lincoln," on the ground that "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" has revived public interest in the portrayal of the life of Lincoln as a young man, and has created, through Raymond Massey's portrayal, a close link in the public mind with the character at their own expense. Twentieth Century-Fox had purchased its title from a play now being produced in stock. "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The American Way" will cost RKO approximately $500,000 if both are purchased. The latter was bought last Friday, with the deal for the former not yet set.

Herbert Wilcox's first American production for RKO will be on the life of Edith Cavell, England's famous war nurse. With March having been designated as "studio appreciation month," the month preceding June 2nd, last day of the George Schaefer Drive, has been dedicated by the western and southern division offices to their respective district managers. The Detroit exchange is holding first place in the drive, with the New York office second.

Clements Giglio has leased the Irving Place theatre, New York, for the showing of Italian films.

REPUBLIC'S "CONQUEST" TO BROADWAY CAPITOL

Republic's "Man of Conquest" was booked Tuesday to play the Capitol on Broadway, Loew's key house of the country—the "home of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures."

Opening Thursday, April 27th, Republic's film story of Sam Houston of Texas will be the first independent film in the memory of Capitol attaches to play the theatre in its 19 years. Usually booked solid with its own MGM releases, Loew's "flagship" rarely even plays product of others of the "Big Eight." Only two "outside" majors have played there in the past two years. One was "Call It a Day," Warners, playing in May, 1937, the other, "I Am the Law," from Columbia, in September, 1938.

Too, "Conquest" is one of the first independents to play any Broadway "de luxe" house.

New York's Music Hall said it had the greatest Easter week business since "Cavalcade" in 1933 with RKO's Astaire-Rogers "Story of Vernon and Irene Castle."

New York's Strand reported the greatest single day's business in its history on Tuesday with "Dodge City," with arrangements made for at least a third week holdover. In 27 key cities opening day receipts were reported topping the company's biggest grosses for two years.

New York's Roxy counted 162,231 admissions in the first ten days of Fox's "Alexander Graham Bell."

Acting on a suggestion made by Charles E. McCarthy's Fox home office publicity department, Sol Bloom, U. S. Congressman from New York, disclosed he would ask Congress to honor Bell with a Congressional Medal for his inventions in telephony.

Roosevelt Sails with Print of "Heights"

James Roosevelt, vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., sailed for England on the "Queen Mary" last Friday, with a print of "Wuthering Heights," the new Goldwyn film which had its world premiere at the Lincoln Theatre in Miami. He told ship news reporters that he hoped to stay in the film business a long while.

New York opening of "Wuthering Heights" was shifted from the Music Hall to the Rivoli, starting Thursday. A special screening for Government officials was held in Washington last week, with William Wyler, director, acting as host.

Phil Smith, chairman of the board of the Friars Club, has set April 28th as the date for the Boston Friars Frolic and Motion Picture Ball, in the Boston Garden. The proceeds will go to supply film equipment for hospitals.

INDEPENDENTS ATTACK MAJORS IN CANADA

Nova Scotians Charge Discrimination by Famous Players, Want Exchanges Regulated

by C. R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

Attacks by independent exhibitor interests against "aggressions" by the majors, as involving trade practices, have spread to Canada. N. L. Nathanson's Famous Players Canadian Corporation, the biggest major in the Dominion, has been made the target of independents, and charges are sizzling back and forth in the Nova Scotia legislature over a bill to license and regulate film exchanges.

Would Submit Terms

The measure would give the Provincial Board of Censors power to require exchanges to submit information concerning distribution of films and the terms on which they have been distributed. They also would be required to have offices and agents in Halifax.

Malcolm Patterson (Liberal Cape Breton West), fired the first gun for the independents when he introduced the bill, by hotly decrying that "Nova Scotia theatre-goers are being compelled to pay into a racket being carried on in Ontario." Basing his statements on "information" from independents, he went on: "A concern known as Famous Players is carrying on business in this province. It is a theatre-operating company with a manager named Nathanson in Toronto. This concern owns a great many theatres throughout Canada. Nathanson is also head of distributing companies which own and control practically all the important pictures that are shown in this province. In conjunction with the Nathanson distributors they are today carrying on a system of discrimination against the smaller theatres and if it continues, the small theatres will have to close and a monopoly will be created."

After citing several cases, Mr. Patterson said: "It seems to me that people of this province who patronize the different theatres are compelled indirectly to contribute to Famous Players. They pay a legitimate price plus a tax paid to Nathanson.

"We can shut off this racket and prevent this man Nathanson and Famous Players from taxing the people of this province who attend theatres."

Fitzgibbons Replies

In rebuttal to this, Famous Players, through vice-president J. J. Fitzgibbons, in Toronto issued a statement that the charges were ridiculous. "Anyone who has studied the theatre business knows these things are ridiculous," he said. "There is no foundation for saying we aren't running our business in Nova Scotia according to regular business practice. Certainly it can't be said, so far as I know, that we are competing unfairly in Nova Scotia according to regular theatre operation practice."

With this exchange of remarks the matter cooled off for a few days until the bill was sent into committee. Then both sides stepped in with their attorneys, and the fur flew.

Frank M. Covert, representing Famous Players and Twentieth Century-Fox, tried to halt the bill by declaring it outside the Legislature's jurisdiction.

Gordon Fogo, acting for 20 independent exhibitors, retorted that the administration did have power to enact such a measure. Mr. Fogo went on to charge, "discrimination of the worst kind is rampant in this industry. Certain exhibitors are able to get programs at early dates while others cannot because they can't pay the tribute demanded. "An examination of the film business," he insisted, would show "the situation is a seller's market."

Mr. Fogo suggested an amendment whereby the independent owner would be relieved of contracting for more films than he required.

Calls Choice Restricted

Ed Lynn, a Sydney, N. S., independent, took the stand to tell the committee there were about 400 films made each year and that by the time a Famous Players-owned theatre in his territory had selected some 250, his own choice was "very severely restricted."

"I claim," said Mr. Lynn, "that this constitutes a direct effort to drive me out of business and to set up a Famous Players monopoly in the Sydney area."

J. T. MacQuarrie, of Halifax, acting for another theatre, dug out the findings of the White Commission of 1931 and read that "a combine exists in the motion picture industry of Canada within the meaning of the Combines Investigation Act."

In defense of Famous Players, Mr. Covert told the parliamentary group that the corporation was not a film distributor but a body of exhibitors. As such they had "no power to withhold films from exhibitors nor to exact contributions from them." The corporation, he said, did not contract for more pictures than it desired.

Col. John Cooper, of Toronto, representing the motion picture distributors, declared the exchanges were independent. "Every exchange is working for its own balance sheet. They are not interlocked."

S. S. Van Dine Dead

"S. S. Van Dine," 51, widely known writer of detective stories and creator of the fictional detective "Philo Vance," died in New York April 11th. His real name was Willard Huntington Wright. He was a native of Charlottesville, Va., and was educated at Pomona and Vincent colleges, in California, and at Harvard. He became literary editor of the Los Angeles Times, in 1907, and was a prolific author of articles and books on art, philosophy and literature.

His first mystery story, "The Benson Case" was published in 1926. There followed "The Canary Murder Case," "The Greene Murder Case," "The Scarab Murder Case," and others. Paramount bought his stories and hired him on the writing staff; he then wrote stories which were filmed by First National and Warner Brothers, MGM and Republic.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A MOTION picture that is writing its own plot is being made on Devil's Island, the old French penal settlement and in the other prisons which dot French Guiana—to be offered as a motion picture record actually taken on the spot showing life among the 6,000 convicts who are French Guiana's sole industry.

Writing all the way from Cayenne, French Guiana, to New York's Herald Tribune, Edward Adolphe discloses that Cine Reportage, a sort of French March of Time, is producing the film, and that P. A. Martineau, Paris journalist, and Raymond Mejat, cameraman, are on the spot as the crew.

It is Martineau's idea to pick a likely looking convict, trace his history to the arrival at the penal colony and then on through all the prison camps there which in normal course he would inhabit, carrying him to a logical climax—freedom by legal process or death among the sharks in an escape attempt.

The climax will depend principally on the convict "hero" himself. Obviously, the producers cannot wait for a man to swin out among the sharks or win his freedom through legal writs. So Martineau will try to repeat a technique which, he says, has won legal freedom for three French prisoners already. He will film the story (as in the other three cases) of a convict who appears to have been condemned by mistake, and will attempt to win the man's liberty through the film's eloquence as a legal brief. A professional script writer could not improve on that technique.

You're Telling Us Dept.: (From a newspaper interview with Leopold Stokowski, the movie actor): "The movies can tell so much that the theatre or opera stage cannot. They are the greatest art form man has created. In Wagner's 'Die Walkuere,' for instance, there are strange creatures, part human, part horse. The stage could never produce them, but the movies can do it without the least trouble."

Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, got himself into hot water, as was widely publicized last week, for telling reporters about England's naval preparations in anticipation of an attack. Let's bring back the good old days,
When picture shows were picture shows,
And not just dens for Bingo!

When just one Feature, Shorts and News
Were what the public wanted,
And not a Screeno screech was heard,
In theatres closed and haunted.

Columbia says its new French importation only has "mystery, action, suspense, drama, horror, tragedy, power, romance, comedy, intrigue and adventure."

CONSPICUOUS in the outdoor summer life of the southeastern United States is a large green beetle, known locally as the June bug.

Like Br'er Rabbit and Br'er Fox, the June bug and its associated life forms have been celebrated in regional lore, and the expression "like a duck on a June bug" has long been the favorite provincial simile for a sudden show of energetic enterprise.

Vivien Leigh, star of "Gone With the Wind," who hails from England, uses the above phrase many times in the story film of the Civil War South, now being produced in Hollywood by David O. Selznick.

When the picture started, Miss Leigh told a Georgia newspaper correspondent she would like to meet a June bug personally. He relayed her plea, and the first thing she knew, green beetles began to arrive at her bungalow at the Selznick studio in Culver City.

They came by mail, mostly, some in envelopes, and some neatly packed in cotton. One pair, from an Atlanta entomologist, was transfixed with collector's pins and neatly labeled with the proper scientific description, "Cotinus nitida," and the place and date of collection.

When G. R. Gorton, the deputy agricultural commissioner of Los Angeles county, heard about Miss Leigh's June bugs, he manifested official concern.

In fact, he sent a field inspector, J. H. Caldwell, with a microscope and a tin box to prowl around the Selznick lot seeking any of the green beetles that might have escaped from Miss Leigh's mail.

Said Gorton, "it's against the law to send live June bugs in the mail."

Gorton said he didn't mind how many dead beetles were sent to Miss Leigh, and he manifested only an academic interest in the varnished June bugs mounted on pins that were donated for use as novelty costume jewelry.

"It's the live ones that may cause trouble," he said, "unless, of course, they should happen to encounter a duck."

Goldwyn vs. United Artists Suit Move Brings Animated Exchange of Statements from Opposing Counsel

Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., last Thursday afternoon filed notice of voluntary dismissal of the pending breach of contract suit against United Artists in the United States district court in New York.

Tuesday morning, a similar suit asking for a declaratory judgment in order that Goldwyn may terminate his existing contract to produce exclusively for UA, was filed by Goldwyn, through Max D. Steuer, counsel, in United States district court at Wilmington, Del.

Immediately following the Delaware move, Mr. Steuer issued the following statement to the press from his offices at 11 Broadway, New York:

"The Goldwyn company did not commence an action against the United Artists for the purpose of enforcing any claim. Samuel Goldwyn and the Goldwyn company have an enormous investment in United Artists. The company invests in the neighborhood of ten million dollars a year in moving pictures which it contracted to distribute through United Artists. Naturally, neither Mr. Goldwyn nor the corporation has any desire to destroy or injure United Artists. On the contrary, their desire is to keep it on the high plane on which it was organized. The company's contract with United Artists has years to run. United Artists made a definite agreement that similar contracts which it made with its other stockholders as producers would not in any manner be altered. It appears that they have been materially altered to the detriment of United Artists and the Goldwyn corporation. The internal management has completely changed its policy. It was organized to distribute pictures made by companies of the first magnitude or by artists of the first rank. Its written contracts and all its advertisements clearly so indicate. Naturally, these highest ranking producers and artists of the first magnitude were interested in having each of their pictures sold and distributed solely and only on the merits of each picture and not coupled with any others. That policy was implicit in every contract that was made.

Calls Aim to Speed Action

"The Goldwyn company, tied for a number of years to come to United Artists as its sole distributor, is affected by this change of policy and United Artists is seriously affected thereby. Under the circumstances, the Goldwyn corporation could have taken matters into its own hands and proceeded on the theory that its contract was breached and could have declined to distribute its pictures through United Artists. That would have been seriously injurious to United Artists, and the Goldwyn corporation, by suing United Artists, would actually have been suing itself and reducing its own property value. It, therefore, determined to bring a suit, not seeking money damage or any other kind of advantage, but asking the court to declare whether or not United Artists had breached its agreement. If the court declared no, then United Artists would not be injured by the determination. If the court declared yes, the stockholders would all know precisely what the situation is, and it could readily be amended without great injury to anyone. It seemed to the Goldwyn corporation that there should be a determination at the earliest possible moment; that United Artists would desire it so, and it certainly wanted it so. It instituted the action in the New York supreme court. An action such as this belongs on the equity calendar. The equity calendar in the supreme court is right up to date. The case could already have been on the day calendar for disposition. For some reason, with which the Goldwyn corporation has no familiarity, United Artists instituted a proceeding to remove the case for trial to the United States district court for the southern district of New York. Under the rules, after the case is removed, the defendant (United Artists) has thirty days within which to file the record. It was obvious that it had determined to wait for the full thirty days. It had not filed its record. Even after filing the record, it has five days to answer and thereafter could have procured an extension of time within which to answer and likewise to serve an amended answer. Unfortunately, the equity calendar in the United States district court for the southern district of New York is more than a year behind. The case could certainly not have been reached within a year. Since the United Artists preferred to have the case determined in the federal court, and in order to get a speedy determination, the Goldwyn corporation moved to dismiss its own suit and has commenced an action in the United States district court for the District of Delaware where the equity calendar is almost up to date and where it is hoped that a trial will be had in the latter part of June or early part of July but most certainly not later than September.

SO NOW IT IS UP TO MANAGER

Following protests recently by five Cincinnati women to the city council that their view of the screen at a theatre had been obstructed by high feminine headgear, Vice-Mayor Nicholas Klein sent letters to all Cincinnati managers calling attention to Section 13411 of the Ohio Code, which makes it a misdemeanor to permit a patron to wear a hat in the theatre.

Calls Interests Mutual

"There is no feeling upon the part of the Goldwyn corporation or Mr. Goldwyn antagonistic to United Artists. Quite the contrary, their interests lie with United Artists. There is opposition on the part of the Goldwyn corporation and Mr. Goldwyn to the present internal management because of the abandonment of the idealistic policies to carry out which United Artists was formed. Abuse had existed in the distribution of pictures. These abuses United Artists pledged itself not to practice and if possible to completely eradicate them from the industry. It is deemed that by this action, taken by the Goldwyn corporation, that result may be achieved for the industry but particularly for United Artists."

On Wednesday afternoon, the following statement answering Mr. Steuer's remarks was issued by Charles Schwartz, of Schwartz and Frohlich, New York lawyers, of 1450 Broadway, acting as co-counsel for United Artists:

"In yesterday's statement issued on Goldwyn's behalf his counsel asserts that the present litigation was commenced because in Goldwyn's opinion the internal management has completely changed its policy of distributing pictures only of first magnitude and selling each picture on its own merit.

"The substance of the complaint filed in the action, however, does not even remotely jibe with this statement. The complaint asks the court to declare that Goldwyn is entitled to cancel his contract because of alleged breaches by United Artists in permitting Korda and Fairbanks to do certain acts. Not a word of objection to any change in management policy is contained therein.

Declares Goldwyn Errs

"Goldwyn's grievance appears to be that pictures contracted for United Artists' distribution are not in his opinion comparable with his own pictures. Goldwyn is in complete error. We unequivocally state that the pictures to be produced by David O. Selznick, an admittedly outstanding producer, for distribution by our company will be as heretofore of a quality and standard second to none, not even second to Goldwyn. We likewise add that the picture to be furnished by Charles Chaplin will be at least as good as Goldwyn's and probably a good deal better, viewed from any standpoint. We also believe that the pictures of Korda and our other producers, including those who have recently joined our ranks, will likewise be comparable with Goldwyn product.

"The trouble with Goldwyn is that he seems to think that he is the only pebble on the beach. Much to his chagrin, the other stockholders and the management do not agree with this thought.

"Goldwyn's complaint regarding the company's selling policy has no foundation. Every contract taken on his product was and is first approved by his representative before acceptance.

Says Complaint Lacks Basis

"Goldwyn's counsel states that if the court decides against Goldwyn no one will be injured, and if the court finds in his favor, then the stockholders will all know precisely what the situation is. All the other stockholders know now precisely what the situation is, and the outcome of the lawsuit will not give them any additional enlightenment.

"The truth is that Goldwyn is unhappy because he cannot secure a voting trust with himself as sole voting trustee, so that he can thereby completely dominate and control the company's destiny.

Calls Others Determined

"Regardless of the outcome of the lawsuit, the other stockholders are determined that at no time will they permit him to have any voice in the management and operation of the company other than that to which he is entitled as a 1/5 owner—no more, no less. The sooner Goldwyn gets that through his head and stops fuming and fussing, the sooner will he have peace of mind."

The Goldwyn action against United Artists was started on March 1st, first in the New York Supreme Court, but the action was shifted to United States district court on March 16th, on petition of United Artists, on the grounds of "diversity of citizenship," UA being a Delaware corporation.

FILM SALARIES REVEALED BY U. S.; PROTESTS LIMIT LISTS NEXT YEAR

Mayer Highest Paid by Any Corporation in 1937, House Committee Reports; March and Garbo Head Players

A motion picture executive headed the list of individuals paid the highest salaries by corporations in 1937, the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives announced this week in Washington, but the report did not add the information that taxes due the State and Federal Governments ranged from as high as approximately 60 per cent of the highest salary to about 12 per cent on $15,000, the lowest salary recorded.

In the 1,132-page report submitted to Congress, Louis B. Mayer of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was revealed as the most highly salaried person in the United States, with $1,296,503, while some 500 persons were shown to have been paid more than $15,000 by film companies in 1937.

Fredric March was the highest paid film star, receiving a total of $484,687 from two production companies for his services, while Greta Garbo led all women in the country in terms of salary, getting $472,602.

Forty Paid Over $200,000

Of the 63 persons listed as having earned more than $200,000, the earnings of 40 were accounted for by motion pictures, although Major Edward Bowes' $427,817 income stemmed primarily from radio, with the Major continuing as managing director of New York's Capitol theatre, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer controlled.

The high percentage of film salaries continued as the field narrowed down to the topmost brackets, with seven of the top 10 salaries paid in the motion picture field, and 15 of the top 20 coming from the same source.

Loew's, Inc., and its production affiliate, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, paid the three highest salaries in the nation. Louis B. Mayer received $1,161,753 from Loew's and $134,750 from MGM for the highest total of $1,296,505. Second on the country's list was J. Robert Rubin, who received $641,125 as vice-president and general counsel of Loew's, $60,131 as vice-president and secretary of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, and $53,000 as vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for a total of $754,254. Third was Nicholas M. Schenck, who was paid $489,602 as president of Loew's and $52,000 as president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for a total of $541,602. In all, Loew's and MGM paid more than 240 salaries exceeding $15,000.

Next Year's List Limited

As was the case last year, the revelations of the country's top earnings caused protests from many that it could serve no good, and, at the same time, gave no indication of the taxes paid by those in the higher brackets. Congress has now revised the law requiring the report, and next year's list will be limited to salaries of $75,000 and up.

There were 10 film persons receiving salaries of more than $300,000, compared to five in 1936; and 40 earning more than $200,000, as against the 21 in the preceding year.

A list of the film industry's stars and execu-

Estimated Net Salaries and Approximate Tax Payments

The shares of the Federal and State Governments in the 1937 salaries of motion picture executives and stars are indicated in the following table. In addition to an approximate computation of the taxes paid on the seven leading film salaries, the taxes are estimated for salaries ranging down to about $20,000, with cases chosen at random to show the tax for each $10,000 of salary.

In accordance with Federal procedure, the State tax is deducted from salaries before the Federal tax is computed. No attempt has been made to compute deductions or exemptions.

CARTOON, STORY IN FILM PROMOTION

The San Francisco Call-Bulletin, a Hearst evening newspaper, has been running for the last several weeks a special promotion on Saturdays on the outstanding motion picture opening of the week in that city. The promotion takes the form of a seven column cartoon by Bill O'Malley, and an accompanying lengthy article by James Chesnutt, a reporter. No favoritism, it is said, is shown in selections, with an effort being made to give each first run theatre a break on the layout, as they receive outstanding films.

Detroit Preparing For Variety Clubs

More than 100 Detroit showmen are making elaborate plans for the entertainment of representatives of all branches of the motion picture industry at the National Convention of Variety Clubs of America, to be held on April 27, 28 and 29 in the motor city. Under the auspices of Detroit Variety Club Tent No. 5, the three-day convention in Detroit will be a round of business and social activities for all who attend. Program plans are afoot to make this one of the outstanding affairs of its kind in the history of the organization.

The three-day visit of showmen will be climaxed by the annual banquet to be held Saturday night, April 29th, at the Book Cadillac Hotel. The invitation list includes public officials of state and national prominence, also top ranking executives of the motion picture industry and the motor industry.

The general convention committee includes John E. Flynn, chairman, E. C. Beatty, William Carlson, E. E. Kirchner, Frank J. Downey, David M. Idzal, George W. Trendle, Charles C. Perry, H. M. Richey and David Newman. In charge of the welcoming and reception is H. C. Merritt, while decorations will be in the hands of Elmer Kiehler, banquet reservations will be handled by Frank J. Downey, William Carlson heads the program committee, David M. Idzal, the entertainment committee, Harold Hobinson, transportation, and E. E. Kirchner has charge of finance and Charles C. Perry, speakers.

A list of nationally prominent guests invited by Mr. Flynn include Will H. Hays and C. C. Pettijohn of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Sidney Kent and Herman Wobber of Twentieth Century-Fox; Al Lichtman and W. F. Rodgers of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Barney Balaban and Neil Agnew of Paramount; Nate Blumberg and W. A. Scully of Universal; H. M. Warner and Gradwell Sears of Warner Brothers; Harry Cohn and A. Montague of Columbia; E. W. Hammons, Grand National; George Schafer and Jules Levy, RKO Radio; J. Meyer Schine, Louis W. Schine and George V. Lynch of Schine Theatres; A. J. Kearney of the Shea Circuit, Inc.; M. J. Kallett of Kallett Theatres; John A. Nolan, of Comerford Theatres; M. A. Shea, of Loew's Theatres, and Harry Kalmine, of Warner Brothers Theatres.

$25,000 for Refugees

W. A. Steffes, chief barker of the Twin City Variety Club, Minneapolis and St. Paul, has presented O. J. Arnold, head of the German refugee drive there, with a check for $25,000, the result of a two-month drive by Twin City theatremen.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Five Came Back

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

RKO-Radio has rounded up an exceptionally strong cast for "Five Came Back," which at mid-production bears the earmarks of developing into an unusually interesting picture.

Names available are Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, last seen in "The Saint Strikes Back" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles," Lucille Ball, Kent Taylor, John Carradine, now in "The Hound of the Baskervilles," "Captain Fury," Allen Jenkins seen in many Warner shows lately, Joseph Calleia, C. Aubrey Smith, Patric Knowles who was featured in "Robin Hood" and "Charge of the Light Brigade," Elizabeth Risdon and Dick Hogan.

A Robert Sisk production, "Five Came Back" is being directed by John Farrow, whose RKO-Radio credits include "The Saint Strikes Back" and "Sorority House."

The location is the Amazonian jungles. The theme deals with the plight of a group of people who are trapped there following an airplane accident. Only five can escape when the plane is repaired. Choosing the fortunate five brings about a gripping climax. While two romances develop, a quirk of fate makes an admitted anarchist and murderer the sole arbiter of the party's fate.

Release date: Not determined.

The Gorilla

(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Melodrama

This revival of Ralph Spence's stage play, which has been made as a picture a couple of times, will combine two kinds of entertainment, crazy comedy and chilling, thrilling melodrama. When presented before, "The Gorilla" majored in those elements that caused spectators to break out in rashes of goosepimples. Now, one look at the cast, wherein are featured the Ritz Brothers and Patsy Kelly, is ample assurance that while plenty of horrifying mystery will be included, the greater emphasis will be placed on comedy.

A real gorilla will appear, but the plot has to do with a mechanical beast used to terrorize a household by a man seeking to evade payment of his debts and to defraud a girl of her inheritance. The Ritz Brothers, the zaney sleuths in the case, are the frightened heroes who bring the man and his monster to bay. Thereupon ensues a denouement that makes hash of everybody's advance conclusions.

There will be a bit of love interest and that will feature Anita Louise, lately in "The Little Princess," and Edward Norris, one of the studio's newer personalities, who was seen in "Tailspin." The melodramatic content will center about Lionel Atwill, Bela Lugosi and Joseph Calleia.

Direction is by Alan Dwan, maker of "The Three Musketeers," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Suez" and "Josette." Spence's play was modernized by Rian James and Sid Silvers.

Release date: May 26, 1939.

Invitation to Happiness

(Paramount)

Romance

At Paramount studio when the boys in the publicity department stop boasting about "Midnight," they start boasting about "Invitation to Happiness."

It will be a Wesley Ruggles produced and directed picture. Mr. Ruggles has directed many notable films. He produced-directed "Sing, You Sinners," which according to the records was liked by lots of persons. The names in it are Fred MacMurray, who was in "Sing, You Sinners," Irene Dunne, now in "Love Affair," Charles Ruggles, who has been funny in a great many pictures, little Billy Cook, William Collier, Sr., and Marian Martin, a promising newcomer whose name is not strange to those who read the papers.

Lest there be any mistake as to what the title means, "Invitation to Happiness" is a story of the prize fighter and the lady. There will be a dozen or so fights to excite the interest of men and the love story is of that brand calculated to make the women sob while living the story.

After the preview of "Invitation to Happiness," the phrase "emotion stirring" undoubtedly will crop up in many reports thereon. Those, undoubtedly, will most concern MacMurray, Miss Dunne and Billy Cook. When the reporters write about the production's comedy, they will be talking about C. Ruggles and Collier, Sr., a couple of picture stealers who can equitably exchange notes with the Barrymore brothers.

Release date: July 7, 1939 (tentative).

The House of Fear

(Universal)

Melodrama

The title identifies the entertainment character of "The House of Fear," weird mystery melodrama, the setting for which is a vacant theatre. A murder has been committed with a play in progress, but for a year the case has gone unsolved. A detective, posing as a producer, rents the house to re-enact the crime, and brings together the original cast and backstage company. Immediately strange things begin to happen in the house that is haunted by the dead man's ghost. One, then another man is killed. The detective-producer is baffled until an officer discovers a lethal contraption hooked up to a microphone.

For name values the picture will offer Irene Hervey, now in "East Side of Heaven," William Gargan, last in "Within the Law," Walter Woolf King, Harvey Stephens, Alan Dinehart, newcomer Dorothy Arnold, El Brendel, Tom Dugan and Jan Duggan.

An Edmund Grainger production, basis of "The House of Fear" is an original story by Thomas Fallon, which Peter Milne adapted. The picture is being directed by Joe May. His many European pictures are supplemented by such American films as "Confession" and "Society Smugglers."

Release date: To be determined.

The Girl from Mexico

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy Romance

'The Girl from Mexico" will be the first picture in which Lupe Valez has been seen since "High Flyers." Recently on the stage, her earlier Hollywood career was spent mainly with MGM, Paramount and Universal. Her supporting cast will include Donald Woods, presently in "Heritage of the Desert"; Donald MacBride, who made his picture debut in "Room Service"; Leon Errol, the rubber legged comedian; Linda Hayes, a product of Jesse Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" radio program, Elizabeth Risdon and Eduardo Raquello.

The story, locales of which are Mexico and New York, is comedy, romance and music. The romantic content concerns a staid young radio advertising executive and a fiery tempered Mexican senorita. The comedy will feature Errol and Miss Velez will do the singing. Most of the fun and some of the romance takes place against such backgrounds as big league ball games, wrestling matches and similar events that interest the New York smart set.

The basis of the production is a story by Lionel Houser whose credits include "100 to One," "Sky Giant" and "Condemned Women." Houser prepared the screen play in collaboration with Joseph Fields. The director, Leslie Goodwins, made the current "Almost a Gentleman."

Release date: To be determined.

Only Angels Have Wings

(Columbia)

Action Melodrama and Romance

"Only Angels Have Wings" will be the final number of the 1938-39 productions which have used the thrill of aviation as a background for love stories. This Columbia production will make use of the exploits of a hardy band of fliers who conduct a more or less wildcat commercial air-transport service in Chile. Besides its action thrills, when men fly to glory or death over the fog drenched Andes Mountains, there is the love story of the line's hardboiled manager and a stranded American showgirl. This story is as volatile as are the production effects.

While many persons will take part, the principal characters are players of established name value. The leading trio are Cary Grant, now in "Gunga Dine"; Jean Arthur, last in "You Can't Take It with You," and Richard Barthelmess, who is making a screen comeback. Featured players include Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Rumann, Victor Kilian, John Carroll, Donald Barry and Noah Beery, Jr.

Howard Hawks, who wrote the original story, also is directing. He made the flying picture, "Ceiling Zero," and such melodramatic films as "The Road to Glory," "Today We Live," "Scarface" and "Tiger Shark." The screenplay is the work of Jules Furthman, whose credits include collaboration on "Spawn of the North," "The Good Earth" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Release date: April 30, 1939.

Copyright Change Seen by MPPDA As New Protection

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America hopes that proposed revisions of the United States Copyright Law "will include such provisions as may make it possible for the United States to be party to agreements designed to promote international protection of intellectual properties, both among American States and on a universal basis," including motion picture properties.

In a statement issued Wednesday, from New York headquarters, the MPPDA explained that the Committee for the Study of Copyright of the National Committee of the United States of America on International Intellectual Cooperation, a non-official organization interested in promoting cultural relations, has been holding a conference in New York on copyright legislation at regular intervals. The basic purpose of this conference, it was said, is the clarification and revision of the domestic copyright law.

Since the United States Government has been invited to a Diplomatic Conference in Brussels later in 1939 for discussion of the revision of the Berne Convention, and since the Rome version of the Berne Convention is before the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, "it is opportune that the various national organizations interested in copyright should have this opportunity to study and propose constructive revision of the domestic law, which is necessary in view of the international aspects of the problem," said the MPPDA.

The following national associations have been cooperating here in the study of the copyright bill: the Authors League of America, American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Song Writers Protective Association, Music Publishers Protective Association, recording interests, International Allied Printing Trades Association, Book Publishers Bureau, National Publishers Association, American Library Association, the Joint Committee on Materials for Research of the American Council of Learned Societies, the Social Science Research Council, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Independent Exhibitors League and National Association of Broadcasters.

The chairman of the Committee for the Study of Copyright, Dr. Waldo G. Leland, Director of the American Council of Learned Societies, and Professor James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University, have presided at the meetings which are still continuing.

Producers and distributors of motion pictures have been represented by the MPPDA, which has participated at all the meetings by a special committee of counsel, consisting of Robert W. Perkins, Warners; Edwin P. Kilroe, 20th-Fox, Gabriel L. Hess, MPPDA and Edward A. Sargoy.

"The representatives of the producers and distributors have participated extensively in the deliberations of those subcommittees appointed by the conference with respect to: formalities in the creation, preservation and transfer of rights under copyright, remedies for infringement of copyright, reprinting of single copies of out-of-print works for purposes solely of library research, and the problems of mechanical recordation rights for copyrighted musical compositions, as well as the right to copyrightability generally for a sound track containing work of a literary, dramatic or musical nature, captured in the form of a special performing rendition thereof for audible communication," said the MPPDA.

Ben Schwalb, Columbia short subjects producer and director, has resigned. He plans to vacation for several months.

For Love or Money

(Universal)

Comedy-Melodrama

Although the production will not present any outstanding screen personalities, it will feature a team of players who have proved themselves in many pictures. June Lang was in many 20th Century-Fox films; she is in Roach's "It's Spring Again" and will be in "Captain Fury." Robert Kent has appeared in several Universal shows. Edward Brophy and Etienne Girardot are known as two of the screen's most capable comedians, and Richard Lane, Addison Richards and Horace McMahon have proved themselves as heavies.

But showmen undoubtedly will find the real sources of potential exploitation for the film in the title, "For Love or Money" and the comedy story which is salted and peppered with melodrama. Two gambler's gun men, who have lost $50,000, must recover it within twelve hours, or else. The money is recovered, but not before the audience is taken through a welter of amusing and menacing incidents and episodes. Love interest, of course, becomes a value as the story progresses.

Anticipating the show's commercial and entertainment merit, it might be well to note that it is being produced by Max Golden, who created the "Jones Family" series for 20th Century-Fox, and that it is being directed by Al Rogell, whose credits include "City Streets," "Murder in Greenwich Village" and "Grand Jury."

Release date: April 28.

Geronimo

(Paramount)

Action Adventure

The story of "Geronimo" will, with love interest added, detail events and incidents in the last great Indian War waged on our western plains. Directly the picture will tell some of the story of the famous Apache Indian warrior, Geronimo, who for more than thirty years terrorized a section of the U. S. half as large as Europe, eluded or beat the Army scores of times and finally, a good Indian, died peaceably and respected.

The Apache country of the Southwest, Arizona and New Mexico, is the locale. Against its scenic backgrounds will be pictured the battles and massacres, the life and death struggles waged, and attuned to the adventurous spirit of production effects will be told the subsidiary love story.

Paramount has assigned Preston Foster, Ellen Drew who was in "If I Were King," Andy Devine, a member of the "Stagecoach" cast, Gene Lockhart, Chief Thundercloud, who will be Geronimo, Ralph Morgan, William Henry, Kitty Kelly and Marjorie Reynolds to the principal roles. Hundreds of extras will be seen in the big mass action scenes.

The picture will be directed by Paul Sloane, long inactive but remembered for "Here Comes the Band" and "Down to Their Last Yacht."

Release date: To be determined

The Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, has granted an application of the Tacme Film Service, Inc., to serve between New York and Sussex, New Jersey, as a common carrier by motor vehicle of motion picture films, theatre accessories and advertising display material.

Pathe Has Profit, Fox Playhouses Reports a Loss

Annual financial statements were reported this week by Pathe Film Corporation, which showed a profit, and by Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, reporting a loss. A dividend declaration was made by Columbia Pictures. Eastman Kodak mailed warrants to subscribe to common stock.

Columbia Pictures Corporation at a meeting of its board of directors this week declared a quarterly dividend of $.68¾ per share on the $2.75 Convertible Preferred Stock of the company, payable May 15th to stockholders of record May 1st.

Pathe Film Corporation and subsidiaries report for the year ended December 31, 1938, a net income of $77,158, including $245,000 dividends from du Pont Film Manufacturing Corporation, and after deducting depreciation, interest, Federal income taxes, etc., equivalent after dividend requirements on the $7 cumulative convertible preferred stock to four cents each on 581,679 shares of common stock.

This compares with a net income in 1937 of $466,918, including $472,500 dividends received from the du Pont company, equal to 70 cents a share on 585,072 shares of common stock.

Pathe has forwarded proxies to stockholders in anticipation of the annual meeting on April 25th. The purpose of the meeting is the election of directors and designation of auditors. Proxies named as directors Henry J. Guild, Allan P. Kirby, Robert M. McKinney, Louis Phillips, Charles A. Stone, Kenneth M. Young and Robert R. Young. Price, Waterhouse and Company have been nominated as auditors.

Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., comprising 120 theatres in the New York metropolitan area, shows a loss of $50,900 for 1938. This compares with a net income of $98,317 for 1937. Two items account in part for the difference between the two years. These are $56,727 in losses from non-recoverable value of a surrendered lease and related notes receivable, and $40,257 as provision for impairment of investments in and receivables from affiliated companies, of which $11,830 is applicable to the year before. Also, dividends from affiliated companies were less.

Rent income for 1938 was $3,591,070, a drop of only $18,000 from 1937. Expenses increased however. Cash on hand and in banks totaled $313,727 as of January 31, compared with $250,323 a year before. Theatres in the Metropolitan Playhouses group are operated by Randforce in Brooklyn and by Skouras in Manhattan, New Jersey, Westchester and on Long Island. Joseph M. Schenck is president of the corporation.

Warrants entitling holders of common shares of the Eastman Kodak Company to purchase one new share at $127.50 for each 10 that are held, or 225,092 additional shares, have been mailed to stockholders. A registration statement covering the additional shares, filed last month with the Securities and Exchange Commission, became effective last week. The rights, now being traded in on the New York Stock Exchange, will expire on April 27th.

MILLIONAIRES BACKING NEWSREEL CIRCUIT, TO TAKE OWN PICTURES

Wall Street Interests Back Theatre Construction Starting May 1st; Two Other Projects Concern 16mm. Films

Culminating nearly a year of planning, a new nationwide circuit of newsreel theatres is about to spring up, involving an investment reputedly in the millions, and backed by the Wall Street and other important financial groups of Herbert Scheftel, wealthy broker; Paul Felix Warburg, millionaire banker; Angier Biddle Duke, of the Duke tobacco fortune; Edward J. Reeves, grocery chain head; Abraham L. Bienstock, New York attorney, and Alfred G. Burger, New York realtor.

A second new nationwide newsreel circuit in work has the interest of the DeVry projector group, but this circuit is being considered as a "five-and-ten" chain, showing 16mm subjects, as is still a third project, headed by Genaro Ray in New York.

Already operating for some time and presenting "regular" newsreels exclusively or predominantly are eight or nine theatres, principally in the east, in a field that has been threatening to show expansion for some time. In Europe, the newsreel house has made considerably greater progress.

Starting First Theatre May 1st

With plans already completed, and construction to start on the first theatre, in San Francisco, on May 1st, a new setup in houses designed solely to relay news to the screen is promised by the Wall Street group, to operate in the west as Pacific Newsreel Company, and under other corporate titles to be established elsewhere as other theatres are launched.

Listed as president is Mr. Scheftel, with Mr. Reeves vice-president, Mr. Duke treasurer and Mr. Burger secretary. Representing the company in San Francisco is Martin J. Dinkelspiel.

Mr. Bienstock, in his law office in New York, on Tuesday would not disclose the whereabouts of future sites.

The San Francisco house, to be in the city's busiest retail center, on Market Street, will be the forerunner of at least 13 similar theatres throughout the country.

Lease for $1,000,000

The lease on the San Francisco building, running optionally from 20 to 50 years, is reported to involve $1,000,000. Another $100,000 will be expended remodeling the structure, which will be ready about July 1st. The location was chosen because, it was said, by actual check it was found to have the "heaviest traffic flow in the city over a period of 18 hours a day."

Large enough to accommodate 1,000 persons, the auditorium will be restricted to 400, to allow ample room for large overstuffed chairs. It will be patterned after the similar structure opened a year ago in Grand Central station, New York.

Also included will be reading rooms, ping pong tables, and other recreational facilities in the basement.

Admission price will be 25 cents, with the show being continuous and probably lasting an hour and fifteen minutes.

The new company is expected to have its own editors, photographers and newsreel staff, and will, whenever possible, take its own pictures in its own sound trucks, according to Mr. Dinkelspiel. He also said that he would file application with the California corporation commissioner for a permit to issue stock.

The 5 and 10 Project

A circuit of small theatres showing 16mm newsreels and shorts is projected by a company known as 5 and 10 Movies, Inc., which has been incorporated at Albany. Among officers of the company will be Hickman Price, Ruth Maizel and Ruth M. Stohlberg of Cranford, N. Y.

The company derives its name from the fact that it plans to charge five cents children's admission and 10 cents for adults.

Price is in charge of the New York office of DeVry Corporation, manufacturer of 16mm projection and recording equipment. DeVry has been planning a national 16mm newsreel and other subjects for exhibition in theatres especially built for the purpose.

Eleven Newsreel Theatres

With the opening last September 8th of the Penn Newsreel theatre in New York City, and of the first Trans-Lux theatre in Boston, on September 9, the total number of American theatres exclusively or pre-eminently presenting newsreels, was brought to 11. The number, however, has been cut since.

All but four of the houses are in New York. A newsreel theatre was included in the construction of the union railroad station in Cincinnati, completed several years ago, but soon after opening it changed to a feature picture policy. Similarly, the 500-seat theatre opened in 1937 by Alfred Gottesman in Miami, Fla., as a newsreel house, was changed to one regularly presenting full-length features. And the Penn Newsreel closed a few weeks after opening.

While the Trans-Lux theatres include various short subjects on their programs, only two, both in New York, present features, and in every Trans-Lux situation all of the newsreels are shown and featured in billing and program makeup. Besides the New York and Boston houses, there is a Trans-Lux theatre in Boston and in Philadelphia. All use rear projection except that at 49th and Broadway, New York, which was built by B. S. Moss originally as a feature theatre.

Newsreel Theatres, Inc., operators of the Newsreel theatre (formerly the Embassy) in Times Square, New York, has a similar house in Newark, N. J., and another at 72d Street and Broadway, New York.

The Grand Central theatre is located in the station, just off the main concourse.

Set Arkansas Date

The annual convention of the Independent Theatres of Arkansas has been set for April 23rd and 24th at the Marion Hotel, Little Rock, Ark.

Elmer Huhnke has been named sales manager for Monogram in Omaha.

Political Forum Over Censorship

Political censoring of motion pictures, frequently brought up of late for public discussion, was the subject of an open forum Thursday evening at the Hotel Astor in New York, as arranged by the film division of the Theatre Arts Committee, a "liberal" political group organized some time ago to campaign against Nazism and Fascism.

Inviting film producers, distributors and exhibitors and the press to attend, the Theatre Arts Committee invited as speakers Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt; Lillian Hellman, writer; Samuel Goldwyn, Howard Dietz, director of MGM advertising; Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of New York; Edward A. Golden, Monogram vice-president; Langdon W. Post, director of the American Civil Liberties Union; Rita Hochheimer, director of visual education of the New York State Board of Education, and A. J. Isserman, counsel for the Consumers' Union. Invited to preside was Louis Nizer, lawyer for the majors, and secretary of the New York Film Board of trade.

The Theatre Arts subcommittee in charge included Al Sherman, of Columbia; Mortimer Frankel, United Artists, and Beatrice Gelber, Warners.

H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, will participate in a symposium on film censorship to be held in Columbus, on April 17th. He will oppose censorship, together with Dr. Edgar Dale, head of the Bureau of Education at Ohio State University, while a third speaker will take the opposite side.

Samuel Goldwyn has withdrawn "Wuthering Heights" from the entire province of Quebec, refusing to make the cuts demanded by Quebec censors.

Warner Brothers' "Devil's Island" has been barred in Quebec, as a result of the protest made by the French Government, according to the French Consulate General.

National Canadian Censorship Urged

With an Act of Parliament assuring establishment of the National Film Board by the Dominion Government, a proposal has been made to widen the powers of the commission by replacing the work now being done by the Provincial censor boards by national censorship, handled through the National Board. It is probable that the Province of Quebec would oppose such a measure.

A bill which would fix an annual license fee of from $125 to $750 for each theatre, depending on its size, has been proposed in Dearborn, Michigan. No operating permits would be permitted until the applicant is investigated by the police.

Refusal of the Pennsylvania Senate to confirm the appointment of Mrs. Edna Carroll left the state without an official censor this week. Subordinate employes are carrying on the work.

Hedy Lamarr's "Ecstasy" is still "substantially the same" film which was barred in 1936, in the opinion of Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division of the New York State Department of Education, and as such the revised version cannot be granted a license

The Federal customs office in New York has released the print of "The Puritan."

WARNER BROS.' N.Y. STRAND

Last Week in April!

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Busy Week

Hollywood didn't do much spring loafing about production, new or completed, in the first week of April. Twelve pictures started; eight were finished. Some of the productions launched are for 1939-40 programs, but practically all of those completed will be released prior to July 1st.

Three film projects were started at Paramount. Pat O'Brien, borrowed from Warner Bros., will star with Olympe Bradna and Roland Young in "Heaven on a Shoe String." The cast for "The Cat and the Canary" will feature Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard, John Beal, Douglas Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard and Nydia Westman. "Million Dollar Legs" will present Betty Grable, John Hartley, Donald O'Connor, Jackie Coogan, Larry Crabbe, Joyce Matthews and Dorothea Kent.

MGM started two pictures. Robert Young, Ann Sothern, Ian Hunter, Ruth Hussey and Cliff Edwards head the cast of "Broadway to Wyoming." The star of "On Borrowed Time" is Lionel Barrymore, who will be supported by Eily Malyon, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel and Bobs Watson.

"The Dove" Planted

RKO Radio matched the MGM pace. The 1939 version of "The Dove" will feature Leo Carrillo, Steffi Duna and Tim Holt. George O'Brien heads the cast in "Racketeers of the Range," which also includes Marjorie Reynolds, Chill Wills, Gay Seabrook, Robert Fiske, Cactus Mack, Frank Marving, Monte Montague, John Dilson, Ben Corbett and Bud Osborne.

"East Side, West Side" started at 20th Century-Fox. Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Henry Armetta, Leona Roberts and June Hale are the featured players.

Bert Wheeler returns to the screen for the first time since the death of his partner, Robert Woolsey, in Warners' "Lighthorse Harry." Gloria Dickson, Marie Wilson and Eddie Foy, Jr., are the other principals.

Destined to be an important picture on its next season's program, Columbia launched "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi and Ruth Donnelly will be the leading players.

On the day "Man of Conquest" was given its world premiere, Republic started "All the Tomorrows." It will feature Otta Kruger and Frieda Inescort with Don Douglas, Adrienne Ames and Jane Darwell.

Universal's contribution to the new work is "The Old Grad," the cast headed by Charles Grapewin, Anita Louise and Dick Foran.

Warners Finish Three

Three of the completed pictures are credited to Warner Bros. The most important is the melodramatic "Each Dawn I Die," in which James Cagney is supported by George Raft, Jane Bryan, George Bancroft, Thurston Hall, Maxie Rosenbloom and Joe Downey. "Gantry the Great," a story of a blind horse, will feature "Gantry," Edith Fellows, Jimmy McCallion, Granville Bates, Frankie Burke and De Wolf Hopper. "Enemy Agent" will present Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay, Bruce Lester and Maris Wrixon.

HAL ROACH CUTS PREVIEW KNOT

A fresh turn to operation of the institution called the preview has been taken by Hal Roach, to obtain an unbiased audience reaction and suggestions for his "Captain Fury."

"Secret" previews (of films not yet in release form) are held so regularly in Pomona, Redlands, Riverside, Long Beach, Huntington Park, that producers are more and more dubious of the results, and they are even more skeptical of the value of the "public and press" showings (of films ready for release) so far as a study of audience acceptability is concerned. All these dress-up previews nowadays are at the Paramount, Hillstreet, Pantages, Warner's Hollywood, Grauman's Chinese, Forum, Fox Uptown, Village, Alexander, and sometimes the Carthay Circle.

Hal Roach studied the Southern California situations and found that the Fox in Bakersfield had not had a preview of any kind since "David Copperfield" in 1934. All the notices given were a heading on the marquee, "Major Preview Tonight," and such telephone calls as the management could make in a hurry.

Mr. Roach expressed himself more than pleased with the cooperation, in answering other studios' questions on the experiment. He plans at least two more such previews, and it is not improbable that the publicity for the completed picture will say that the theatremen helped cut and edit the production.

Two pictures were checked off the active list at Paramount. "Beau Geste," the top number, will feature Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston and Susan Hayward, with J. Carroll Naish, Brian Donlevy, Harry Woods, James Burke, Donald O'Connor, James Stevenson and thousands of character and extra players. Anna May Wong, J. Carroll Naish, Eric Blore, Anthony Quinn, Ernest Truex, Rudolf Forster and William Haade will be seen in "Island of Lost Men."

Returning from location in Florida, MGM's "Tarzan in Exile" company completed the final interior shots. Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan again play the roles of Tarzan and his mate. Henry Wilcoxon, Frieda Inescort and John Sheffield also will be seen.

"Stanley and Livingstone" was finished at 20th Century-Fox. Spencer Tracy and Sir Cedric Hardwicke are in the title roles. Richard Greene and Nancy Kelly carry the love interest, and Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull, Henry Travers, Hassan Said and Miles Mander have important roles.

Universal finished "The House of Fear." The all-principal cast lists Irene Hervey, William Gargan, Walter Woolf King, Alan Dinehart, Harvey Stephens, Dorothy Arnold, El Brendel, Tom Dugan, Jan Duggan and Robert Coote.

Talent Hunts

The need of new faces on the screen and the results of Jesse Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" talent hunt via radio have started practically every studio in town on intensive searches for promising young players. Paramount has signed up a dozen.

Recently Paramount signed Robert Preston, found on the stage of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, and gave him important roles in "Union Pacific" and "Beau Geste." Betty Field was taken from the stage play, "What a Life," to do the same role in the screen version. Two other newcomers, Janice Logan, discovered in a Chicago community theatre, and Janet Waldo, a University of Washington coed, already have been given small roles. Patricia Morison will get her big opportunity in "The Magnificent Fraud." Ellen Drew, a former five-and-ten-cent-store clerk, has been seen in "If I Were King" and "The Lady's from Kentucky."

Brand new to the screen are Susan Paley and Richard Denning, who will have roles in "Million Dollar Legs." Judith Barrett, from Venus, Texas, made her screen debut in "I'm from Missouri," and Joseph Allen, a young stage actor, was recruited from an important role in "Our Leading Citizen."

News in Brief

Fred Astaire signed a two-picture-a-year contract with MGM. He will co-star with Eleanor Powell in "Broadway Melody of 1940."

Darryl F. Zanuck has selected Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Bluebird" as a Shirley Temple vehicle. The picture, which will carry a $2,000,000 budget, will be produced in color. It is slated to follow her next production, "Lady Jane."

* * *

Allen Jenkins and Jane Wyman will be teamed in the leading roles in the future Warner "Torchy Blane" pictures.

Jack Holt will play a dual role in his next picture for Larry Darmour, "Criminal at Large."

* * *

Following the Warner Bros. technique practiced on "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," Paramount is shrouding production of "Dr. Cyclops" with secrecy. Only seven copies of the script were mimeographed, instead of the usual 150.

* * *

Samuel Goldwyn is contemplating making a picture based on the lives of the Bronte sisters, British authoresses of the Victorian age. If the idea proves feasible, contemplated film will be a follow-up on "Wuthering Heights," written by Emily Bronte.

200 MORE FEATURES FOR 1940 TO BE SET AT FOUR MORE CONVENTIONS

And 56–60 from Paramount Indicated; RKO Also To Be Heard from; Monogram Convenes in Chicago May 4–6

With exhibitors already informed of the nature of story and talent to appear in 202 of the 502 features indicated for 1939-40, from the product announcements made at the four national sales conventions held to date —by Warners, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic—the full list will be further rounded out this week end by Universal's convention announcement, to be followed by Monogram,—which has set its meeting for May 4th, then by Columbia and United Artists, each meeting on May 8th.

200 More Features

These four will add 200, including 40, plus westerns, from Universal, 56 from Monogram, Columbia, 56; United Artists, 30. Totals include westerns wherever slated. Thus Paramount and RKO are the only two to be heard from both as to convention dates and definite product possibilities, although it has been indicated Paramount will again promise between 56 and 60 features.

Warners, in convention first, on March 13th, announced 48 features; MGM, convening March 20, announced 52, followed by Twentieth Century-Fox, which met March 30th, announcing 52, and Republic, holding the first of four regionals last weekend, at Houston, and announcing 50, plus four serials.

Republic's Regionals

Republic's second regional was held Wednesday and Thursday at the Park Central Hotel, New York, for New York, Boston, New Haven, Washington, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Toronto, with home office executives, franchise partners and branch managers in attendance. Presiding were H. J. Yates, James R. Grainger, George Schaefer and Al Adams, with Jack Bellman, William Sall attending from the home office and franchise holders and field executives including Herman Gluckman, Herman Rifkin, Sam Flax, James Alexander, Nat Lefton, Max Margolis, Max Gillis, A. W. Perry and Paul Nathanson.

Republic's third and fourth conventions will be held, respectively, on April 20th and 21st, in Chicago, and April 25th and 26th, in San Francisco.

Delegates to each of the Republic meetings are being told that of the 50 features planned, plus four serials, 26 will be Class "A," at increased budgets, and 24 will be westerns, with "B" product eliminated.

Universal Meetings

W. A. Scully, sales manager of Universal, set a series of three regional sales conventions, beginning Saturday in Cincinnati. After three days at the Netherlands Plaza there, the convention will move to the Palmer House, Chicago, for sessions April 18, 19 and 20, and then on to San Francisco's St. Francis Hotel, April 22, 23 and 24.

Attending from the home office will be Nate Blumberg, president; F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager; W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, and F. T. Murray, James Jordan, O. C. Binder, Andrew J. Sharick, Morris Alin and Louis Pollock, from the home office, besides Mr. Scully.

On Saturday, Mr. Scully will outline what has been done on this season's product and what will be done on future product. On Sunday, there will be a screening of "The Mikado," Universal's new operatic picture. In the afternoon there will be an announcement of product and awarding of bookers prizes.

EXHIBITOR ASKS END OF "KID" CYCLE

"The public is fed up on kids," wrote Tom Davis, manager of the Paramount, Ashland, Kentucky, in a recent leter to his circuit executives. "Exhibitors," said Davis, "should wire, write or 'phone the producers, and contact sales conventions, and tell 'em to stop this kid cycle."

The Cincinnati meeting has been designated by Mr. Scully as a testimonial to Ike Libson, well known circuit owner of Ohio.

Monogram Meets May 4–6

Monogram's seventh international sales convention will be held at the Drake hotel, Chicago, May 4, 5, 6, it was announced this week by W. Ray Johnston, president. In addition to representatives of Monogram's 37 offices in the United States and Canada, executives of the company's foreign distribution outlets in London, Paris, Australia and several South American countries will be on hand. George W. Weeks, general sales manager, will present the sales policy.

The 200 salesmen and executives will hear the outline of the company's plans for 32 features and 24 westerns, the largest schedule ever undertaken by the company.

Representing Monogram's foreign distribution outlets will be William Gell, managing director of Pathe Pictures Ltd., of London; Arthur Levey, Monogram's English representative; Norman Bede Rydge, chairman of the board of Greater Union Theatres and of British Empire Films, distributors of Monogram product in Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania; and Ernest Wettstein, Paris representative.

"Geo. W. Weeks Week" has been set aside by Monogram's exchanges in the United States and Canada as part of their pre-convention sales round-up drive.

Three Columbia Meetings

Columbia will hold its annual sales convention in three sessions this season, it was announced Monday by A. Montague, general sales manager, as follows: Atlantic City, May 8, 9, 10 and 11; Chicago, May 14, 15 and 16; and Los Angeles, May 20, 21 and 22. Columbia will announce 56 features, plus shorts and serials.

Jack Cohn and all home office executives will be present at the Atlantic City meeting.

All sessions will be presided over by Mr. Montague. Sales executives present at the Atlantic City and Chicago gatherings will be Rube Jackter, Louis Astor, Louis Weinberg and Max Weisfeldt, from the home office, and New York division manager Nat Cohn, Mideast division manager Sam Galanty and southern division manager Sam Moscow will head the delegations in Atlantic City. Mid-west division manager Phil Dunas and central division manager Carl Shalit will head the Chicago group and western division manager Jerome Safron in Los Angeles.

United Artists' sales convention will be held in Hollywood beginning May 8. The entire field staff and the home office executive personnel will attend. Details of the company's 1939-40 program, which is expected to include a minimum of 30 pictures, will be announced at the convention by Maurice Silverstone, head of world-wide operations of the firm.

56 from Paramount

Paramount will have between 56 and 60 during the 1939-'40 season, the same number scheduled by the company for the current season, Barney Balaban, president, indicated Friday in New York prior to his departure for the coast by train.

The Paramount group headed for the studio included Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee; Edwin L. Weisl, counsel and member of the board, and Leon Netter, home office theatre executive. They were joined in Chicago on the way west by Neil F. Agnew, distribution head, and Robert Gillham, advertising and publicity director. They will discuss new season production plans with Y. Frank Freeman and William LeBaron at the studio.

Mr. Balaban said that the studio was in its most favorable position in years on the basis of completed pictures and that the position was being constantly improved. He said that by June 20th half of the company's more important product for the new season will be completed or in work.

Annual sales convention plans will be completed by Mr. Agnew within the next week or two. Indications are that two regional meetings will be held some time next month.

Mr. Balaban said that the Paramount board of directors had approved the proposed industry trade practice program and that the company, consequently, was prepared to accept the plan "without any qualification whatever."

The home office group will be at the studio until the end of the month and will stop off at Omaha, April 27th to attend the premiere of "Union Pacific," on their way back.

Mr. Freeman will continue on his studio assignment indefinitely, Balaban said.

Warners Claim Record For Accessory Sales

A new high in sales of advertising accessories was set during the special Warner ad sales drive which ran from April 2nd to 8th, according to the company's home office.

Sales for the week were 35 percent over the mark set during the 1938 ad sales week, which to that date had been the highest in the company's history. This year's ad sales drive saw the sale of twice as many accessories as the company sells during a normal week's business.

All of the company's 39 branch offices in the United States and Canada were over quota, with fifteen exchanges doubling their quotas and two tripling their quotas.

Announce MGM Winners

Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, this week announced the six winners in the company's "Marie Antoinette" contest. The theatre manager winners were Frank Weatherford, Worth, Fort Worth, and Ray Bell, Loew's, Washington. Theatre patrons who won were Mary M. Canak, Milwaukee; Helen King, Denver; Effie Burkhalter, Amarillo, Tex., and Mrs. Helen Szold, Chicago. The winners will sail from New York on the Normandie on May 3rd for a trip to Paris.

Man of Conquest

(Republic)

The Story of Sam Houston

This, Ladies and Gentlemen of Showbusiness, is a picture you can sink your box office teeth into, and bear down. It is a picture in about that tone of voice. It is deep and broad and plain and thorough and as honest as its hero's buckskin shirt.

You've heard a lot about this picture, in strong language, and you'll hear a lot more. That's because there's so much to be said about it, and for it. The showmanly thing to do, in this happy state of affairs, is to start telling the customers about it right now, let them know when it's coming to town, and then keep right on telling them. There's plenty to tell.

This man Houston, as some of you may have forgotten in your preoccupation with the rushing events of history these past few decades, was a man of proportions. He is played by Richard Dix, an actor of such proportions that the studios have trouble finding roles big enough for him, the lead in the sensational "Cimarron" (1931) being the last previous casting equal to his singularly powerful talent. The Houston part is bigger than that, and fits him like his coonskin cap.

The story of Big Sam Houston is the story of Texas, and the story of Texas is as big as the state is. If you've lost your perspective on that member of the Union, get a copy of Life Magazine for April 8 (and as many copies as you can get your hands on, to distribute among the customers) and read the 13-page pictorial presentation of Texas as was and as is, a purely editorial feature which happens to break in the laps of some millions of readers, by a coincidence which the Republic press department confesses no responsibility for, at precisely the psychological moment with respect to the success of "Man of Conquest." (Life couldn't have done a more thorough job for the film if it had owned the company.)

Not to reiterate history long of textbook record and now restated graphically in Life, it is enough to say here that the screen play by Wells Root, E. E. Paramore, Jr., and Jan Fortune, from a story by Mr. Root and Harold Shumate, takes up the life of Sam Houston prior to his enlistment with Andrew Jackson in the war of 1812, carries on through his first election as governor of Tennessee, continues through his second term and the scandal (his wife divorced him) which sends him, on a four months' drunk, back to his boyhood friends, the Cherokees, which tribe he joins and champions in defiance of his old friend Jackson, now President, when the government thrust them out of Tennessee to make room for white settlers.

It takes him, an embittered man and ambitious, to the then Mexican province, Texas, which he determines to set up as an independent republic. It introduces him to Stephen Austin, David Crockett, James Bowie, William B. Travis and Lannie Upchurch, and to Margaret Lea, who becomes Mrs. Houston. It takes him, too late, to the rescue of the heroes of the Alamo, a spectacular sequence, and thence on the long retreat that finally spells victory over the pursuing Santa Anna in one of the most stirring battle sequences ever filmed. It ends with his relinquishment of the Texas presidency on the occasion of that republic's admission to the Union as a state in 1845.

All this stirring history is reproduced with manifest fidelity in the Sol C. Siegel production, painstakingly directed by George Nicholls, Jr. The manner of the presentation is the steady, well timed, accurately phrased and powerfully dramatic manner of the really great outdoor pictures of record—of "The Covered Wagon," "The Iron Horse" and those other unforgettable mile posts of cinema progress. It is rich in dialogue attuned to the times, in settings, in documentary incidents and in force of narrative. It is likewise rich in performance.

Edward Ellis' portrayal of Andrew Jackson is among the screen's most effective reproductions of historical personalities. Ralph Morgan as Austin, Robert Barrat as Crockett, George Hayes as Upchurch and Victor Jory as Travis are as so many men walking unchanged out of a vibrant past. Gail Patrick's performance of Margaret Lea is excellent, and the Dix portrayal of Houston stands shoulder to shoulder with any comparable piece of acting by any actor at any time in any picture.

The picture is appropriate for any kind of theatre in any type or size of community. It has unlimited exploitation possibilities and contains as much for the young as for the mature, for the man as for the woman and the child.

Victor Young's music score is a forceful contribution thoughtfully devised.

Previewed at the Republic studio in Hollywood to some 300 members of the press, domestic and foreign, lay and trade, whom an uninformed onlooker straying into the place after the picture started could well have mistaken for just that many movie fans having a grand time.
—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The Family Next Door

(Universal)

Domestic Comedy

There is a lot of laughs in "The Family Next Door." Most of the stuff that goes to make it up is familiar material, in fact there's hardly a new, different or novel line of dialogue situation in it, but it still has the power to provoke smiles and giggles.

Comedy that is the result of the misfortunes of others is the picture's substance, that and the ever present dab of human interest. Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Joy Hodges, Eddie Quillan, Juanita Quigley and Bennie Bartlett are responsible for the fun. Of course, credit is also due Mortimer Ofner for his original screen play, director Joseph Santley and producer Max Golden.

One-trip plumber "Pierce" is head of a family that is more or less nutty. "Mrs. Pierce" has social ambitions, daughter "Laura" wants both a career and a beau, "Sammy" is a business genius who can't hold a job, "Susan" and "Rufus" are just kids. While "Pierce" is constantly harried the ambitions of both mother and daughter come tumbling down, but the business mistake that "Sammy" made turns out to be a veritably gold mine. Then everything ends happily.

As it is a family picture, exploitation that accentuates its wholesome comedy of errors and takes full advantage of the value of cast names should arouse interest.

Back Door to Heaven

(Paramount-Odessco)

Social Melodrama

Grim, but not bitter, "Back Door to Heaven" tells an American tragedy of frustrated ambitions. Taking up the case of the boy who never had a chance, who became a jail bird and finally a convicted murderer dying in disgrace, it preaches a sermon, meanwhile being more entertaining than educational. Nevertheless, because of the subject matter with which the picture deals, the unique and effective manner in which it is presented and the qualities of acting and direction, it is apt to develop into a much-talked-about show. It may become one of those attractions, like "The Informer" and others, that will catch up with itself on the rebound, that is, that oral and written comment may exploit it more than the most discerning showmanship. However, exhibitors have a powerful gripping story to talk about, and while there are no great names available,

Jimmy Lydon (in the prologue), Wallace Ford, Aline McMahon, Stuart Erwin, Patricia Ellis, Bert Frohman and Van Heflin turn in convincing performances in the matured story. Additionally the writing, producing and directing technique are commercial assets.

A poor boy against whom the cards are stacked all his life becomes the hero even though all the time he is a social outcast.

To participate in grammar school graduation exercises "Frankie," whose teacher, "Miss Williams," understands the unfavorable conditions of his home life, steals a harmonica and is sent to reform school. Thence he goes to the penitentiary as a felon. Meanwhile his childhood chums, "Carol," "John," "Bob" and "Wallace" fail in their ambitions. Only "Charley" succeeds. Age and progress force "Miss Williams" out of her position.

With convict pals "Jud" and "Mouse" accompanying him, "Frankie," who is determined to begin life anew returns to his home town only to find there is nothing there for him. In a neighboring metropolis, "Jud" and "Mouse" plan a robbery, while "Frankie" finds the only happiness of life in love with "Carol." A murder committed and "Frankie," who tried to prevent both crimes, is arrested and sentenced to death. Meanwhile "Charley" arranges a class reunion. Breaking jail, "Frankie" appears with his old mates. Thereupon follow dialogue and situations to demonstrate that the American social order as it influenced these people is a failure. Only "Frankie" upholds it. Departing the gathering, he dies in a hail of bullets.

The Lady's from Kentucky

(Paramount)

Turf Melodrama

For that large and growing sector of the population addicted to worship of the thoroughbred race horse as a noble animal. this film contains more material of substantial interest than any of the turf melodramas that have come along. For that other sector, accustomed to regard the thoroughbred as a sort of bone and sinew slot machine out of which a lucky gambler may expect to jiggle a handsome return on a $2 investment now and again, the film contains some unpleasant but no less interesting information. And for those who belong in neither group, yet like to see a horse race, the film offers a thrilling reproduction of the Kentucky Derby with the right horse winning.

The point of view of the type of person first mentioned in the foregoing is presented by Ellen Drew, portraying a Kentucky horsewoman somewhat poor in funds but rich in possession of a champion colt. The point of view of the horse gambler is brought out by George Raft, portraying a bookie who comes into possession of a half-interest in the colt and determines to run that asset into a fortune at whatever cost to the animal. By the time the picture is over, the gambler has come around to the sportswoman's way of looking at matters, but that's after a great deal of exciting and sometimes bitter experience.

Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts and Louise Beavers are the other principals of name value. The production by Jeff Lazarus and direction by Alexander Hall are of the direct, practical kind. Malcolm Stuart Boylan's screen play, from a story by Rowland Brown, starts off at brisk tempo, slows down while attention is centered on interesting detail pertaining to the care and breeding of fine stock in Kentucky, and regains its original pace at the finish.

Since the film is at its best in its relation to the thoroughbred horse, exploitation emphasizing that aspect is clearly indicated.

Prison Without Bars

(Korda - United Artists)

Prison Problem Play

Part a prison play and part a romantic melodrama of a trio housed in a seminary for wayward young women, in a lovely countryside outside of Paris, this double barreled entertainment combination from across the seas, via Alexander Korda's supervision, was originally formulated as a Parisian production. The Anglicized version keeps close to the Gallic model with the exception of the substitution of British players for all but one, Corinne Luchaire, who repeats in quaintly accented English her original role.

Of exploitation note is the fact that the film was the subject of an elaborate pictorial preview in Life magazine.

There is also the emphasis to be given the latest foreign actress discovered rising in the screen heavens. Principal supporting names are Edna Best and Barry Barnes, as the jail's medico. Martita Hunt is the vinegar visaged policewoman and Mary Morris the trouble maker. Brian Desmond Hurst has paced briskly the rather familiarly evident items of prison rebellion, sadistic treatment, reformative procedures and romantic interludes.

Margaret Kennedy, British penwoman of some repute, is credited for the dialogue.

Miss Best comes to the reformatory as a crusading superintendent, a particularly cozy arrangement for her and Barnes, who plays her fiance and the house doctor. The superintendent makes a study of the prisoner played by Mlle. Luchaire and converts her from a termagant to a white frocked nurse assistant to the doctor. A sequence that is the film's highlight, wherein some of the prisoners go on a drunken rampage, resolves the romantic impasses with the girl generously pardoned by the idealistic warden-rival and following the doctor to an appointed meeting spot while the superintendent waves a tearful farewell.

A Man with His Wife

(French Film Exchange)

This Marriage Game

According to the "advice to the lovelorn" dictum expounded in this Parisian production, marital bliss and success would depend not so much on mutual trust and cooperation as rejuvenation of the chocolate magnate husband into a fashion plate and a patient and myopic observer of his young wife's infidelities.

The principal point of interest is the presence of the distinguished European actor, Harry Baur, in the part of the understanding and long suffering husband. M. Baur transforms the colorless character of the spouse into a believable and sympathetic personality. Direction is routine and lagging. English superimposed titles translate adequately the original French dialogue.

Spy in Black

(Columbia-Asher)

Spy Melodrama

Second of Columbia's new British quota acquisitions, made by Irving Asher on the double quota basis, this extremely capably made production exploits the constant British appeal of the spy melodrama. Though this has nothing exceptional, it is in setting in Britain during the Great War, and is developed to the maximum suspense and thrill. The only star name carried is that of Conrad Veidt.

From an original story by J. Storer Clouston, the film traces the adventures of a German naval officer spy in Scotland and his relations with a girl who he believes is a German agent but who is, in fact, a British Secret Service worker. The narrative reveals the way in which he is used by the British naval agents, his escape and ultimate end aboard a little Scottish steamer. It is a strong, meaty tale.

Michael Powell, who directed, has been successful not only with the realism but in the dramatic texture.

Scenes of a German submarine and crew landing their charge on Scottish shores, of the Fleet in action, and of the sinking of the captured vessel by the German officer's own submarine, should register with any audience.

Sebastian Shaw's British officer is efficient work, while Valerie Hobson, June Deprez, Athole Stewart and Mary Morris probably call for mention in lesser ways.

Previewed to an all trade audience, the film obviously gripped throughout and was accorded considerable applause. General agreement was that it was the soundest possible entertainment and a creditable production effort.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Frontier Pony Express

(Republic)

Western

Here is another well made and exciting western starring the increasingly popular Roy Rogers. On the strength of his first picture, "Under Western Stars," released a year ago this week, Rogers was voted 13th place in the western group of the "Money Making Stars" of last year. Now Rogers has had a half dozen starring vehicles, and reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" indicate increasing interest of exhibitor and public alike.

Rogers also has had the good fortune of drawing interesting stories. In this the locale is St. Joseph, Missouri, in Civil War days. Rogers is a Pony Express rider. Involved also are Union cavalry forces, a Confederate spy and a Confederate politician, whose loyalty to the Confederate cause is nil but whose dream of establishing a republic in California with himself as head sets the stage for some rousing melodrama.

Rogers sings a few songs, which are introduced in such a way as to be part of the story and in no wise hinder the action, of which there is a goodly share.

In support are Mary Hart, who has appeared in all Rogers westerns, save one; Raymond Hatton, in another of his comedy caricatures; Edward Keane, Noble Johnson, Monte Blue, Ethel Wales and others.

"Roy," carrying army dispatches by Pony Express from St. Joe to troops in California, is approached by a subordinate of "Senator Lassiter" with a proposition for a price. "Roy" is to substitute forged documents for the official dispatches. "Roy" refuses and subsequently foils the plot.

Melodrama

This is a crime melodrama, competently produced and entertaining, which tells how the young newspaper publisher, though the district attorney, an old family friend, his mother and fiancee all are determined to prevent him, doggedly keeps on even when he discovers what all the others knew, that the murderer he is after is his father.

The cast is headed by Warren Hull and Marsha Hunt, with Morgan Wallace, Clay Clement, Wallis Clark, Virginia Howell and Paul Fix in support. The story is an original screenplay by John T. Neville. The dialogue helps to sustain interest for there is not a great deal of action.

"John Randolph," young newspaper publisher, uses his newspaper to have "Burnette" elected district attorney. "John" is engaged to "Burnette's" daughter "Barbara." "Burnette's" first case is a murder. "Draper" signs a confession admitting the murder but then engages a clever criminal lawyer to defend him. When the signed confession is stolen and he learns that "Draper" is "John's" father the district attorney changes the murder charge to manslaughter. "John" accuses the district attorney of having accepted a bribe. "Draper," out on bail, manages to get the confession and hides out. "John" finds him and gets another confession this time, involving not only "Draper" but his associates.

Japan: Master of the Orient

Another comprehensive yet concise summarization of a serious world situation is detailed in the latest issue of the March of Time. Studied is the role Japan is playing in her portrayal of master of the Orient, and the film is reported to have been shipped in its original and uncensored form. Shown are methods of propaganda utilized by Japan to instill a fever of patriotism, the jingoistic cliques blamed for the militaristic and imperialistic Japanese program, industrial and agricultural conditions, and Manchukuo and parts of China, past and present locales of Japan's empire building. It is serious stuff for the sober minded patron.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Gibbons' "True Adventure" Number

An exciting interlude and, what is more important, a valuable objective lesson for youngsters to regulate their play time activity is offered in this latest number from Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" group. A band of boys play pirates. Embarking on their make-believe in none too navigable craft, the lads battle out their feuds on a sandy island. The leader of one of the bands is captured and secured to a post with stout chains. While the other lads depart for further conquest, the boy is left behind to watch the tide mount slowly around his tied body. His friends return and tug in vain to loosen the bindings. Instead of the marines, it is the harbor police who arrive on the scene to free the half drowned boy. The sequences showing the waters rising on the frantic lad's body and the unsuccessful attempts of his companions to free him should cause many an anxious parent and his offspring to squirm excitedly. Running time, 12 minutes.

Newsy

Another entrant into the magazine variety of short subjects is this newsy introductory number from Vitaphone sources. Comprised of three sections, each item of which should cull some interest from a diverse audience, the material as a whole is fairly entertaining though its full possibilities have not been mined. Item one depicts some iron toed, barefooted Hawaiian lads kicking a pigskin. The second item concerns the magical transformations effected on milady's coiffure by Antoine, Parisian hairdresser. The concluding chapter takes the spectator aboard the United States Maritime Service's training ship, the Joseph Conrad, to witness the training of some of the future young men of the sea.—Running time, 11 minutes.

This, another of the World Window series made in this country (Great Britain)—exploits the unrivaled scenic beauty of the River Thames, from the placid upper reaches of Oxfordshire, through the dignity of London town, to the wide turgid waters of the estuary as it reaches the sea.

The overhanging willows of the upper Thames, the solemn grey grandeur of the Houses of Parliament, the towering nobility of the liners at Tilbury and the Docks, and the swelling red canvas of sailing barges on the river, find their way into a short that captures not only the phantasmargoric colored pageantry of the Thames, but the ceaseless flow of the river from source to mouth.

A splendid souvenir of a City of which Britain is proud, as likely of cordial reception outside England as inside.—B. F.

WAGE RAISE ENDS NEW YORK STRIKE; CASEY WILL MEET WITH MUSICIANS

Members of Local 306 Get 15% Pay Increase and Improved Working Hours After 12-Day Walkout

The much feared strike of New York Local 306 home office and exchange projectionists is over. The strike, which, by the threatened calling of union members in the more than 1,000 New York theatres, and the possible enlistment of all members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees, in studios, home offices, exchanges, laboratories, and theatres, would have crippled the industry, ended Saturday when Local 306 members received a 15 per cent wage increase and improvements in working hours.

Justice Department Intervenes

The windy beginning and gentle end of the strike was due, it appears, to the intervention of the Department of Justice, which, under the prodding of distributor counsel, shortly after the strike began, investigated the union demands of the distributors that they stop delivering film to theatre accounts not employing Local 306 members, and which last week declared that such a demand, and its natural consequences, was a violation of the anti-trust laws. From the very beginning, the major companies, whose theatre affiliates employ hundreds of Local 306 projectionists, termed the demands illegal, though it was threatened that the entire membership of the IATSE would join, and tie up every theatre in the country, and even coast production.

The strike started on March 27th, with the refusal of home office and exchange projectionists to work. Local 306 picket lines in front of the exchanges prevented members of the Local B-51, exchange employees' union, from working; and the servicing of film was hampered. Distributors immediately drew up an emergency code for "pick-ups" from houses to subsequent run houses, this being done by exhibitors or their representatives, and examinations being done by theatre managers, to the best of their ability. Delivery of new film from exchanges to theatres was not seriously hampered, inasmuch as members of only one carrier company, Horlachers' Delivery Service, were affiliated with an A. F. of L. union.

Federal Action Factor

The union did little beside making desultory efforts to picket home offices, half hearted threats to call out all its members in theatres, partial and quickly rescinded enlistment of laboratory and newsreel technicians. The inference of New York observers was that the action by major company attorneys in enlisting Department of Justice investigators, their almost immediate drawing up of injunction papers which they held in abeyance, and the appeals to Mayor La Guardia and the New York State Mediation board by the independent and affiliated exhibitor holders of Local 306 contracts, prevented more drastic union action.

However, it also is inferred that the wage and hour demands were the primary purpose of the union heads who ostensibly had threatened a strike in the whole industry to convert some 75 theatres in the New York area owned by a few independent Brooklyn operators, by the Century and Cocalis chains, and employing members of the Empire State union. Strength to this inference is lent by the fact that the wage and hour demands were not generally known, even to the members of Local 306, till the last day.

At midweek, the sole dispute remaining was whether the agreement of the union with the majors was to be retroactive to September, 1937, or September, 1938. Should it be the former, a new agreement would have to be signed this coming September, as the contract is said to be for two years.

The strike lasted 12 days. About 60 home office and exchange projectionists were directly involved. Expected to be in the contract, at mid-week, was the stipulation that employment hours be reduced from 38 to 35 hours weekly. The union was refused its demand that two men be employed in all projection rooms, whether closed or not.

The absorption of Empire State by the Local 306, advanced earlier during the strike as a possible settlement, was understood this week to be a possibility, despite the Empire contracts with the independent theatres and circuits. A meeting on next Tuesday, of Empire, may produce an invitation to Joseph Basson, president of Local 306. Local 306 officials have termed the Empire State contracts with exhibitors "company union" contracts.

Urges Film Use For Democracy

Advocacy of motion pictures as a counter to "un-American propaganda" in this country and anti-American propaganda in Latin America, and, as a corollary, praise of Warner Brothers' short subjects of patriotic themes, were incorporated in two addresses, delivered Wednesday and Thursday to the Chicago Institute of Human Relations and the Chicago Better Films Council, respectively, by Crane Wilbur, who writes, directs and produces the Warner Brothers' patriotic shorts series.

The National Bureau of Archives, in Washington, checks the script of each short for accuracy, Mr. Wilbur declared. The aim of the shorts, as he put it, is to "give an audience a quick dose of history and patriotism, enhanced by beautiful backgrounds and spiced with exciting drama.

"The result," he continued, "is a slice of novelty in any theatre—and large groups of people throughout the country are being made conscious of the fact that their country and their flag represent what may well be the last frontier of freedom."

Mr. Wilbur prefaced his speeches with a warning that undemocratic propaganda was rife, even in the classrooms of the nation, and said that the Warner shorts were being lent "free of charge to any educational or industrial organization which is equipped to exhibit them to the best advantage."

He mentioned Warner Brothers' current feature, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," as an example of the force with which the company is attacking the problem. He said the story was "factual, not fictional," and that Warner Brothers had "broken all the existing rules, diplomatic and otherwise," by making the picture.

Producers' Labor Contact Conferring with Weber; Writers Guild and Studios Still Trying to Reach Agreement

Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, and representatives of major company theatre affiliates, are scheduled to meet Monday, in New York, with Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, on the latter's proposals that musicians be employed again in the theatres in which they were displaced by talking pictures. Though meetings between this union and theatre representatives have been chronic for many months, no "solutions" have been found yet.

Conversations Begin Soon

Arriving in New York from the coast on Monday, Mr. Casey said no date had been set for the negotiations under the studio basic agreement with the unions, from which the officers of the international IATSE several months ago withdrew, leaving future negotiations to individual member unions. He intimated that talks may shortly begin with the other members of the "Big Four" for extension of the pact beyond its expiration year, 1941.

This week, in Hollywood, the Screen Writers Guild and the producers' attorney still were trying to reach an agreement.

A tentative agreement was reported to have been reached in Hollywood regarding charges brought by Jeff Kibre and a minority of Local 37 against the IATSE and producers.

On Sunday, members of the disident union, Local 37, wired Frank Murphy, United States attorney general, for an investigation into "labor racketeering."

Meanwhile, the California District Court of Appeals ruled that closed shop union contracts were illegal in California, a ruling which may be far reaching.

To State Supreme Court

The case upon which the ruling was based, will be taken to the state supreme court.

In New York City, Supreme Court Justice Phillip McCook, in reserving decision on applications to annul a police department ban on "sandwich men," remarked that union pickets had just as great a "nuisance value," and implied in further remarks that they, too, might "just as well" be banned.

In New York also, Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand A. Pecora on Monday appointed Harry C. Kane as referee to pass upon the application of the state Labor Relations Board to penalize six Long Island theatres for failing to reinstate six Local 306 projectionists, as ordered by the board.

Also in New York, the various theatrical unions have been meeting with World's Fair representatives to set wage and hour schedules.

A New York Theatrical Trades Council has been formed to deal with the Fair. On it are Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the American Federation of Actors; Jack Rosenberg, of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians; Charles Downs, Local 644, cameramen; Sal Scappa, Local 52, studio mechanics; Tom Murtha, Local 4, Brooklyn stagehands; Joseph Basson, president of the Local 306.

In Pittsburgh, Local 171, projectionists voted last week to continue under the IATSE affiliation for two more years.

FRENCH BILL RETAINS DUBBING TAX THREAT

American Distributors Oppose Measure Now Up to Deputies; Double Bill Clause Dropped

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

The cinema bill, drafted and subsequently revised by Jean Zay, French minister of national education, of which the highlights of the first draft were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of February 4, is now before Parliament and is the subject of wide discussion in cinema circles in Paris. The main clauses eliminated in the bill as finally introduced in the Chamber of Deputies on March 30, were the limitation to 10,000 feet of the length of cinema programs and direct collection in theatres by the Film Authors' societies of their percentages.

Dubbing Tax Threatened

American interests were chiefly concerned in the provision limiting the length of the programs as it would have eliminated double feature programs and consequently halved the present sales of American films in France. But the bill still includes some threats against the American motion picture industry. Indeed, the preamble includes the following paragraph:

"The bill reserves the possibility of establishing by decree in accord with France's present international engagements, a dubbing tax. This measure, which has already been adopted by many countries, is made legitimate by the necessity of protecting French producers against the competition of foreign films which come to France entirely amortized and are rented at very low prices."

American film officials in Paris have pointed out that this preamble is in error inasmuch as it indirectly refers to American products which constitute 90 per cent of the foreign films imported in France.

"Contrary to the statement," it was said, "American films are not amortized before they become export products, and secondly there are not many countries which also charge dubbing tax. In fact, there is only one—Italy.

"It is also false that American dubbed films are rented in France at very low prices. Some of them are rented at high rates, some at low rates, just like the French films. It is certain that films such as "Adventures of Robin Hood" or "Gunga Din" would not be rented to French exhibitors at the same cost as a supporting comedy.

"This accusation against our business is made with an intentionally misleading purpose."

Authors' Society Clause Feared

Elimination of the clause concerning the creation of film authors' societies which would collect directly in the theatres the percentage of receipts going to the authors, producers, and distributors, brought relief to the industry. This provision had been vehemently opposed as it would have given complete control of the industry to the writers. The bill is it now stands has been referred to the Committee of Education and Fine Arts of the Chamber of Deputies for study and discussion. It is not considered likely that its provisions will be changed before public hearings which are set for the near future.

The provisions most attacked by exhibitors were those concerning the limitation of programs, the new authors' royalties and other fees, and collection in the theatres. All these clauses have been eliminated. The only provision remaining which is objectionable to American interests is the threat of a dubbing tax, but it does not seem that, because of the Franco-American trade agreement, this clause can be applied to American films any more than the limitation of the length of the programs could have been maintained.

As soon as he has concluded his work in Deanna Durbin's new picture, Charles Boyer will return to Paris to star in a French picture to be produced by André Daven, who made "Heart of Paris" and "Orage," Mr. Boyer's last picture made in France.

The new film, entitled "Le Corsaire" ("The Corsair"), is an adaptation of a successful play by Marcel Achard, author of "Heart of Paris." At present Marc Allégret, who has withdrawn his engagement with Alexander Korda to direct "The Thief of Bagdad," is working on the screen play of "The Corsair" together with Marcel Achard and M. Lustig. Production will start as soon as Mr. Boyer arrives in France, about July 1. Outdoor scenes will be made on the French Riviera up to August 10, and production will continue afterwards in a Paris studio.

The remainder of the cast of "The Corsair" has not been decided. The feminine leading part may be given to a new actress.

Daven also plans a film on Parisian life of which the tentative title is "Simone de Belleville."

New Studio in South France

Emile Couzinet, one of the leading French distributors and exhibitors who controls an important circuit in the French South and Southwest, in the Marseilles, Toulouse and Bordeaux regions, has become a producer.

Mr. Couzinet has built modern film studios in one of the most popular sea-resorts of the French Southwest, at Royan, 60 miles north of Bordeau and only 350 miles from Paris. The new studios were inaugurated with the making of "Le Club des Fadas, which Mr. Couzinet directed himself.

The main advantage of this decentralization comes from the fact that electric current and workers' hours are 30 per cent cheaper than in Paris, and that this region provides a rural countryside valuable for location work. Besides, the sky is nearly always fine with a small yearly rainfall. Mr. Couzinet estimates that production of a film in his studios will reduce production expenses by 25 to 30 per cent.

French Television Launched

The formal inauguration of French television in the commercial field took place on March 31 when at the Theatre Marigny, Paris, Jules Jullien, Minister of Post, Telegraph and Telephone (P. T. T.), introduced to a large audience the first public showing of television transmission on a big screen measuring six feet by four feet.

Mr. Jullien announced that the experimental period of television had concluded and that, starting April 15, the French National Broadcasting system would broadcast television shows every night.

Mr. Jullien's speech was followed by two addresses by Jean Perrin and Marcel Prévost.

The transmission, from the television studio of the Minister of Post and Telegraph on a wave-length of 46 megacycles for pictures and 42 megacycles for the sound from the aerial established on the top of the Eiffel Tower, included some dances, songs and an extract of Jules Romains' play, "Dr. Knock," with Louis Jouvet. The television cameras used in the studios were the current Emitron cameras (Thomson Houston-Marconi) adopted by the French P. T. T. and the reception apparatus, a cathode oscillograph receiver manufactured by the Campagnie Française de Télévision (Barthélemy system).

The pictures were of 455 line definition and appeared rather clear and sharp.

The transmissions brought television sharply to the attention of the film industry, but the question of competition depends on the quality of programs developed. These remain a difficult problem.

At the present, in spite of the fact that a few radio manufacturers have tried to introduce television receivers, here have been very few sales. Prices start at 7,000 francs ($200).

7 RESTRICTIVE BILLS UP IN PENNSYLVANIA

Measures Range from Limiting of Program Length to Requiring Lighted Clocks in Theatres

This week's assortment of legislative proposals involving motion pictures is as varied as those presented since the legislatures started to meet for this session last January, ranging all the way from limitations on the length of programs to compelling exhibitors to have lighted clocks.

Seven Bills in Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania was the center of most legislative activity. Seven bills to restrict the motion picture industry came in just before the deadline for the submission of new measures in the lower house this session.

Maurice Duplessis, Premier of Quebec, has withdrawn the power to tax chain stores, while Premier Hepburn of Ontario has sponsored an increase in the gasoline tax, putting at rest all thought of a revival of the amusement tax.

The Missouri anti-ASCAP bill has been reintroduced, and the Iowa Senate has passed and sent to the House a compromise chain store tax bill, after excluding an amendment which would have included theatres in the bill.

In Pennsylvania, six bills were introduced by Republicans and two by Democrats.

Assemblyman Alvin Hocke, Republican, presented a measure for theatre divorcement which would impose a penalty of a $10,000 fine or imprisonment of not more than one year, or both, upon distributors or producers who also own or control, in whole or in part, motion picture theatres.

A bill presented by Robert Boyd, Republican, would require an asbestos or a steel curtain and a main control lighting switchboard in every theatre. Thomas Allen and Thomas Van Belle, Democrats, jointly introduced a bill prohibiting increased admissions on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays.

Mr. Boyd also presented two more measures, providing that there must be as many projectionists in a booth as there are projection machines, and that inspectors of projection machines must have at least 10 years experience as projectionists.

E. J. Balliet, Republican, sponsored a bill requiring the annual payment of an operators fee of $500, and an annual fee of $200 for each automatic vending machine in a theatre.

E. Kent Kane, Republican, offered a bill calling for a tax of one cent on each 25 cent theatre ticket.

In addition, enactment of amusement tax legislation is believed to be a possibility in Pennsylvania as a result of the court decision invalidating the foreign state franchise tax.

Quebec's Premier Duplessis, in a recent statement, declared that neither municipalities nor the provinces had the right to impose levies which restrict trade. The declaration paralleled recent legislative action and court decisions in the United States.

Ontario Exhibitors Relieved

With the Ontario legislature having put into immediate effect an increase in the gasoline tax as a means of obtaining more revenue, indications are that exhibitors of the Province will go through another year without an amusement tax. Premier M. F. Hepburn sponsored the gasoline measure.

The anti-ASCAP bill sponsored by the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, which recently was discarded by the Missouri legislature's revision committee, has again been introduced by Representatives Turner and Hamlin, who introduced the original bill, like the original, the present bill is based on the Washington law, and in effect prevents the fixing of prices on copyrighted music or other copyrighted work by two or more separate copyright holders.

This is a revision session of the legislature, and only bills which meet the "revision" specification are being given serious consideration. The two representatives include in the bill the statement that it is a revision measure because it deals with a change of existing statutes, those dealing with monopoly.

In addition to passing the compromise chain store tax bill, which does not include theatres, the Iowa Senate has passed a measure allowing the showing of prize fight films. Having been passed by the House, the bill will become law with the Governor's signature.

Clocks in Theatres

The judiciary committee of the Milwaukee common council has recommended passage of a bill providing for an illuminated clock in the auditorium of each of the city's theatres.

The Evanston council has passed a law taxing all truckers entering that city from Chicago for commercial purposes, which will make film carriers take out licenses in order to deliver films.

In three states recent action has been taken on the question of Sunday showings. The Maine Senate has passed a bill legalizing the showings; with the House already having passed the measure. The Sunday showing of films in Wilmington is close to realization with the passage of a bill legalizing this procedure by the Delaware House. The Senate has already passed the bill, which now awaits action by Governor Richard McMullen. The bill provides for Sunday films after two p.m. if a referendum in Wilmington approves.

An ordinance proposed in Lincoln, Nebraska, which would limit movie programs to 135 minutes, has received an adverse ruling by City Attorney Miles, who claimed the City Council was not empowered to act on it. Five theatres had favored and three had opposed the ordinance.

RKO Invites Fair Visitors

An invitation to exhibitors in the United States and Canada who plan to visit the New World's Fair to make their headquarters at the company home office was contained in a letter sent this week to every RKO Radio account.

Signed by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution, the letter said that an Exhibitor's Information and Lounge Room on the seventh floor of the RKO Building in Rockefeller Center is being designed and that H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for the company, will be on hand to greet exhibitors.

It is planned to have visiting stars appear at the headquarters at stated hours during the day, and RKO executives will also meet the exhibitors there. Other features include a bulletin service on industry activities and the distribution of souvenirs, guide books on the Fair, etc. All preparations are being handled by Mr. Richey.

Scottish Film Journal Starts

The Federation of Scottish Film Societies, which was founded about four years ago, has inaugurated Film Forum, a monthly publication whose aim will be to elucidate the objects and ideals of the film society movement and to provide a service of news of the activities of the Scottish societies and of developments in the cinema likely to interest film society members.

Published in Edinburgh the Film Forum editorial board is composed of Norman Wilson, H. Forsyth Hardy, D. Paterson Walker and J. A. Paton Walker. The first issue appeared in March.

A regular feature of the publication is the review section, compiled by Mr. Hardy, film critic of The Scotsman, which will deal with the outstanding films of the month appearing in the commercial cinemas.

Critical and biographical notes on producers, directors, actors and technicians will also appear from time to time to acquaint readers with the achievements of the men who make the films.

In the first issue under the heading "They Make the Movies" there appears a biography of John Grierson, British documentary film producer who was born in Scotland and graduated from Glasgow University. Mr. Grierson is credited in the biography with being largely responsible for the development of the British documentary film movement.

After the World War Mr. Grierson obtained a Rockefeller research fellowship in social psychology and spent three years in America. It was through his interest in social psychology he entered films. Joining the Empire Marketing Board, he studied with Walter Crichton, the scope of the cinema as a propaganda medium, sold the idea to the Board and persuaded them to let him make "Drifters," a documentary film, which "virtually created the British documentary movement."

Outline Film Aid To New York Fund

Plans for the motion picture industry's aid to the Greater New York Fund were outlined at a meeting held Monday in the offices of J. Robert Rubin, chairman of the Motion Picture Division. The drive starts Monday and runs to May 30th.

Attending the meeting were Harold Rodner, Warner Brothers; Ned Depinet, RKO; Arthur Israel, Paramount; Norris Wilcox, United Artists; Harry Brandt, Independent Theatres Owners Association; Ben Moss, and William Orr, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Colvin Brown, Quigley Publications.

Mr. Rubin said that last year the industry contributed $65,000 to the Fund and that this year its quota would be $100,000. The Fund has a goal of $10,000,000, he said.

In addition to a general committee composed of 20 or more industry leaders a special committee of exhibitors will be organized. Both committees will meet at a luncheon next Wednesday at the Hotel Astor, to discuss plans for the enrollment of every exhibitor in the metropolitan area.

ONE-YEAR RADIO LICENSES IN SIGHT; NO SCRIPT "CENSORING" BY FILMS

Lengthened Period of Permits Would Help Stabilize Broadcasting Industry, U. S. Commission Reports

Operating permits for one year, instead of for six months, as at present, are in sight for radio broadcasters, as recommended last Thursday by the Federal Communications Commission, at Washington, in a final report on FCC recommendations for new practice and procedure for radio.

Sees Aid to Stabilization

"In view of the evidence submitted at the hearing and other information available, it appears that the broadcast industry has reached a point where it is advisable to increase the license period to at least one year," the FCC committee reported.

"It is believed that this action will assist to stabilize the broadcast industry without reducing the necessary control of the commission over licenses."

The recommendation followed testimony by Elliott Roosevelt, president of the Texas State Network, Inc., who told the FCC that the short license period caused a "censorship of fear" in the industry.

The President's son, and other witnesses, had asked for licenses based on a station's good behavior, instead of for a specific period.

The industry as a whole has been demanding a three-year license or a permanent license revocable only for cause. The present law makes three years the maximum period for which the FCC may issue a license.

The three-member FCC committee—Norman S. Case, T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne—made a study of super-power and other engineering phases of radio.

Three Channels Proposed

The committee recommended the establishment of three standard broadcast channels and four general classes of standard broadcast stations. The extension of the use of duplicate transmitters was advocated, as well as increasing the power of stations where needed and where technically feasible.

It recommended extension of the broadcast band from 550 to 1,600 kilocycles, inclusive, instead of from 500 to 1,500, as at present. No new allocation of stations was proposed in the band 1,500 to 1,600, on which frequencies four special broadcast stations are now assigned. These stations are to be classed as regional channel stations, instead of special broadcast stations.

With regard to superpower stations, the report reinforced the position of the FCC which refused to renew the license of the Crosley Corporation's station, WLW, Cincinnati, for 500 kilowatts. The 500-kilowatt license expired March 1 and WLW is suing for its renewal.

The committee held that the "considerations governing the interest of the public in general broadcasting structure are too great to warrant taking speculative risks, unsupported by adequate data, even though it be true from a technical standpoint that 500-kilowatt power is one of the methods to improve service in rural areas."

The full FCC commission will permit interested parties to file exceptions and will hear oral argument, before the report is taken for final action.

The report traced the importance of the broadcasting industry from the viewpoint of advertising, investment, profits and social values in detail, remarking that "profits should not be lost sight of as a legitimate factor under the American system of private enterprise."

Stations numbering 624 had net income for 1937 from broadcasting services totaling $18,260,003, the report noted. Of these, 180 stations, or 28.6 per cent, showed a total loss of $1,699,282. The remaining 444 stations had net income of $19,959,285.

In the more than 500-page report, the committee analyzed broadcasting programs, finding that 52.45 per cent of all time of all stations on the air is devoted to music, but that while stations with advertising revenue of $1,000,000 or more use music in only 37 per cent of their broadcasts, the small commercial stations, earning up to $15,000 devote 61 per cent of their time to music.

During the period from 1922 to 1937 more than 53,000,000 radio sets were sold with a retail value of nearly $4,000,000,000, and the present-day investment of the broadcasting industry in stations and equipment is approximately $50,000,000, with another $9,000,000 in network plant equipment. Time sales of the industry, nets and stations, in 1937, amounted to nearly $118,000,000, and during an average week in 1938 the industry employed 17,085 full-time and 5,820 part-time employees.

SCREEN ACTORS GUILD RENEWING SHOW

Radio programs of interest to the motion picture industry because of their competitive value appear to have the following summer prospects:

The Screen Actors Guild air program is expected to continue, its sponsor, the Gulf Oil Company, having exercised its option;

The March of Time may cease on April 28, its sponsor, Time, Inc., ending its obligations then, though Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, the agency, is seeking another sponsor;

"What's My Name?" is expected to replace the Fred Allen program;

"We, the People" is to last through the summer;

A replacement for the Jack Benny program has not been confirmed.

Building Two in Seaford

Two new theatres are to be built at Seaford, Delaware, by the Schine circuit and by T. W. Ayres. Mr. Ayres is the owner of the Palace, in Seaford. The town has a population of 3,000. The theatres will cost approximately $200,000. Reason for such expansive building is expected erection in the town of an $8,000,000 nylon plant by the DuPont Company, and consequent employment of large numbers of persons.

First Commandment Film

Owen Crump has completed the screenplay of the first of Warners' short series based on the Ten Commandments. It will be called "Thou Shalt Have no Other Gods before Me."

NBC Says It Will Not Tolerate Submission to Studios of Material of Network "Gossip" Commentators

Persistent reports heard in Hollywood that radio broadcasters or radio's commercial sponsors would permit the motion picture industry to "censor" film news, reviews and other film material used by the network "gossip" commentators were blasted last weekend by the National Broadcasting Company, which stated flatly that no such procedure would be tolerated.

The air "gossipers" continual use of material considered objectionable by the film business and its Hollywood stars and personalities has been the cause of many complaints over several years.

On Friday, in Hollywood, Don E. Gilman, west coast division manager of NBC, issued a statement denying that the network had agreed to permit any censorship of its commentators' scripts by any persons connected with film industry. The Hollywood denial was prompted by various reports and rumors that all three networks—National, Columbia and Mutual—had agreed with the studios and the Association of Motion Picture Producers to permit a studio committee to review, prior to broadcasts, all scripts of the "gossipers."

Mr. Gilman said, "Any statements that NBC and the Producers' Association have reached an agreement on the censorship of radio commentators' material are absolutely false." He added, however: "We might consult with others in efforts to promote industrial harmony."

Producers' Association officers recalled that Lenox Lohr, NBC president, while in Hollywood recently, declared that radio and motion pictures had entered into a gentleman's agreement that radio would not treat films in a derogatory manner. With this in mind he had talked with some of the air "gossipers" who agreed to change scripts voluntarily.

Kansas City Move

The Kansas City Sound Service Company, and its affiliate, American Films, Inc., have moved from 126 West 18th Street to 1818 Wyandotte Street, Kansas City. The move increases office space of the two companies.

Kraker District Manager

Jack Kraker, for the last five years Philadelphia branch manager of the Ross Federal Service, was elevated last week to district manager of the Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia territories.

To Irving Brown of Warner Brothers' home office advertising art department went first award last week in the World's Fair poster and car card contest sponsored by the Hayden Planetarium.

Altec Service Corporation has moved its Scranton office to the Coal Exchange Building, 130 Wyoming Avenue, of that city.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

On Location in Jungle

Count and Countess Keller, producers of the World Window series of color shorts, are now on location in the Indian jungle. A complete unit of technicians, cameras and cars left Bombay for a 20,000 trip early in February.

The Kellers seek to capture the thrills of the jungle and a tiger hunt and the splendor and pomp of palaces and temples.

John Hanau, director and editor, has gone north, for it has been necessary to purchase an extra car to carry the additional equipment. Already five automobiles form the caravan, with sound studio and engineering shop included. Personnel include Hans Nieter, director of the company, and Jack Cardiff, chief cameraman. Distribution will be through United Artists.

Joins Korda

Harold Boxall, for some time production manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, has joined Alexander Korda as general manager of Alexander Korda Productions, Ltd.

Mr. Boxall was previously associated with Paramount British, Gainsborough Pictures and Gaumont British.

At Ealing

With the completion of work upon "Young Men's Fancy," directed by Robert Stevenson, production launches forth at the Ealing Studios on a new Jimmy O'Dea comedy "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," which Walter Forde is to direct from a story by Ian Dalrymple. Collaborating with Dalrymple are Roger McDougall and Allan McKinnon, authors of the now classic "This Man Is News."

"Cheer, Boys, Cheer" is a comedy woven around the struggles of a small brewery against a huge combine.

Animal Feature

"Zoo in Spring," an animal feature directed by Widgey Newman and dealing with the return to activity of hibernating animals in the zoo, has been completed by AIP, Ltd.

AIP has just finished, also, "Derby Secrets" Number 6, the 15th annual edition, under the title "As Usual—The Winner."

Another "Riley"

Oswald Mitchell, responsible for the local "Old Mother Riley" successes, is due to make another one, "Old Mother Riley, M. P."

Meanwhile, at the Walton on Thames Studios, he will produce a variety film for Butcher's Film Service, and for this has engaged numerous leading vaudeville and music-hall acts.

BRITISH COMEDY AT NEW YORK FAIR

A comedy film with an unusual history and produced by a London doctor is one of those to be shown in the British Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. It is Dr. Richard Massingham's "Tell Me If It Hurts". This comedy will be the only British amateur film to be represented at the Fair.

Dr. Massingham financed and produced the film, wrote the script, directed and photographed it, and planned the sound track. The film has been shown in London's West End and has had an enthusiastic press.

Adaptation

Leslie Banks in "The Cross Roads," a new Associated British production at Elstree, plays the role of a war-wounded man suffering from loss of memory, who is mistaken for a wealthy business man, whereas in fact he is a cheap crook.

The film is an adaptation of the French production "Carrefour," and is being produced by Walter Mycroft and directed by Thomas Bentley. In charge of the camera is Gunther Krampf.

Two other pictures are on the floor at the AB studio at Elstree, "Just William," from a Richmal Crompton story, and "Poison Pen," adapted from Richard Llewellyn's play. The "Poison Pen" cast includes Flora Robson, Geoffrey Toone and Peter Murray Hill. Paul Stein directs.

Itemized

Sydney Howard, noted North Country comedian, has been assigned by Robert T. Kane of Twentieth Century-Fox to play opposite Gracie Fields in the new comedy of shipbuilding "Shipyard Sally." He will have the role of Gracie's screen uncle. Monty Banks will direct.

Pinewood Studios has closed down for a minimum of three months. Closure is due to the fact that there are not a sufficient number of British pictures to warrant the studios keeping open.

Walter Greenwood, author of the stage success, "Love on the Dole," is to write the film treatment of his novel, "His Worship, the Mayor," for production at the Ealing Studios by Michael Balcon. Ralph Keene will be associated with Greenwood in his work.

"His Worship, the Mayor," a satire upon local government in an English provincial town, tells the story of two families, one rising to wealth and the other sinking to poverty.

Picks Sound City

Sound City, part of which is to be turned into a zoo, has been selected by Mario Zampi, producer of "French Without Tears," as the studio wherein he will make this film for Paramount. Anthony Asquith is to direct.

Zampi has been in Paris engaging French artists for various roles. He will use the English version of the play, the action of which takes place mainly in France and not, as in the French version, mainly in England.

Price of Coal

A few months ago a new type of film was released by Paramount in Britain titled "Inside Goods." It included an actuality study of the life of an R. A. F. cadet, and a statement of the case for and against fox-hunting. The film was devoted exclusively to affairs in the British Isles, and was shown in more than 1,500 cinemas in Britain.

Encouraged by the success of the film, Paramount have now made, and will show shortly, "Inside Goods" Number 2, which again concerns itself with topics of domestic interest.

One sequence deals with the price of coal and considers not only the economic price of the market, but also the price paid in travail and toil by the miner and his kith. Another sequence concerns itself with dress as it affects the modern woman.

Travels

A film unit which aims to tour the world and make a natural color record of its travels, is leaving Britain under the banner of Stapley Expeditions, of London. They will be away 12 months and will travel 20,000 miles through 15 countries in two motor cars. One of these has been equipped to operate as a mobile unit.

The expedition aims to make 12 pictures, some of which will be documentary, some nature studies, and some travelogues.

Countries through which the unit will travel include Switzerland, Italy, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Turkey, each of which will be the subject of an individual film. Afghanistan is to be the subject of a study; Australia will form the background for two films to be produced on a coast-to-coast tour from Perth to Brisbane. The United States will be seen, this time, through the eyes of an English cameraman and an English director. The New York World's Fair will be included in the subjects covered.

Advertising Films

Advertising films have been exhibited in 4,300 of the 5,309 motion picture theatres in Great Britain and Ireland, Harold B. Saward of Saward, Baker & Co., Ltd., told the Regent Advertising Club in London. He added that there was room for considerable improvement in the advertising product.

ELECTRICS CLEAR WAY TO PRODUCERS' USE OF FILM-SOUND FOR TELEVISION

AT&T and RCA Will Not Restrict Motion Picture Recording Licensees from Participation in Television

The "big electrics," American Telephone and Radio Corporation, will not stand in the way of their respective motion picture recording licensees' participation in television by imposing any license or mechanical restrictions or royalty fees. RCA this week cleared the way for its sound licensees to utilize the art, and AT&T "reached the verge" of similar action.

Until the present the position of motion picture sound licensees concerning the telecasting of sound pictures made under the license of either RCA or the Telephone Company had not been formally and officially determined. But a supplement to the "standard motion picture producers'" agreements covering the use of RCA Photophone sound-film recordings for television broadcasting purposes was mailed last Thursday to all of the company's recording licensees by Harry L. Sommerer, RCA Photophone Division head.

RCA Refers to Standard Film

The RCA statement referred alone to "standard motion picture producers," which leaves the position of RCA's many non-theatrical producers undetermined with relation to sound-film television rights under RCA licensees.

"The new television amendment (to existing film-sound licensees) clears the way for RCA's recording licensees not only to utilize existing motion picture sound recordings at no extra charge, but also for them to make motion picture sound recordings especially for television broadcasting purposes," said the statement from RCA's Sommerer. "The same royalty rates applying to sound recordings for motion picture audience purposes will be applied to RCA recorded films for television broadcasting."

Developing Sources

One of the immediate results of the action of the electrics is expected to be more rapid development of a source of material in films for telecasting for and in behalf of the telecasting companies, one of the leaders of which is RCA's own National Broadcasting subsidiary, and officials of which have frequently admitted that films are best suited for telecasting. The basic reason for this is the greater cost of production of plays in television studios, against the films that would come ready-made from Hollywood.

ERPI "On the Verge"

It is presumed that in the cases of both RCA and Telephone, theatre reproducing licensees will get similar leeway both as to conditions and royalties.

While American Telephone's sound affiliate, Electrical Research Products, has not yet reached the stage of actually inserting a supplementary television clause in the recording licensees of its Hollywood producer clients, Daniel C. Collins, vice president in charge of corporate relations, admitted on Tuesday that negotiations with licensees which have been conducted since last October are "on the verge" of consummation.

In this case, Erpi is to replace virtually all of the existing agreements with new ones incorporating other phases besides television.

Hollywood Draws Industry Technicians To Spring Convention of Engineers

Two hundred technicians and engineers from the laboratories of motion picture equipment and technical organizations will assemble at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood Monday for the spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, to discuss and report on the technical progress of the industry, in production, distribution and exhibition. Except for registration and some general reports on Monday, the meeting will not get under way until Tuesday and will run through Friday.

Summarizing advances made during the past year in various technological phases of the art, the papers to be read will deal principally with television, projection and sound, laboratory and photographic practices and studio technique, with the semi-annual banquet set for Thursday evening at the Roosevelt. (A complete list of the papers and other convention details appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week, on page 70.)

Baird Proposes Color For Theatre Television

John L. Baird, inventor of Baird television, "has completed successfully the initial experiments of televising in natural colors," according to a cable from Isidore Ostrer, chairman of Gaumont British, received by GB in New York on Tuesday. The experimental laboratories at the Baird factory in Sydenham, England, have been occupied with this development for the past year.

"There are still many problems to be solved before color will be available to the public, but the first tests made Baird executives optimistic that it would be realized sooner than anticipated," it was said.

Gaumont British theatres obtained the rights to televise the Tommy Farr-Red Burman prize fight held in London, Thursday.

Baird engineers installed special ringside lighting. The canvas floor was yellow and the blue blue instead of white to give greater definition.

Roosevelt First Television "Star"

President Roosevelt will be the first guest, and featured "star" at the start of television's first regular service to the public on April 30, when he opens the New York World's Fair with an address in front of the Federal Government Building, facing the Court of Peace, at the Fair grounds, in Flushing. The National Broadcasting Company's mobile unit will pick up the President's image, relay it to the Empire State Building transmitter, from whence it will be visible to receivers in a 55-mile radius.

On the same day, television receivers of RCA, Philco, Zenith and others will be on sale for the first time.

Taxes for Television Proposed Already

Phelps Phelps, New York State senator and Manhattan Democrat, offered the first tax proposal on television, still in its infancy, Monday night, at Albany. Commercial rights on televised, motion picture or radio broadcasting of boxing, sparring or wrestling bouts held under the Law of 1920 would be subject to a five per centum gross tax, payable to the State, if the Phelps bill is passed.

Amending Chapter 912, the Phelps bill would add the following language: "Gross income received from the sale of broadcasting, motion picture and television rights shall be subject to a tax of five centum, which shall be paid to the Department of State."

The Manhattan Senator, heard on Sunday nights over Station WMCA and the Inter-City Network, New York, said the bill was not aimed at the industries affected and pointed out that the present law taxes both radio and motion picture rights of contests in this state.

"Televised pictures of fights and wrestling bouts will undoubtedly be commercially sponsored," Senator Phelps asserted, "and the promoters, in paying the State of New York on the gross proceeds to the extent of five per cent, are not being discriminated against since they already do substantially that on their film and radio rights."

Lohrenz Heads New Warners' District

A seventh selling district has been established by Warner Brothers.

The new district comprises Memphis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, and Des Moines. The first two were formerly in the Southern District; the latter, in the Midwest. Rud Lohrenz, formerly Midwest District manager, with headquarters in Chicago, is the new district head, based in Kansas City.

Fred Jack, of Dallas, heads the Southern District; and Henry Herbel, now of Chicago, heads the Midwest. Mr. Herbel was promoted from San Francisco branch managership.

Altec Signs Circuit

The Wilmer and Vincent Corporation has signed with Altec Service Corporation to service the sound equipment in the circuit's theatres in Allentown, Easton, Johnstown and Reading, Pa., and Richmond, Va. A. J. Rademacher negotiated the contract for Altec.

Randforce Amusement Corporation has appointed Altec Service Corporation to service the 41 Randforce theatres in Brooklyn and Queens. Bert Sanford, Jr., negotiated for Altec.

Stockholder Seeks Pathe Film Records

An application for an order directing the officers and directors of Pathe Film Corporation to submit the books and records of the company for inspection by Anna Bashlow, holder of 200 shares of common stock, was made this week to Alfred Frankenthaler, New York supreme court justice.

The petition asserts that immediate inspection is "imperative," since Pathe is presently transferring its assets under a plan presented to stockholders on February 16, 1939, and approved by the stockholders. The petitioner claims unexplained expenses indicated in the 1936 and 1937 financial statements of the company, and charges impropriety in acquisition of stock of Grand National Films, Inc. The petitioner further charges the evasion of her demands by officers of the company.

Plagiarism Suit Plea

Application to examine Darryl F. Zanuck and Samuel G. Engel before trial has been made in New York supreme court by Stephen Tamas, plaintiff in a plagiarism suit against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. He claims his scenario, "Stowaway," was plagiarized in the film starring Shirley Temple.

$9,000 Verdict Awarded

A New York supreme court jury this week awarded a verdict of $9,000 to Harrison Forman, cameraman, against Time, Inc., after a week's trial before Justice Timothy A. Leary. Mr. Forman claimed that in 1937 he had been asked by Time to shoot newsreels of the war in China, and that he was to be paid for all film footage shipped to Time.

Cosmopolitan Acquires Studio

The entire facilities of National Studios, New York, have been acquired by the Cosmopolitan Studios, also of New York, Herman Rosenberg, Cosmopolitan president, announced this week. Among National executives who will join Cosmopolitan are Dave Brandies, for 22 years in charge of production; I. Schnapp, head of the art department for the last 20 years; Claire Miller, color specialist, and Ken Walmsley and Fred Bram of the sales staff.

Morley Reelected President

J. Kenfield Morley has been reelected president and a director of the Advitagraph Corporation. Mr. Morley served for several years as sales promotion manager of the Bell and Howell Company, Chicago, and prior to this, was with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Stern in Bank Post

Lawrence Stern, of Stern Wampler and Company, brokers, who have been prominent in the financial affairs of Balaban and Katz and other theatre circuits, has been named chairman of the executive committee of the American National Bank and Trust Company.

Columbia Names Omaha Manager

J. H. Jacobs, former salesman in Columbia's Minneapolis exchange, has been appointed branch manager of the company's Omaha office, to succeed I. M. Weiner, resigned.

Two Mexican Units Formed

Two new motion picture production companies have been formed in Mexico. Francisco C. Ibarra heads a unit in Tia Juana which has begun construction of a studio for production of Spanish language films. Other officers are Silverio Romero, secretary, and Gumersindo Ibarra, treasurer. In Mexico City Jose J. Reynoso, Jr., and J. R. Baires plan to produce five features this year, all in Spanish.

Universal Promotes Three

Three promotions in Universal branch offices were announced this week. G. C. Craddock, former manager of the Portland exchange, has been appointed manager of the Indianapolis exchange, succeeding Floyd Brown, resigned. R. O. Wilson, salesman in the Portland territory, has been named manager of the exchange. W. M. Richardson, formerly manager of the Charlotte branch, has been appointed branch manager at New Orleans.

Sues to Stop Disney-Stokowski Picture

Mark S. Tutelman, an advertising man, has filed suit in common pleas court in Philadelphia to restrain Leopold Stokowski, Walt Disney, Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., Deems Taylor, the Philadelphia Orchestra Association and RKO Radio. The plaintiff claims he conceived the idea of a production synchronizing symphonic music of classical renown with animated cartoons from a prepared scenario and that he suggested the plan to Mr. Stokowski.

Mr. Tutelman further charges that Mr. Stokowski got Mr. Disney to use the method and he is trying to restrain the production of the use of the plan and method. Mr. Taylor, New York critic and composer, was retained by Mr. Disney as narrator.

File $250,000 Suit on "Snow White" Song

A song plagiarism suit for $250,000 damages has been filed in New York supreme court by Modest Altschuler against Walt Disney Enterprises, Inc., Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Irving Berlin, Inc. and Frank Churchill.

The plaintiff, composer of "Russian Soldier's Song," claims plagiarism in "Whistle While You Work," written by Mr. Churchill, and used in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." An injunction and accounting are also sought. Defendants deny the charges and claim that the plaintiff's song was uncopyrighted and part of the public domain.

Disney Suit Settled

The suit of Hamilton Enterprises, Inc., and Walt Disney Productions against a group of Kansas City drug, food and printing companies has been settled. It was based on charges of violation of copyright and trademark.

Director from Germany Hits Nazis' "Manpower"

"The actual physical manpower" behind the motion picture industry in Germany "is perhaps the most neglected and defective of all current European film output," according to Anthony Nelle, who arrived in New York this week from Berlin, en route to Hollywood with the hope of resuming activities in California.

"The foreign scenarists and technicians lack the training required for even conventional film production," said Mr. Nelle, who added: "Even their most elaborate efforts can in no way be compared with Hollywood in quality of finished product." He said, however, that "the general array of mechanical equipment of German film companies compares with the finest in Hollywood."

Mr. Nelle was one time production director for the Roxy and some Fox theatres in this country and for the past two years was production director of Ufa-Tobis theatres in Berlin and Babelsberg, all government controlled. He was formerly dancing partner of Pavlova.

Brady; W. R. Allen and B. L. Samuels; T. L. Ward and W. Jones.

Replying to Section A, a great number answered as did L. H. Kelley, who said, "As applied to sound, volume corresponds to the intensity or extent of changes in air pressure as applies to the air waves set up by whatever vibrating medium was their source. Volume may also be defined correctly as the magnitude or intensity of the sound."

Brother Cimoniski made what seems to be a most excellent answer to all four of the questions, but one quite too lengthy.

Another reply that seems informative comes from Brother Graham, who says, "Volume of sound indicates the strength of the impulse received and transmitted by the ear to the brain. It can vary from the listener's 'threshold of hearing' to pain [to the point where its reception becomes painful.] The strength or weakness of sound depends upon the intensity of the intermittent air waves, the medium by which sound is transmitted to the ear."

(B) C. Hawkins says: "Harmonics make it possible for the ear to distinguish one voice or one instrument from another. Did all instruments play the same note—fundamental vibrations of the same frequency—they would all sound exactly alike. It is the harmonics or overtones present in each that enable the human ear to distinguish one from the other. This also is true in the case of two or more persons singing the same song in the same key. Without the harmonics one voice could not be distinguished from the other."

L. H. Kelley says, "Resonance is any reenforcement of sound caused by sympathetic vibration. Sympathetic vibration may be explained by this example: When sound waves from one tuning fork cause a second tuning fork to vibrate, they are said to be in sympathetic vibration."

(B) D. Peacock of the Empress circuit in Fairbanks, Alaska, says: "Harmonics as overtones are important because they give 'life' to the sound. Without them it would be impossible to distinguish between various sounds of the same frequency. The ear could not tell the difference between the violin and piano if both were tuned together and played the same note, if it were not for the overtones.

"As concerns an amplifier, harmonics are detrimental. They serve to distort the sound and must be kept at a minimum if we are to have clarity in our speech and music. One cause of this in amplifiers is improper impedance matching of the amplifier to the speakers. A rough rule is that the load impedance should be approximately twice that of the plate impedance."

(C) J. R. Prater replies, "The range of frequencies audible to the human ear approximates from 16 to 16,000 cycles per second, though this varies to a considerable extent with different individuals, as well as with their age, their state of health, etc. The ear is most sensitive to frequencies near 1,000 cycles. The extreme high and low tones must have relatively high volume before they become audible to the average ear."

(D) A great number replied 1,100 feet per second, though some made this addition: "Speed of sound transmission varies somewhat, though not largely, with temperature and humidity," to which Prater adds, "1,000 feet per second is reasonably accurate and simplifies calculations."

Louis Patz has resigned from Grand National in Cleveland, to join National Screen Service in Milwaukee.

Sulzer Sites Gains In Film Safety

The accomplishments in fire prevention in the motion picture industry was presented last week by A. F. Sulzer, vice-president and assistant general manager of the Eastman Kodak Company, in a paper he read at the Tenth Annual Convention of the Greater New York Safety Council at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Mr. Sulzer traced the history of film from the time Thomas Alva Edison began the manufacture of dry plates in 1880 up to the film currently in use. In 1885 Mr. Edison introduced stripping film, as it was called, which consisted of paper, coated first with a layer of soluble gelatin, then with a thin layer of collodion (nitrocellulose), and finally with a coating of senstized emulsion.

Mr. Edison improved on this film, the speaker said, continuing to use nitrocellulose, which used for photographic purposes is not explosive, but is inflammable. In 1909 the Eastman Kodak Company had developed cellulose acetate to a point where the company felt it could be substituted for nitrocellulose in film, a fire preventive measure. Experience demonstrated that acetate film was not as strong mechanically and producers in 1911 reverted to nitrocellulose film.

The period from 1911 to 1922 was one of research, education, and cooperation; research in methods of making the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures safe to the public and the workers involved.

Beginning in 1922 and continuing up to the present time, Mr. Sulzer said "we have had a long period of consolidation of the progress made and of assimilation of the information developed by experience and experimentation. Although the number of fires and the amount of fire loss caused by film, or in which film became involved, had been small, compared with number and losses from other causes, there had been a number of spectacular fires."

George Roop, motion picture projectionist at Red Bank, N. J., this week was given a suspended sentence of one to three years in state prison, placed on probation for two years and fined $250, to be paid within one year, by John C. Giordano, quarter sessions judge at Freehold. He was convicted of conspiracy on January 24, 1938, to damage the projection machines at the Liberty theatre, Freehold, to force Max Snider, proprietor to unionize his house.

Columbia

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Lammy Simms—Fine family entertainment that did fair at the box office. Better than the first of this series and drew better also. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Lionel Barrymore, Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Mischa Auer —Columbia and Capra have done it again. This picture has everything in the way of entertainment; did not have a single dissatisfied patron. Lionel Barrymore, who always does good acting, is at his best in this picture. Columbia, give us pictures half this good and I'll keep my hat off to you. Patronage above anything in two years. Running time, 124 minutes. Played March 27-28.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End Kids"—A grand picture that pleased those that saw it. The gangster stuff scared some of the women out of coming. But new business made up for that. Come on, W. B., we are waiting for others like this. —Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

BELOVED BRAT: Bonita Granville, Dolores Costello, Donald Crisp, Natalie Moorhead—Double billed this and pleased as such. This Granville kid is a wonder and bound to go places. Played March 15-16. —George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

COMET OVER BROADWAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Pretty fair little picture that will do all right on a double bill. Did a fair business here.— B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan—This is a good picture for a dual showing and I have yet to break down and go to the double feature. Hollywood is certainly furnishing me a lot of fine excuses for so doing this year and I read Warners' new 1939-40 announcement with pleasure. I hope the rest follow their lead. We don't need more pictures, as a nation; perhaps ten per cent of the exhibitors do, but at least 90 per cent of us need better pictures. —Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins, Louis Armstrong and Orchestra—A very good comedy, highlighted by some good song numbers. Business good. An orchid to Louis Armstrong and his band. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 29-30.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gloria Dickson, Gale Page, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins— One of the most beautiful pictures ever made. The scenery and colorings were almost unbelievable. Otherwise it was just a glorified western with the usual gun play and fights. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SECRET SERVICE OF THE AIR: Ronald Reagan, Irene Rhodes, John Litel—Good action drama which pleased average business. Played March 31-April 1.— E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Grand National

ROLLIN' PLAINS: Tex Ritter, Harriet Spencer— Nothing sensational but will pass where good westerns are in demand. This boy Ritter is tops and is well liked by the women as well as the men. Give us more of his pictures. Running time, 55 minutes. —George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly, Lynne Carver, Rex Ingram—Here's a natural for small towns. Big enough for your best nights. Will stand up under all your extra advertising claims. Enjoyed by largest attendance this year. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 26-28.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE: Mickey Rooney, Walter Connolly—The general reaction of the patrons was that this was a very good family entertainment. Had a host of kids and they brought mama, papa and grandpa, so business was good.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—Played this late but it sure drew them in. The second day it rained but did not stop them from coming. I can only add that this deserved its popularity and all the nice things that have been said about it.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Henry Hull—In my opinion as well as my audience's, the best picture for many moons. Give us more of these, Leo. Played January 30-31.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Nat Pendleton—Not so good; far below the average standard of Metro's product. O'Keefe has not yet arrived to where you can expect good business with him heading the cast.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell— Played this as a benefit and with a concentrated ticket drive did a nice business. One of the best of its kind. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 28.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—Much better than I have been led to believe by some of the reports. Did an average business.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner—Like most of Metro's program pictures it was in our opinion above average. We like that little Gaal lady very much, although we do believe they overdid her naive character part. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus—Disappointing at the box office but not to those who saw it. Did not have one complaint and we thought it beautiful. But they do not go for this type. Running time, 104 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, Burns and Allen—This is it; tops anything that Powell has done to date. Cast, story, all to the good, and does Eleanor dance a mean Hula? Metro really went to town on this one, and so did I at the box office. When the audience comes out with that pleased look on their faces, that is the answer to the exhibitor's prayer.— A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—You can have your Temples and Withers but give me the last of the Rooneys. A knockout, if there ever was one. A pleasure to show a picture that brings out the customers. Don't pass it up. Will gross any place. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 2-3.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—I saw this picture screened and do not believe it will please in a small town but will do all right in a city. Cast is all English, with Leslie Howard the only familiar face. Picture was made in England and the actors all have plenty of English accents. Plot will appeal to the sophisticates and those who read George Bernard Shaw.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Leo Carrillo, Walter Pidgeon, Walter Connolly—Leo must have had his tail twisted before they made this one because they turned out a small town natural for our situation. We enjoyed very nice mid-week business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney— Very good picture that pleased all. Beery and Rooney both very well liked. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 24-25.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney —A plain picture which has tremendous appeal. It is the first the men here have seen Wallace Beery in for several years. All were very glad to see him so well cast. He takes the part of Tom Terry, "the broken down vet," and puts it across as only Beery can. One moment he has the audience in stitches with his natural comedy and the next moment in tears with his appealing emotional acting. Mickey Rooney continues to uphold his place in the limelight as one of the best in Hollywood with his characterization of Mickey, Tom Terry's bosom pal. It is a dandy picture for any audience so don't be afraid to book it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 25.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Really thought this would do business but it only about held its own. Time they were putting Taylor back into the type of picture best suited to him. Beery was swell and we always like that Rice gal. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 17-18.— Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GANGSTER'S BOY: Jackie Cooper—This picture you could easily classify as above average program calibre and while it did not have quite the draw of "Boy of the Streets" it came a close second as this drew above average on a Sunday and Monday showing. This was doubled with "Speed to Burn," which I consider an above the average racing drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MYSTERY PLANE: John Trent, Marjorie Reynolds—Played this as a midnight picture for April 1st. Made up a crazy program and the crowd was well pleased. Did swell business on this one. They sure go for a midnight show in this town. Did more business than for Saturday matinee and Saturday night.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

WHERE THE BUFFALO ROAM: Tex Ritter, Dorothy Short, Louise Massey and the Westerners, Snub Pollard—This was a big improvement over his other pictures. He sings better. Adding Louise Massey and the Westerners adds the right kind of music to western pictures. "Pee Wee" Pollard has better comedy relief than in the other Tex Ritter westerns. While no special drawing power, it fills the bill nicely where westerns are used.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

ARREST BULLDOG DRUMMOND: John Howard, Heather Angel—Just another of the Drummond pictures, not bad, not good and not one that anyone will

Exhibitor Finds Quick Diagnosis "Plain Miracle"

CHICAGO—"We were playing to a good business on a Tuesday matinee in the Olympia Theatre, when for a reason we couldn't find, the sound went dead on our No. 1 machine," said Doc Rafalski, General Manager of Bland Bros. Theatres.

"We called Altec, and C. G. Bosworth promptly arrived at the theatre. He immediately discovered there was no voltage in the photo-electric cell, resulting from a broken connection in a coupling unit.

"Bosworth had the No. 1 machine functioning normally in a few minutes. It was only necessary to double up on the No. 2 machine twice from the time he got to my theatre.

"The uncanny way the Altec man instantly puts his finger on what is wrong may be the result of engineering ability, but it's just a plain miracle to me."

miss if you fail to run it.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Yacht Club Boys—This did better than the reviews would lead me to expect. The childish mind understood the comedy and laughed at it. The appeal was to those who enjoy the cheap radio and I judge that is one reason the motion picture critic could not see it. My people liked this show and, after all, that is all I want.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland—The kids do nice work in the picture; they were the main appeal, and if you can get them in, they will like the picture as it has a human story, but no names in the cast that mean anything to the public, hence poor business. For us this year Paramount has been sadly lacking in money making pictures; the hits have been almost nil.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Fair family picture that pleased the few I was able to get in on a bargain night. Running time, 73 minutes. —A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CAFE SOCIETY: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Shirley Ross—Another disappointment from Paramount. This alleged comedy drags pitifully. Is not a top picture as allocated. Played April 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ILLEGAL TRAFFIC: J. Carrol Naish, Mary Carlisle—This holds the record for doing the poorest Saturday evening business I have done since the memory of men runneth not to the contrary. I don't know why they thought this was any worse than a lot of others I have run, but it just worked out that those who came on Friday didn't like it and thus no one came on Saturday, and business was worse than usual.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

IN OLD MEXICO: William Boyd, George Hayes—Can anyone make these short westerns stand up on a single feature program? "Hopalong" has a western following and they had some good stuff in this. They are so much alike that one can hardly write concerning them.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell—Reissue bought right and made a little money.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell—This missed somehow; too long a period of time involved, which hurt the continuity of the story. Comments were very, very few. Did fair on opening day, but nosedived on the succeeding nights. Was disappointed in this picture from about every standpoint.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell—Very good but not up to previous pictures of this type. Did not draw like "Dawn Patrol" or "Wings of the Navy."—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatres, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Akim Tamiroff, Edward Everett Horton—Fair picture. Bad weather hurt it for me.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison—An excellent class B picture and well liked. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PERSONS IN HIDING: Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison, J. Carrol Naish—This lays itself wide open for a wise crack about exhibitors who show it. It is just another picture. I didn't brag about it too much before I showed it, so didn't need to do a disappearing act after the show.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Ray Milland, Olympe Bradna—A fair program picture that they will neither pan nor get excited about; just run of the mill that sets you back at the box office.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SILVER ON THE SAGE: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—The best Cassidy to date. Pleased all my western fans and those who do not care for westerns. Business good. Advertise this as a real action western and you won't go wrong. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Tito Guizar—A very good musical. Good plot, good cast. Well made. Business O. K.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Maxine Sullivan—This was satisfactory. It had a number of good songs and the glamour of the Old Mississippi days in the show boat era.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORY: Bob Hope, Shirley Ross, Charles Butterworth—This was light and pleasant entertainment that my public liked. I balanced it up with a March of Time and a Walt Disney and the people thought it very good. I am sure I had more satisfied customers than many of the more expensive pictures give me, for instance, the fine "Dawn Patrol" which I ran the week before. People, after all, want recreation and relaxation, not sorrow and grief.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE: Donald O'Connor, June Travis, Robert Kent—Entertaining picture. Drew exceptionally well on a weekend date.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Republic

DOWN IN "ARKANSAW": Ralph Byrd, Weaver Brothers, Elviry, Pinky Tomlin—Played on Strand Night and did excellent business. Pleased all.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—Another Autry means another success. Play them. Running time, 60 minutes. —George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

KING OF THE NEWSBOYS: Lew Ayres, Alison Skipworth, Helen Mack—Will pass on a double bill only and please as such.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Very good western that did a better than average business.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OVERLAND STAGE RAIDERS: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Louise Brooks—Played this on a single bill for the weekend patrons. Believe we should have double billed this one. I personally thought it a fine picture of its type, but had a low gross for weekend.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PRAIRIE MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Far below the rest of the pictures that Autry has made so far. Watch out, Gene, or "Hopalong Cassidy" will be within shooting distance of the throne you have sat on for so long in this town. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 22.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

PRISON NURSE: Henry Wilcoxon, Marian Marsh—Double billed this and pleased. Stars not a drawing card here. Great for double program. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 8-9.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

TENTH AVENUE KID: Bruce Cabot, Beverly Roberts, Tommy Ryan—This doubled on a Friday and Saturday brought the largest crowd in over a year. It seemed as if everybody was a movie fan on this weekend. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 13-14.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BEAUTY FOR THE ASKING: Lucille Ball, Patric Knowles, Frieda Inescort—Yes, this is another of the Lucille Ball shows. They must have this little lady hired by the year all right. She has been in seven of the last sixteen RKO pictures I have run and guess that is good for some kind of a record. She is an attractive personality, but no one can stand that schedule and be with us two years.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

GUNGA DIN: Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Sam Jaffe—This is the top picture of the year so far. Well, second in my box office record to another RKO picture for 1939. I guess from the tone of exhibitor reports that is some kind of a record, too. Well! Play "Ferdinand" as he deserves and you will have them standing in line, and ditto for "Gunga Din." I ran a private preview for the Junior High History class on it, and did the kids talk. Anyway, here are two real box office shows; don't waste them on the same bill.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY AT THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Edgar Kennedy, Ann Gillis, Spanky MacFarland—Built for kids. Double on bareback riding too obvious. The children came but that's all. I guess they can't all be good. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARIZONA WILDCAT, THE: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Henry Wilcoxon—The best Jane Withers show we ever played. Pleased adults as well as children. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 24-25.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—I picked this up for a sportsmen's club benefit and with an advance sale the show did fairly well. In spite of the poor comments this has had in these columns I believe it is a very fine production of its type, and ideal for a benefit when sponsored by an organization of this nature. Most of the comments were unusually fine.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN HONOLULU: Sidney Toler, Phyllis Brooks—The new Chan was well received by my patrons. Picture better than average.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—Pleased and they said so. Business good and hopes for more on the next Jones picture. Eddie Collins stole the show. Running time, 61 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Slim Summerville—The Quints do all that is expected of them and the story is quite entertaining, but this did not draw nearly as well for us as the other two Quint pictures, which means that the public is no longer curious about the doings of the Quints as they once were to the extent that large numbers will pay money to see their pictures. This drew barely average business. Those who came, as far as we could determine, were pleased with the picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

ISLAND IN THE SKY: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen, Paul Kelly—I played this in place of a current release and found it to be a very satisfactory substitute. Glad I have several of last year's Twentieth Century-Fox pictures to use.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda, Randolph Scott—A box office natural. Color beautiful. Can be played any day of the week.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—A dandy picture that didn't do as much business as it should on account of bad weather and road conditions. However, under favorable conditions, this should be a good box office production.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy, Edna May Oliver: JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—In both of these Shirley does her stuff. While some of her pictures may have been better, there is plenty of entertainment for the Temple fans. Shirley does her stuff as best she can, which as we all know is plenty, but here comes the sad part of it. The drawing power was sadly missing for us in both of these. Every Shirley Temple picture up to "Little Miss Broadway" was a swell drawing card for us, real mortgage lifters and debt payers, but the last two drew below average. We dread the thought that the number one box office magnet should cease to draw them in. Here is hoping she can stage a comeback in her new pictures for us and others who have reported no business on the Shirley pictures.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Arthur Treacher—Very beautiful picture and color. About the best Temple to date. Local ministers mentioned this to congregations and business was good for a Palm Sunday. Adult as well as children entertainment of the best. Running time, 91 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PARDON OUR NERVE: Lynn Bari, Michael Whalen, Quinn Williams—Played it on a weekend to practically an empty house. It's a fair program picture that might go over on a Bank Night or on a double bill. Running time, 68 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PASSPORT HUSBAND: Stuart Erwin, Pauline Moore, Joan Woodbury—Went back and picked this up in place of one of this year's group and do not believe we improved it much. Was disappointed in it. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SAFETY IN NUMBERS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane—Very good.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Henry Armetta, Henry Arthur, Joan Valerie—Played this with "Gangster's Boy" and I consider it an above the average racing drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW: Ritz Brothers, Richard Arlen, Ethel Merman—Part of this is OK entertainment, but a lot of it is overly silly, and the net result rates the show below average. If you have enough elimination, leave this one out.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

"GREAT HELP" IN THEATRE BUSINESS

> "I am a weekly reader of the HERALD and it surely is a great help in the theatre business."
> —ERNEST S. POLLOCK,
> Strand Theatre,
> Hohenwald, Tenn.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft—A really big production that drew a terribly small amount of business. The preview, about the longest one we ever ran, was narrated by Edwin C. Hill and I thought he did a fine job, but in spite of that we just couldn't get them in.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—Excellent picture and just made for my town. But wait. There was a catch, as the trailer, an experiment by National Screen, sure knocked the props out for us. Second night better than first. Played January 9-10.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—This is the first historical picture that has ever clicked for me. Second night's business ahead of first night. Tyrone Power turned in an excellent performance, although in my opinion not the one for the picture. Play it. Played February 27-28.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Adolpe Menjou, Arleen Whelan—Fair. Hardly deserving of a Saturday date. Will get by in a pinch.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Binnie Barnes—One reel of this is enough. Some fine photography, but a weak, silly plot and the Ritz Brothers kept them away.—B. C. Brown, Temple and Vernon Theatre, Viroqua, Wis. General patronage.

THREE MUSKETEERS, THE: Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Binnie Barnes, Gloria Stuart—Shades of Dumas; what they did to his immortal story is plenty. A burlesque on it and it classes as screw-ball at its very screwiest.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Preston Foster, Arthur Treacher—Quite amusing. Hardly strong enough to stand alone.—Harold Smith, Dreamland Theatre, Carson, Iowa. Rural patronage.

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS: Michael Whalen, Joan Woodbury—Too many of these series pictures built along dual bill lines. The series product that really is built with some quality is very good and doing business but we can see no excuse for these cheaper ones. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WIFE, HUSBAND AND FRIEND: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero—A very entertaining feature that didn't do any business although it pleased. I thought it quite good but for some reason or other it didn't draw them in. Running time, 82 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon—Never played a show where the comments were more divided. Personally I thought it a very satisfactory offering, but I had quite a number pan it plenty and a smaller number that said it was "great." Too much rental, however, for the business it did, which was very light.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson—Previous to playing this picture, I noticed many small town exhibitors stating they failed to get business on this picture. I couldn't visualize such a wonderful picture, which I saw several weeks before playing it, not doing business. But believe it or not we didn't make film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray—Fair comedy that was very weak at the box office.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young, Billie Burke—Good picture that had about as much drawing power as a mustard plaster without the mustard. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

COURAGE OF THE WEST: Bob Baker, Lois January—Another pleasing western with Bob Baker at his best. Running time, 57 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Josephine Hutchinson, Lionel Atwill—Best weekend business this winter. Not quite up to what the people expected as to a scary picture but very good otherwise. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, Mortimer Snerd, Constance Moore—Pleased and drew good. Had lots of laughs, too many as a matter of fact so that the people missed many cracks. Mortimer stole the show and people want more of him here. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. C. Feils, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BLACK LEGION, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—Played this last summer and brought it back again and it still has plenty of box office pulling power. Wonderful. Running time, 67 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND: John Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell—Pretty good action picture which pleased average business. Played March 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BORDERTOWN: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay—With two great stars this cannot help but draw and please.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Johnnie Davis—Can't see how this can possibly rate better than a fair program picture. This was allocated to me in Warner's top six with a guarantee and percentage. The show for me was not nearly up to average for a Sunday opening. Practically no comments either way, which indicates that it just got over. I expected a lot more picture and receipts.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, "Dead End Kids"—Another pickup from last season and a happy choice as it is a swell piece of entertainment. Comments on street today (we opened with it last night) are numerous and all of the kind we like to hear.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Basil Rathbone, Errol Flynn, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Was terribly disappointed in this. It was such a short time ago when it was originally made and so many of the shots were either taken out of the old picture or made identically like it. Our patrons generally did not like it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—A picture that is tops in its line of entertainment. Played it on the middle week program and did good midweek business. All performers turned in excellent parts. Don't pass it up by all means. Played February 22-23.—Ernest S. Pollock, Strand Theatre, Hohenwald, Tenn. General patronage..

DAWN PATROL: Erroll Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven—This was a swell air picture, punishing and unhappy, with no romance and a terrible lot of drinking. However, they did make a production of it. I had people walk out and demand their money back as having seen it with Richard Barthelmess, if you can imagine that. The customer is always right, or is he?—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DEVIL'S ISLAND: Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan—Pretty good program picture that did a fair business.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, Gail Page, Claude Rains, John Garfield—One of the most wholesome shows to come out of Hollywood in many a day. All comments were favorable. I don't see how they could have been otherwise. Warners are really going to town with product this year, although nothing so far has been especially big at the ticket window.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gloria Dickson, Gale Page—I used this on a Friday-Saturday change as a single on nights that I usually double-feature. Best Friday-Saturday business for more than six months and the picture is one of the best in this field. Give us more like this!—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Humphrey Bogart, Kay Francis—Pretty good action picture which pleased average business. Played March 28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS THOROUGHBRED: Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Frank McHugh, Janet Chapman—Double billed this and it is a wow. This Chapman kid is a sure box office bet. Running time, 65 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA KID, THE: James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Very good action drama which pleased all and did extra business. Played March 29-30—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Charles Bickford—Ran this late but it went over. Is a natural for color and what the public wants to see in color. Everyone was satisfied and that makes the theatre business a pleasure. Enough came to see it so I did not need to borrow money to buy it and, all in all, I report give us more like it and most of our problems will be solved.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper—Used this as a sub for a current offering, and took in more the second night (used midweek) than on the opening, which is the only midweek picture that ever did this here. However, neither night was especially good.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Wis. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

SERVICE SELLS

One of this department's scouts came by to tell about his experiences with some ushers in a Broadway house. Seems there was a mixup about seats, but that wasn't the point. The difficulty came about through the service lads who displayed what might be mildly termed an unconventional attitude in making light of the patron's desires in the matter. There was lacking the crisp, impersonal though courteous approach that customers have been educated to take for granted.

If the theatre's most cherished asset is community goodwill, then that goodwill must rest importantly upon the shoulders of the personnel in dealings with patrons. Too much can never be said about the how and the why of it. Thus, your Chairman is gratified to bring to every member's attention, especially at this time, the comprehensive and detailed service manual compiled for Warner Bros. Stanley Theatre in Jersey City, by Round Tabler Rudy Kuehn, Hudson County district manager in Don Jacocks' New Jersey division.

The booklet takes in about everything from what qualifications an usher should have, to what he should know about his job before and after donning his uniform. Telephone operators, cashiers and doormen are also carefully instructed in what to do and when.

Of course, Kuehn does not mean these instructions to discount intelligence and quick-thinking on the part of the staff. He does realize, as does every smart operator, that the entire personnel must be soundly grounded in every phase of patron-contact to avoid any unnecessary cause for complaint that can react against the boxoffice.

No theatre ever had, or ever expects to have, a top attraction to sell with every change of program. But every theatre equipped to do so, can sell its service every day in the year to bring in extra admissions for which the program cannot always be credited.

BRUSHING OFF THE COBWEBS

Take the venerable door-knob hanger, for instance. By now, it probably has been suspended from every available door the nation boasts. But Jimmie Redmond, in Fairbury, Neb., gave it new life for his date on "Made for Each Other," at the Bonham, by slitting the hanger and inserting a birth announcement card with picture copy in individual envelopes personally addressed to the house-holder whose door the hanger adorned. The extra time and effort required were highly profitable, reports Redmond, since opening day was about 40 per cent over expectations.

Most any stunt has a hundred and one variations and in due course of time, your experienced showman gets around to trying them all. Then every now and then up pops an oldie with an ingenious twist that brushes off the cobwebs of long usage, and makes it brand-new again.

THE SHOW DOES "GO ON"

Elsewhere in this issue is detailed what Ferd Nessel accomplished to keep his house open in the face of a local flu outbreak that closed the schools, hit retail business and generally dented the morale of the community. In brief, Nessel followed hospital procedure in air-conditioning the theatre. His success in maintaining a solid front in the face of the flu bugs held the grosses up to par. It also brought grateful thanks from the city fathers.

Here again is illustrated the almost automatic lightning-fast thinking that is properly the equipment of theatremen, by instinct and experience trained to anticipate emergencies of every kind. Come flu, flood or fire, the show must go on, if for no other reason than to maintain community morale. That it does go on, is to the eternal credit of the industry the theatremen so ably serve.

Those prone to regard New York as too metropolitan to go for stunts accepted in other sectors are referred to last week's activities sponsored by Oscar A. Doob's Loew's Theatres ad forces in the Broadway area. A street race between waiters representing leading restaurants, on behalf of "Cafe Society", and a gathering at the Ziegfeld Theatre of 500 sets of twins as a buildup for the circuit's local "twins" campaign, stopped traffic entirely.

Incidentally, the New York press, notably the considerably conservative Times, reported the goings-on at length.

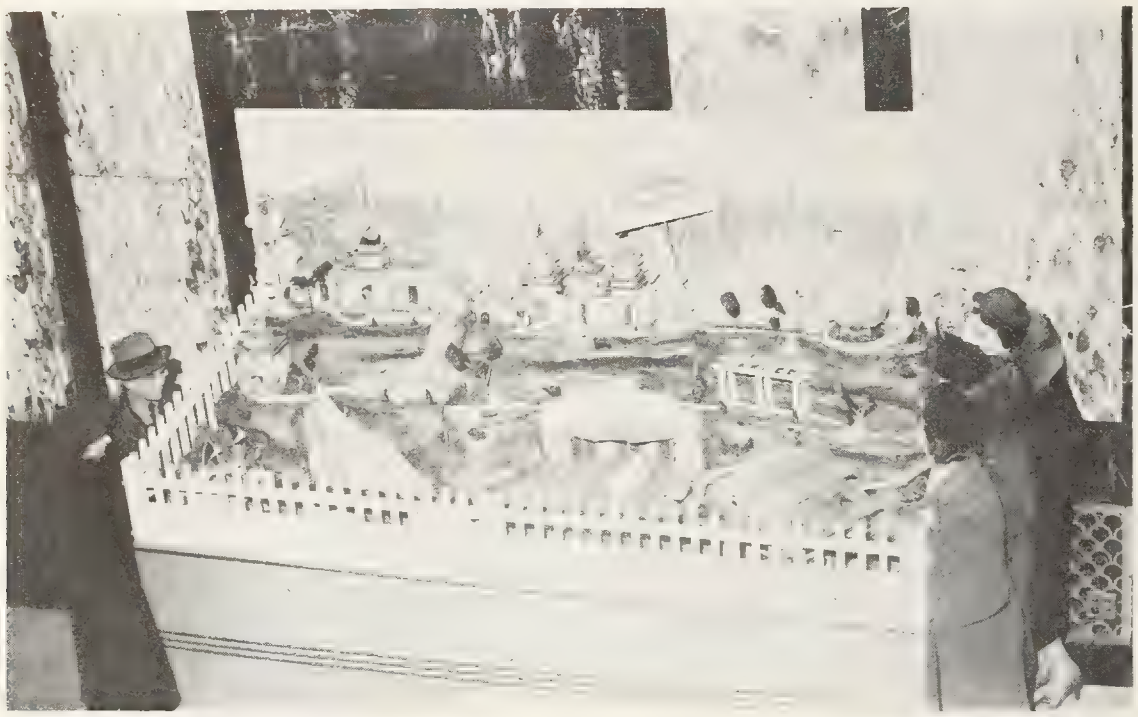
Round Table in Pictures

Promoted by Ward Farrar, Loew's, Indianapolis, on "Stagecoach" was use of 100 year old deadwood coach illustrated here which was driven from the Municipal Airport, where it picked up picture print, to the downtown section, loaded with newspapermen and belles of the 1800's. Stunt was covered by papers with art and stories plus special emphasis on the comparison between early transportation and the new.

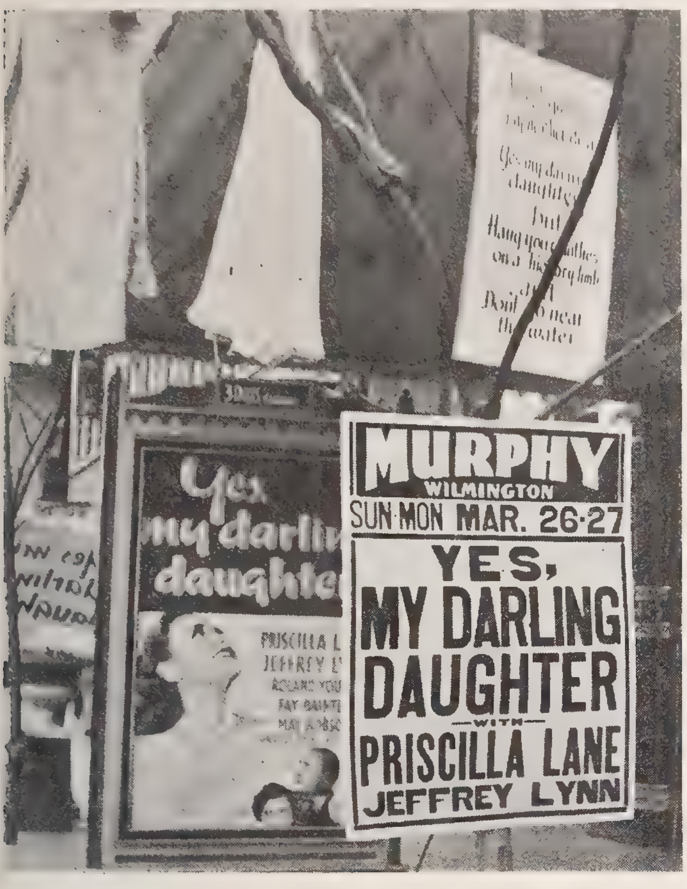
Turning the lobby of the Pavilion Theatre, in London, into a paddock and using six thoroughbred horses for a stage presentation were some of the stunts engineered by United Artists to launch "King of the Turf." Highlight of the campaign was a parade of "bookmakers" who shouted the odds at the principal railway stations, men also distributing racing tips, all of which included proper mention of the theatre and attraction.

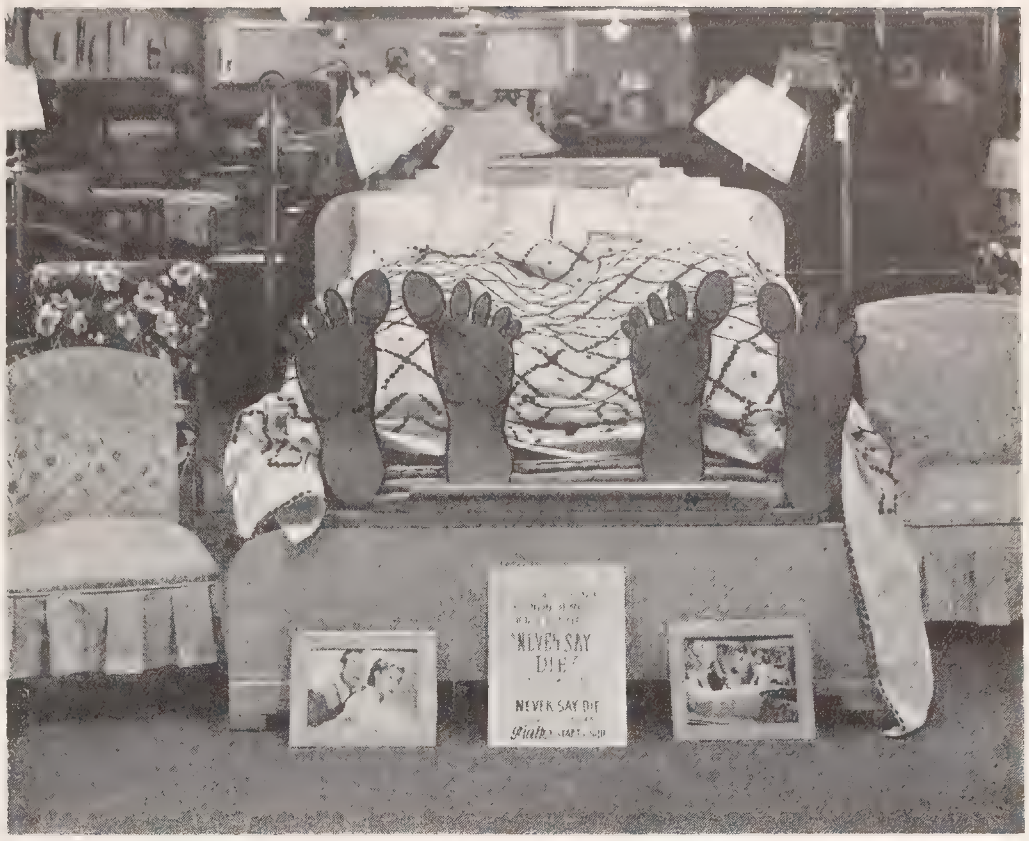


Fashioning his Easter lobby display along the lines of the World's Fair, Les Pollock, Loew's, Rochester, N. Y., carried out the intricate details of the various buildings with proper lighting effect. Theme center, stairs, flags, banners, streets, trees, shrubbery, trellis with interwoven vines are but a few of the sights that made up the interesting display. Six live white bunnies capered in and out of the buildings. Les reports that while only one bunny is shown in the photo, the other five were in the "Parisian Village," looking things over.

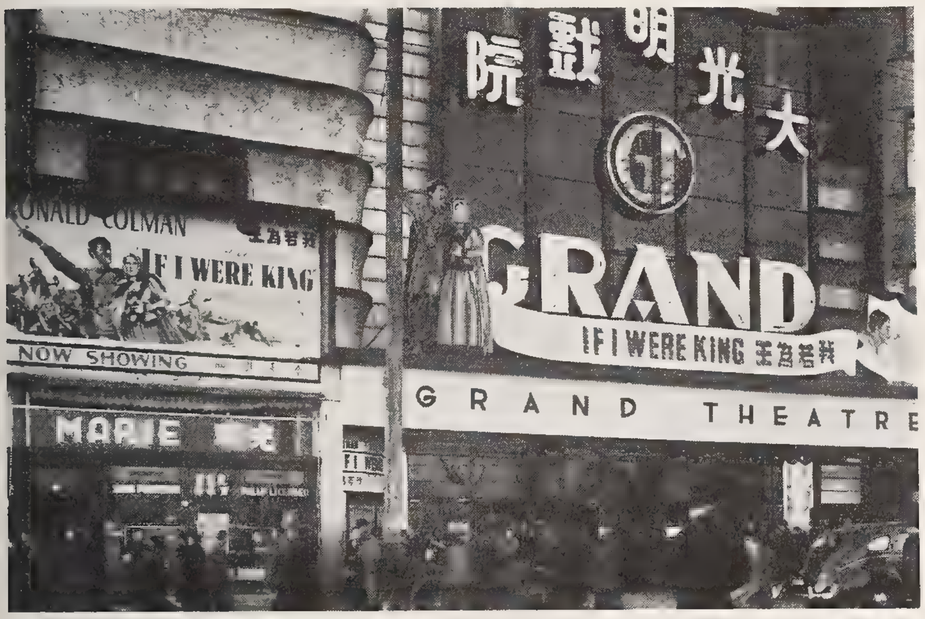
Mounted troop of Boy Scouts, used as a company of "Lancers" withpith helmets and lances advertising "Gunga Din" were promoted by Lou Hart for that date at Schine's Hippodrome, Gloversville. Reported by the theatreman as a first-time exploitation demonstration of its kind to be used there, the aggregation created quite a stir as it covered important highway artery and surrounding communities.

Playing up the poem by the same name, Bill Nasses, Murphy, Springfield, Ohio, on "Yes, My Darling Daughter" hung washline with girl's clothing on tree in front of theatre. Card carried title, playdates, etc.



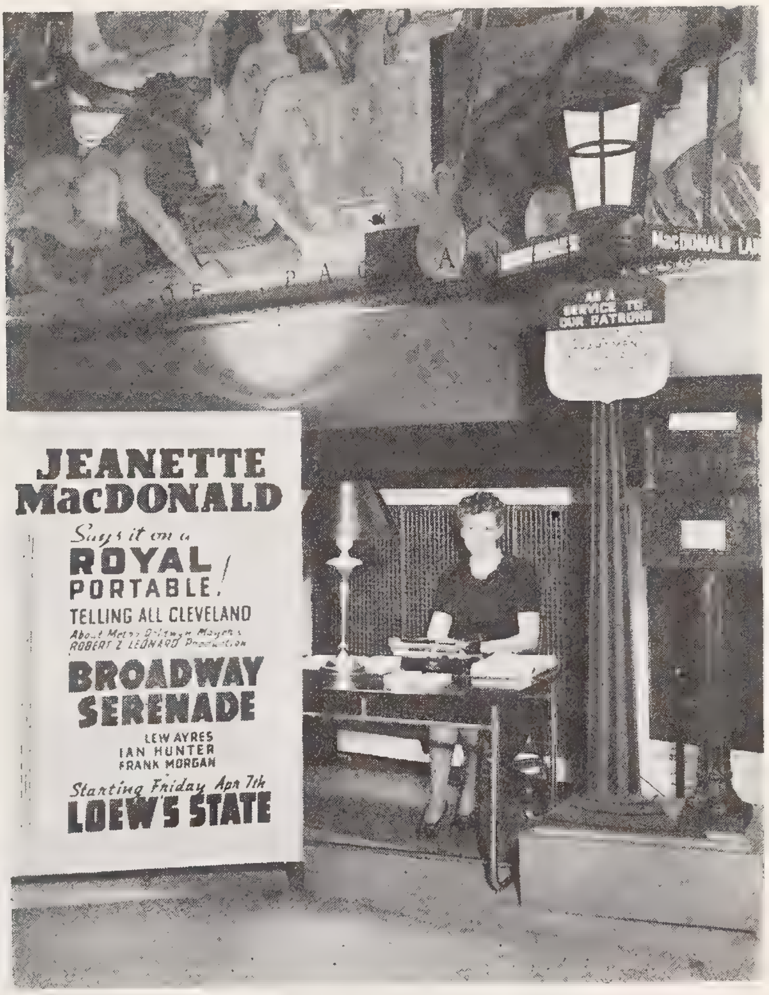


For "Never Say Die" at the Rialto Theatre, in Phoenix, Arizona, Manager Newton "Carolina" Brunson arranged the novel window tieup illustrated above. The feet of Bob Hope and Andy Devine were tied together as in a sequence of the picture. Highlights of the campaign included a banquet with Governor Bob Jones and photographs at the State Capitol, in addition local confectioner cooperated by featuring a sale of "Martha Raye" kisses.



Giant cutout figures of Ronald Colman and Frances Lee were planted atop marquee of the Grand Theatre, in Shanghai, as advance on "If I Were King." Also arranged by J. E. Perkins, general manager for Paramount in the Orient, was a special color job program, entire printing and distributing cost of which was met by merchants' ads.

Tieup with local typewriter agency on "Broadway Serenade" netted Milt Harris, Loew's publicity director, lobby display of girl seated at table typing messages on the picture, which were distributed to patrons. Also to be noted at right is stunt arranged by the publicist with local post office official for permanent mail box in lobby for convenience of many transients attending a number of conventions scheduled for the summer months. With each change of program, lamp post street sign is changed to include new picture title and cast. Also included on the lamp post is United States Post Office shield calling attention to the service.



Theatre Air Plant Keeps House Open When Flu Scare Closes City Schools

On the announcement that the city schools of Anderson, Ind., were to be closed on account of a "flu" outbreak, with children warned not to attend theatres or other public gatherings, and with hundreds of 'phone calls inquiring whether the theatres were under the same ban, Ferd Nessel at the State immediately contacted the Board of Health for information on what to use in the theatre's conditioning system recirculating ducts to kill "flu" germs. He was told that air-conditioning was the best preventative when temperature was kept constantly at 70 degrees and was further advised to wash and clean the air, open the roof exhaust and to admit about one-fourth fresh air.

These things were done immediately, with the house personnel keeping a constant half-hour temperature check on a chart in full view so that patrons could see what was being done in their behalf. Ferd reports the method immediately effective. In addition, patrons who thought they had any "flu" symptoms were courteously asked not to enter the theatre.

While all this was functioning, Nessel put together the two-column type ad reproduced on this page, for both papers, his entire campaign carried in a page one story. The dailies cooperated further by requesting those with "flu" symptoms to remain away from the theatre. Posters out front carried the same information.

As a result, the Round Tabler reports attendance increasing during the "flu" period, while general retail business was off as much as 30 per cent. The campaign is credited with keeping the theatres open, with further goodwill obtained by the community's thanks in the form of letters of appreciation from the Mayor, Health Board and Chamber of Commerce.

Nessel's Two-Column Flu Ad

Boucher Ties Kid Show To St. Patrick's Day

Leading children's apparel shop in Gloversville sponsored a juvenile spring fashion show on the stage of Schine's Glove Theatre, as part of Frank Boucher's St. Patrick's Day celebration. Entire cost to theatre was furnishing of trailer and 40 by 60 lobby display, merchant paid for windows, ads, models, clothes and prizes. Boucher trained and rehearsed twelve models ranging in ages from three to twelve which were supplied by the store. In addition, a complete layette was given by cooperating merchant to be awarded to the first child born on St. Patrick's Day. This netted a newspaper story and a great deal of word-of mouth comment.

On "Made for Each Other", Boucher distributed teaser envelopes outside of which carried caption "to every boy and girl of 18 to 25 in Gloversville", inside was message "Is it crazy to get married these days," etc. followed by picture copy, playdates, etc., newspaper ad carrying out the same theme.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

City Manager Aids Wise

Reported by Nathan Wise, director of publicity for the RKO theatres in Dayton, Ohio, was effective tieup made with City Manager Milard M. Blaettner over Station WHIO for the stage show and personal appearance of Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard at the Colonial Theatre. Forty-three staccato announcements were used at various times during the day, approximately every fifteen minutes. Starting with the early risers, the housewife heard the announcements during the day, children in the afternoon and the entire family during the dinner hour. Nathan says the results were most gratifying.

French "Snow White" Version Gets Unique Theatre Front

For the French version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the Waldorf Theatre, New York, the public is given an opportunity to see the complete details of how a Walt Disney film is made, through the medium of a continuous moving display on sliding panels, 30 by 40, on one part of the theatre front.

Another section of the front is devoted to the display of original and detailed line sketches created by the Disney artists which were a basic guide to the animators in the creation of the feature. A collection of the original French art created by Parisian designers and used for display and advertising purposes at the Marignon Theatre in Paris where the picture ran, has been sent from France and included in the display at the Waldorf.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Bring 'Em Back" DeHaven Reports on Revival Shows

Now stressing a strictly revival policy at the Belmont in Highland Park, Detroit, A. Milo DeHaven, who styles himself the "movie man revivalist," has been distributing request cards to his audiences for pictures they would like to see again. When the dates are set in, return card is forwarded to patrons with notice of the bookings of their choice.

For the promotion of "King Kong" recently revived, DeHaven made a tieup with two amateur snapshot clubs and 10 photo supply stores for which prizes were set up for the best snapshots taken of six sheet cutout set up in theatre lobby. Samples of the pictures received were displayed in the cooperating stores and theatre.

Theatres Engaged On "Love Affair"

First reports from the key situations where "Love Affair" has had engagements show comprehensive campaigns with spring fashions, flowers and store displays designed to accentuate the love theme dominating, such as Manager James Clemmer's campaign at the Fifth Avenue, Seattle, which included a full window in the Bon Marche department store built around spring styles, one of Irene Dunne's gowns prominently featured. "Your Love Affair" was the theme of a contest conducted by the Post-Intelligencer and a special ad addressed to the distaff side was planted on the women's page. In Memphis, Manager Fred Ford of the Malco-Palace tuned in on the spring weather and a "love affair" bench in the lobby was open to all couples.

Curbstone Broadcasts Aid

"Love" was the dominant theme in the Portland, Ore., campaign where Herbert Sobottka, at the Orpheum, hooked in with KGW for a series of curbstone broadcasts in which persons interviewed were questioned on their romantic experiences. The Oregonian assigned a writer to dig up material on famous Portland love affairs.

For the run at the Albee, Cincinnati, Manager Joseph Alexander tied in with a large florist shop in the Gibson Hotel and the proprietor presented every lady attending the opening day's show with a boutonniere appropriately tagged. At Buffalo, Manager William Brett of the Buffalo got choice positions on 100 prominent newsstands in the downtown area, the basis being Life Magazine's recent two-page spread.

Manager Ed Miller, Hippodrome, Cleveland, tied in with the Laub Baking Company in a search for the 25 oldest married couples in Cleveland, the Laub Company acting as hosts to the couples. The Cleveland Plain Dealer conducted a contest wherein women told why they go for Boyer and men told of the appeal of Miss Dunne.

FINAL PERIOD OF FIRST QUARTER MARKS TOP FORTNIGHTER LISTING

All Records in 1939 Awards Fall as Theatremen Report Entries for Consideration in Quarter Judging; To Name Winners

SEEKING to get in under the wire for the judging in the First Quarter of the 1939 Quigley Awards, Round Tablers from almost every section of the country forwarded exploitations and promotions of high effectiveness for consideration in the final Fortnight that marks the end of the initial Quarter. Confronted by the avalanche of entries from theatremen who seek recognition, it was again found necessary to vote a number of Fortnighter Appointments that again topped the record set in the last preliminary judging.

Who the winners were and what they did is set down on this page and the following. In addition to the entries so detailed, the work of other winners will be found as follows: Everett Callow's aviation breakfast on "Wings of the Navy," issue of Feb. 4th; Jim Redmond's doorknob hanger on "Made for Each Other"; editorial page, this issue; Ferd Nessel's flu campaign, opposite page; and in the Round Table photo section, this issue, entries from Milt Harris, Lou S. Hart, Les Pollock and L. Ward Farrar.

Results of the First Quarterly Judging for the Quigley Plaques, Medals and Certificates will be announced in next issue. The first Fortnight period for the Second Quarter ends on April 24th.

Most Courteous Patrolman Contest Planted on "Sergeant Madden"

In addition to excellent news coverage, Francis Deering's "courteous cop" contest used for opening of "Sergeant Madden" at Loew's State in Houston, brought editorial mention, in cooperating paper. Week ahead, paper ran stories together with ballots on which readers were asked to vote for their favorite officer.

Trophy, awarded in honor of Wallace Beery's portrayal of a well-respected police officer, was presented to local winner at a dignified ceremony. Newspaper ran stories and photos of presentation by Chief of Police.

Borresen's Giant Postcard to Star Marks Northwest Premiere on "Sage"

It was that old reliable, the giant postcard of greetings to the picture's star, that earned for Al Smith, city manager, and H. F. Borresen, publicist, a barrel of attention in advance of the northwest premiere, at the Winona, in Winona, Minn., of Bill Boyd in "Silver on the Sage." Well ahead of the date, trailer was run inviting local kids to sign the card which told Boyd they were waiting for the date on the picture. The unusual communication was forwarded to the Paramount studios and after Boyd posed with it, card was returned to Winona for further exploitation.

The message was next displayed in the window of leading boys' clothing store, which also made up heralds containing cut of star and card with tiein copy: "When boys think of clothes, they Hopalong to Neville's." These were distributed as souvenirs, which brought more boys into the store on one day than ever before. Local paper also ran the photo and for lobby display, Borresen made up a layout showing stills of signing, mailing and acceptance of the card plus theatre copy.

Securing the services of a "mechanical man," Jack Lykes, Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, had him parade through busy streets carrying a large lettered case containing imitation bricks. Stopping at intervals, robot would remove the bricks from the case and place them in order along the curb spelling out "Within the Law." Lettered sign on man's back and suitcase were walking advertisements. Police cooperated by handling crowds that gathered to watch the "act" in progress.

Further police tieup was effected with special broadcast over WGAR, Captain John Weiss urging all Cleveland motorists to stay "Within the Law" by observing all traffic rules. Guest tickets were awarded to outstanding drivers during the specified time. Cleveland, incidentally, is very traffic-minded at this time, having just won the first place in the 1938 National Traffic Safety competition among the major cities of the nation.

Gilman Cracks Hard-to-Get Paper On 50-Years-Married Couple Party

According to Sam Gilman, the Evening News, of Harrisburg, Pa., usually very tough in the matter of outside publicity for theatres, loosened up considerably on a suggested tiein by the Loew's manager on "Made for Each Other" wherein local couples married 50 years or more were invited to be guests of the theatre. In addition, seven of the couples married the longest were dined and wined by Gilman on a hookup with leading hotel. Featured at the dinner was giant birthday cake inscribed with name of the picture.

The promotion was publicised by the paper for five days ahead, the campaign topped with a three-column cut and story of the dinner in which the theatre and attraction received due credit.

Lampe Arranges Radio Transcription From Star for Syracuse Friends

Since Bill Lundigan, who appears with Deanna Durbin, in "Three Smart Girls," was formerly a radio announcer with WFBL, in Syracuse, Gus Lampe, Schine city manager, arranged for the local star to make a special radio transcription at the Universal studios to be broadcast over the station coincident with the date on the picture at the Keith. Transcription was in form of a speech to the star's Syracuse friends with a full program built around the greeting, using a prologue and epilogue. Picture, theatre and stars were plugged throughout the program, widely publicized by station and press in advance.

In addition, Mayor Marvin proclaimed "Bill Lundigan Day" for the opening, which was widely publicised and plugged further with cards in prominent windows. Papers also played up a news shot from the studios wherein Lundigan was shown presenting Durbin with a special badge making her a member of the Mayor's staff.

Howe Secures Leading Stores For Unique "Baby" Co-op Page

Acting as his own salesman, Manager John W. Howe, Olympia, Portsmouth, N. H., bought a page outright from the local Herald and sold the space to 18 of the better stores as a co-op with an appealing contest slant. In each ad was placed a different girl's name and readers were asked to select the name they believed most suitable for the newest addition to the Jones family and to give their reasons why in as few words as possible. Cash and tickets were the prizes and page was tied in with the picture by a scene cut and copy from the picture at the head of the layout. To build further interest, Howe put together a lobby display of infant's paraphernalia decorated with baby pictures. As patrons approached the display, ushers distributed colored birth announcements, copy tying to the date.

Tri-States Theatremen Effect Tieins On "Honolulu" and "Huck Finn"

Working with Ted Emerson, Tri-States Omaha district ad head, Manager Bill Miskell, of the Orpheum, featured the date on "Honolulu" with an elaborate display two weeks ahead that duplicated as near as possible the famed Cocoanut Grove at the Los Angeles Ambassador Hotel. Further atmosphere was furnished with real hula dancers and hula orchestra. Additionally helpful was an amateur hula contest put over with one of the local dailies some two weeks ahead of the date. Winners were chosen at a midnight stage show, the entire tiein gaining strong publicity support.

A unique swap-shop idea was used by Eddie Forrester, also with Emerson's cooperation, at the Omaha, for "Huck Finn," space set aside in the lobby where a shop was set up. Youngsters were invited to come in and swap their belongings following the sequence in the picture. Unusual idea brought the attention it rated, with many of the city's juveniles on hand to do business with each other.

Grimes Features Style Show To Build Lenten Business

Sponsored by the local Dispatch-Herald, fashion shops and stores cooperated with Ken Grimes for a two-day monster annual style show held during Lent at the Warner Theatre, in Erie. Highlight of entire campaign was the personal appearance of Miss Prunella Wood, nationally known fashion expert and writer who described the modes. Started weeks ahead, the show was ably directed by Miss Antoinette Post of the Antoinette School of Dance, well-known locally.

Cooperating paper carried front-page breaks in addition to fashion comments by Miss Wood. Numerous full-page merchants ads were run with prominent mention of the show, art work of various tableaux was run together with descriptive copy and readers were planted daily until the show opened.

LOCAL TAXI DRIVERS ENDORSE "MIDNIGHT"

Since Don Ameche plays a taxi driver in "Midnight", for the date at the New York Paramount, Bob Weitman threw a party for 4,000 New York taxi drivers at a special midnight show in order to get their expert opinion on the star's technique.

Event was advertised widely in the taxi drivers' trade press. In addition, for the rest of the week, drivers distributed theatre cards to fares, tying-in the picture.

Aunt of "Pygmalion" Star Tied to Canadian Date

At the head of the many tieins and exploitations for his date on "Pygmalion" at the Famous Player-Canadian Capitol, in Cobourg, Ontario, Manager A. Kent Craig places the personal appearance of Mrs. Sylvia Graham, aunt of Wendy Hiller, female lead in the picture. This participation was emphasized by Kent since he reports Mrs. Graham previously unavailable for cooperation on the picture's opening in nearby Toronto, where she resides.

Much was made of the promotion in the local and Toronto press, as was a scrap book kept by the aunt which contained in photo and story the history of Miss Hiller in showbusiness. Kent was able to obtain the book for display at the theatre and advertised the scoop widely.

Contest for Pet Copy Peeves Planted by Bell for "Madden"

On the assumption that newspaper readers were eager to air their pet peeves against the city's "finest," Ray Bell was able to promote a contest in the Washington Times-Herald on "Sergeant Madden" with cash prizes and tickets to Loew's Capitol for the best stated squawks about local policemen.

Contest ran for four days ahead with long single and two-column buildups. In addition to the announcement of the winners, the finale was given a full-page streamer and many of the outstanding replies were detailed in his widely-read "Gleanings and Screenings" column by Andrew R. Kelley, the paper's drama critic.

Paper Runs Page-One Theatre Cut With Title in Marquee Mortise

A theatre party at the L & J Georgia, in Athens, on "Newsboys Home" for local newsboys who had taken part in a subscription drive in behalf of the Banner-Herald, was productive of unusual advance page-one publicity planted by Moon Corker and P. E. McCoy. Paper ran a four-column cut taken from architect's drawing of theatre before it was built. To plug the picture, original marquee copy was mortised out and title set in. The excellent break ran nearly 300 lines in addition to other stories and photos run for two weeks ahead. On day of the guest showing, the newsies carrying banners paraded through the downtown district behind a motorcycle police escort.

Autographed Photo of Hardys Used as Giveaway for "Out West"

Having secured a mat of the individually autographed photo of the Hardy family, recently distributed to exhibitors, Manager Stewart Tomber, of the Sycamore Fargo, Sycamore, Ill. in connection with his date of "Out West with the Hardys," planted the picture in both local papers. The double angle of exploiting the picture itself and publicizing the gratis photo to be given to patrons, proved highly effective, reports the theatreman.

Another promotion which brought a great deal of goodwill was a "Sons of the Legion" benefit tieup with Legionnaires selling tickets on a percentage basis. Personal appearance on stage of the Drum and Bugle Corps brought additional publicity, Legion carrying entire expense.

Taylor Features "Princess for a Day" With Caricature Newspaper Contest

Contest confined to girls was planted in the Buffalo Times by Charles B. Taylor, director of advertising and publicity for the Buffalo Theatres, Buffalo, week ahead of opening of "Little Princess" at Shea's Buffalo Theatre. To the child submitting the best "screwiggies," caricature drawings, the honor of being proclaimed Princess-for-a-day was bestowed with its attendant round of parties, hotel accommodations and presentation of complete outfit.

Abundant newspaper coverage was gleaned, which included running of some of the cartoons submitted, art work of Shirley surrounded by "screwiggies," story on the selection of the winner.

Johnson Promotes Free Trip For Student to State Finals

With local high school holding a basketball tournament in nearby Bangor, Manager Bill Johnson, of the Opera House, Millinocket, Maine, capitalized on the stunt by promoting transportation, hotel and meals for one student and announcing that the free trip would be given to the winner at a certain matinee. With anti-lottery laws strictly enforced in Millinocket, Johnson got around this by merely holding a quiz contest on stage, after showing of the feature, winner picked by his ability to list the stars, cast, director, producer, etc., of the picture just witnessed.

Johnson reports that even the advertising costs for the stunt were negligible, since the announcements were made over house public address system, and screen slides and merchants' ads on heralds covered cost of printing and distribution.

[Details of winning entries not found here will be reported in next week's issue.]

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Fleet of five planes soared over the city of Kenosha, Wis., to ballyhoo Bill Exton's opening of "Wings of the Navy" at the Kenosha. Planes released about 100 miniature parachutes, some of which contained guest tickets. Announcements of opening were brought to the attention of naval cadets at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and special lobby display was constructed for the occasion.

All educators in city and county, in addition to all secretaries of patriotic organizations and civic clubs were circularized by Bert Leighton for the opening of "Lincoln in the White House" at the Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Penna. On card was cut of Lincoln superimposed on the Capitol shown in the background, picture copy and playdates were run below.

With the beginning of March opening the fishing season in Missouri, Roy G. Muehlemann, Gravois Theatre, St. Louis, booked in Grantland Rice's sportlights reel "Strike" and Pathe Sportscope "Fisherman's Paradise." Letters were mailed to two of the largest fishing clubs in St. Louis, contact first made by phone and secretaries of both clubs read the letter at their meetings, passes were issued as attendance prizes at these meetings. Also arranged by Roy was planting of cards in the tackle departments of sporting goods stores.

The first annual fashion show held at the Culver Theatre, Brooklyn was put on by Manager Joe Rinzler who promoted merchants for dresses, hats, etc. to be worn by and presented to local girls acting as mannequins for the occasion. Gifts were also promoted, professional model teaching the girls how to wear the clothes and walk across stage, music supplied by neighborhood band. To publicize the show, in addition to trailers, etc. Rinzler printed a formal card of invitation which was distributed house-to-house.

Planted in a recess in the lobby of the Met Theatre, Baltimore, by Harold Grott for "Heart of the North" was an Indian tepee large enough to hold six people. Painted background gave the appearance of distant woods, red bulbs and sticks of wood composed a camp fire and head dress of chieftain, Indian drums, peace pipe and other paraphernalia completed the display. The tepee and objects were secured through the cooperation of Boy Scouts, two members of which were stationed in uniform at theatre during run.

Carrying a Hollwood postmark and received with much favorable comment by his mailing list, were the postcards mailed out from the coast by Jack Markle, Coolidge Corner Theatre, Brookline, Mass. Front carried cut of Shirley Temple as she appears in "Little Miss Princess", correspondence side bearing picture message, play dates, etc.

RKO HOUSES FEATURE "PRINCESS" CONTESTS

Newspapers in Key Cities Tie In to Select Local Children for Exploitation on Temple Picture

Recently completed by various RKO Theatres, in different divisions, a series of comprehensive exploitations on behalf of "The Little Princess" have been reported as clicking strongly as a result of the aggressive advance campaigns. Sponsored by the circuit's publicity department under the direction of Harry Mandel, in cooperation with the 20th Century-Fox exploitation forces, represented by Rodney Bush, the promotions found most popular were "Princess for a Day," "Shirley Temple Resemblance Contest" and "Shirley Temple Coloring Contest."

In Boston, under the direction of C. W. Koerner, division manager, and Jack Granara, press representative, a tieup was made with the Evening American, whereby a seven-year-old girl, daughter of a PWA worker, who wrote a letter to the newspaper inviting Shirley Temple to visit her home, was made a "Little Princess for a Day," as the guest of Shirley Temple.

The winner's activities were widely exploited. Tieups were made with Ritz Carlton Hotel where the "princess" spent the night with her mother and at the Copley-Plaza, where she was entertained at luncheon and tea with her brothers, sisters and friends. She was taken on a shopping trip to all the large department stores and showered with many gifts. The gratis newspaper space totaled many thousands of lines.

Mayor Proclaims "Temple Week"

The Cincinnati campaign for the RKO Albee date was handled by Arthur Frudenfeld, division manager, and E. V. Dinerman, press representative of the RKO Theatres. The tieup made with the "Times Star" consisted of a drawing and coloring contest. Contestants from six to 16 were required to draw pictures of Shirley, either a head or full length, which they colored with either crayon or paints for cash prizes. The contest also attracted wide attention, especially since the Mayor of Cincinnati, James Garfield Stewart, issued a proclamation making the week beginning March 3d, Shirley Temple week in Cincinnati. Prominent stores carried displays of Temple styles.

Newark Contest Attracts Thousands

In Newark, the contest to pick a "Little Princess for a Day" was conducted by H. Russell Emde, division manager RKO Theatres, Bob Ungerfeld, RKO city manager for Newark, and Edward Sniderman, press representative. Arranged in cooperation with the Newark Ledger, a coupon was published daily, which contestants had to fill out and return to the paper with their photographs. Those who did not have any photographs were able to have their pictures taken by a Ledger photographer. The contest was open to all little girls in Newark and vicinity, between the ages of 8 and 11.

Out of this number, about 2,500 were picked to appear in the auditorium of leading department stores, where the "princess" was selected. The judges were Arthur Willi, chief talent scout for RKO-Radio Pictures; Charles Goetz, talent scout for 20th Century-Fox; A-Mike Vogel; Mr. Emde; Mr. Mandel; Peggy Foldes and John Cassidy.

The winner, an eight-year-old, was completely outfitted and received cash prize of $100. She was also feted for 24 hours with an overnight stay in the royal suite of the Robert Treat Hotel, christened an American Airway airplane at the Newark Airport, was given a shopping trip and luncheon, attended by many public officials.

New York Winner Resembles Temple

The contest in Greater New York was run differently, since in this area the winner was picked for bearing the closest resemblance to Shirley Temple, and the judging was from photographs submitted at the various RKO houses. John Cassidy and Peggy Foldes of the RKO home office publicity department, arranged for publicity tieup and made arrangements with the hotel, merchants, etc.

Winner was awarded $100 in cash, a complete Shirley Temple outfit and many gifts including Frances Hodgson Burnett's book which was autographed by the star. She was feted at the Waldorf-Astoria and her shopping trip took place at leading department store. There was an elaborate "Shirley Temple" window in cooperating stores and starlet pictures advertising the engagement at the RKO Theatres were also distributed. Winner was taken on a round of luncheons, theatre parties and receptions.

Brooklyn Holds Separate Contest

The newspapers carried stories and pictures about the contest with special cooperation from the Home News for Bronx, Washington Heights and upper Manhattan. This newspaper published daily the pictures of many of the contestants.

When hundreds of photographs were received in this contest from Brooklyn alone, it was decided to choose a "princess" in this Borough, aside from the New York winner, to cover Brooklyn and Queens. The Brooklyn winner received a cash prize of $100, a complete Shirley Temple outfit and numerous gifts. For the week ahead, cooperating store had a Shirley Temple window, and in their children's department a throne display with a big question mark—"Who will be Brooklyn's 'Little Princess?'" RKO Theatres division manager, Louis Goldberg and press representative Fred Herkowitz worked in Brooklyn with John Cassidy and Peggy Foldes on contest arrangements.

Another "Little Princess" contest was conducted in Westchester with a direct tieup with the White Plains Reporter, by Mr. Emde, Mr. Sniderman and Herb Jennings, manager of the RKO Keith's White Plains Theatre, with cash prize and gifts to winners. In New Rochelle, the same promotion was executed under the direction of Manager Joseph DiLorenzo.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

DOLLAR FANTASIES

"THE public is generally endowed with good common sense and with fairmindedness, but it is a fact that there is an appalling lack of information in the minds of our citizens, particularly as to the economics of business."

That was the keynote of remarks before the McGraw-Hill Public Relations Forum in Chicago the other day from Mr. Robert H. Cabell, president of Armour & Company.

"If we want the good will of people generally," Mr. Cabell continued, "we have got to tell our story, not in the form of self-praise but simply in the form of telling the economic facts."

This may well remind us that every now and then down the years, the higher motion picture judgment has been against what is known as "dollar publicity," while in field practise we have continued to have more and bigger dollar publicity, coming to climax eventually in 1938 in promotions which put dollar prizes ahead of the product for sale.

Someway a certain inertia of the easier way tends to dominate the story told. The public knows, for example, far too much about what the stars get and almost nothing at all of what is paid to artisans, labour and representatives of the average people in the making of motion pictures. The 282,000 workers in the motion picture industry, including exhibition, draw in annual salary or wages an average of about $1,300 each. Our public never heard of that, because the figure was just at this moment of writing an operation in long division out of the industry's trade association statistics. To the millions even $1,300 is money.

THE public also has a notion that the motion picture's money is spent in Hollywood. The fact is that some part of every motion picture dollar, and by far the bigger part, is spent in the same town where it goes through the box-office window.

A year ago the dollar publicity of the industry was about million dollar pictures. This year it is about two million dollar pictures. No matter what the cost of the picture, vastly more of the money spent ultimately goes into the pockets of workers, everyday people making things and doing things, people just like the customers, than goes to the "names" they read about.

The public conception of the economics of the motion picture industry is a fantasy. And that's how taxes are born.

A DEAD PROHIBITION

TWENTY-SEVEN years of prohibition of interstate traffic in prize-fight pictures have resulted only in the creation and nurture of an illicit business and various corruptions. Fight pictures are lawfully made and distributed only in the state of their origin, but no important, or rather conspicuous, fight fails of a considerable national distribution, mainly in lesser houses in populous centers.

Now at long last, repeal of the Sims act of 1912 is sought, by Senator Warren Barbour of New Jersey.

Years ago, Motion Picture Herald suggested the repeal of the law, contending that its existence did nothing to protect the screen, but did operate to maintain an under-cover activity which could only discolour the general repute of the medium.

Opposition to Senator Barbour's measure has not yet appeared. It can come from two sources, the beneficiaries of the status quo who will have as little like for it as did the bootleggers for repeal of the liquor amendment, and the perhaps remaining few who consider that law can be the remedy for everything.

WHILE the Sims bill of 1912 stands as the only direct enactment of federal censorship of the motion picture, it had its origins in other considerations, political and social pertaining to the indignant and sometimes violent state of mind of the many who were affronted that John Arthur Johnson, a blackman, should have become heavyweight champion. There was that about Johnson's repute and conduct, in what should have been his private life, which contributed importantly to the racial feeling. He stood in very different case from the Joe Louis of today.

The prize fight with its ready availability as an event of a fixed area for the cumbersome early cameras, and with its ready made publicity, too, was a decided factor in motion picture beginnings and evolution. It was the desire to be able to record a whole round of a fight that increased the capacity of the camera beyond its fifty-foot film beginnings. It was a prize fight, Corbett vs, Fitzsimmons, which was the subject of the first really long picture. It was released in 11,000 feet, and years elapsed before another as long was made.

THE motion picture theatre was only a few years old, however, when the masters of the Motion Picture Patents Company decided that the fight film was not a proper or finally profitable component of the program policy of theatres serving family audiences and the whole public. In consequence the Patents Company sought control of fight picture rights with a purpose of keeping the films out of wholesale distribution.

For the general screen, various newsreels have made furtive dips into pictures of the bigger fights, showing crowds, bits of the battle and never a knockout or decision.

Meanwhile melodrama has offered pretext for bigger and bloodier fictional battles on the screen than the ring has ever seen.

Due to the existence and functioning of the organized industry's self-regulative machinery the repeal of the Sims bill would not automatically release to the respectable screen a flood of fight pictures.

THE action of the Ontario board of censors in preferring for release an uncut version of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is another bit of evidence that, commonly, if anything is to be done about a motion picture it had best be done in the making. Once upon a time the anomalies and contradictions of sectional censorships were such and standards of production so various that it was common practise to make pictures with sequences which anticipated objection and detached readily. Complications of sound and the nature of modern picture structure would make that a more difficult practise today. Happily self-regulation has tended to minimize the need for or use of such procedure.

Procedure which contemplates after-treatment of pictures is make-shift, unprofitable alike to the industry and its customers.

—Terry Ramsaye

This Week

High Budget Films

There will be no skimping on production budgets this year, either on individual pictures or whole company programs. Tentative estimates, based on commitments made so far by production companies, indicate an approximate total of $176,050,000 to $183,050,000 will be poured out for salaries, wages, materials and the thousand other items which are entered on production cost sheets in the studios. The figure will represent an increase of from $23,000,000 to $30,000,000 over the amount expended in the 1938-39 season just ending. That the additional amount will go largely into increased expenditure per unit, meaning a greater variety of those pictures commonly classed as "A," is evidenced by the fact that fewer films will be made by the companies from which the estimates were gathered than they produced in the present season.

Statistics, in Hollywood's round numbers, are in the story on page 12.

Compensation Protest

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio have joined employer groups throughout the state in protesting against the decision of the Ohio supreme court, affirming the right of an employee to sue the employer for damages resulting from contraction of an allegedly occupational disease, not covered under the state workmen's compensation laws.

Aimed for are amendments by the state Legislature, to the present laws; and also, notice is taken in the service bulletin of the organization, of possible insurance against demands of employees, arising out of the new court ruling.

Television Launching

Program, production and merchandising plans and speculations on the future of television as an entertainment medium entered with increasing frequency and volume into the public prints as the date for the official unveiling of television to the public approached. Its sponsors, as has been announced, have conveniently set the launching to coincide with the opening of the World's Fair in New York. This week plans for extensive exploitation of the medium by large radio broadcasting companies and others were announced in New York and at the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Hollywood.

A general compilation of television news is on page 30, the SMPE convention story is on page 19 and Aubrey Flanagan's London letter on page 51 concerns development of the medium in Great Britain.

Australian Standard

The improvement in the moral quality of screen fare was lauded, and particularly in the case of product from the United States, but generally the Australian censor report just released by the Federal Government found 1938 to be a "barren and uneventful period," so far as technical and entertainment developments were concerned. The report was drawn by W. Cresswell O'Reilly, chief Commonwealth film censor.

For detailed account of the report and other Australian developments see page 52.

Universal's 58

At the first of three regional sales conventions Universal in Cincinnati this week announced plans for its 1939-40 season including a program of 58 features, four serials, 57 short subjects and the weekly newsreel editions. The commitments will entail a production budget increase of $5,000,000 over this year's expenditures. The feature total includes 14 westerns. Home office executives and sales representatives moved to Chicago during the week for the second meeting and left there this weekend for San Francisco where the final session will be held.

The announcement is on page 24.

Royal Newsreels

The Canadian Government having subdued its antipathy temporarily and obviously, to American motion picture equipment and newsreel cameramen, the arrival of the British King and Queen in Quebec on May 15, and their subsequent tour of Canada and visit to the United States, will be filmed thoroughly by American newsreel companies, under a friendly agreement in which there will be some pooling of resources and product, all of which contrasts strangely with the expensive rivalry of days gone by. The American companies also have agreed not to "special" any films. In New York this week, newsreel officials were examining, minutely, the details of the royal pair's itinerary. They noted a relaxation of restrictions in the actual filming of the pair, though cameramen must not go within 20 feet of King George and Queen Elizabeth, and "must not speak unless spoken to."

The story is on page 15.

End of Hearings

The Congressional committee hearings on the proposed Neely bill to prohibit block booking and blind selling in the film industry concluded this week on a note of optimism for the measure's opponents. Indications were that the majority of the committee members had been convinced by the testimony of the witnesses that the bill would serve no good purpose and would be harmful to the industry in general. Senator Sheridan Downey of California told Senator Matthew M. Neely, chairman of the committee and sponsor of the bill, that he would lead the fight against the measure if it ever reached the Senate floor. The Motion Picture Research Council, one of the leading proponents of the legislation, suggested officially that the industry's new trade practice code be given a trial in place of the proposed federal bill.

A summary of the final committee sessions starts on page 25.
